REVENUE OF G. T. R. CO

The President's Address to the Shareholders.

$12,740,000 IN DIVIDENDS.

Increase in Expenditure Correspondingly Large, But the Grand Trunk Will Derive Lasting Advantage — Greater Dividends to Come—Exception Taken to Chamberlain's American Trade Reference.

London, Oct. 10.—A well attended half-yearly meeting of the Grand Trunk was held yesterday at Cannon street Hotel. Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson presiding, said that although the company had received a very large increase in revenue, owing to the peculiar conditions of the times, there had been a corresponding increase in expenditure, which had gone far to neutralize any beneficial results which might have been expected under ordinary circumstances.

Some shareholders might feel disappointed because a more profuse distribution of dividend had not attended the good fortunes of the company, but the time would certainly arrive when they would not regret the expenditure of the last few years.

Since January, 1898, $2,548,000 had been distributed in dividends. The time of prosperity might recede, but he was satisfied the Grand Trunk would derive lasting advantage from the policy pursued in prosperous times, of which they were already reaping benefit. Referring to his recent visit to Canada and the United States, he saw no reason why the industries of both countries should not continue to develop.

Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson addressing the shareholders took exception to Joseph Chamberlain's statement that American trade was falling off. The impression which he brought home was that the industries of both countries were progressing and that under ordinary conditions there seemed to be no reason why their continued development should not be maintained "in spite of the ill-directed efforts of the combinations, which had introduced such disturbing influences in the natural course of business."

STRUCK THE ROOT OF HIS TROUBLE.

And His Lumbago and Urinary Troubles Vanished Once for all—He Tells His Story.

Campbellford, Ont., Oct. 5.—(Special).—That Urinary Troubles and Lumbago are the result of disordered Kidneys has been proved by James Atwell of this place. He had Lumbago and pains in the bladder, and in passing his urine would hurt him so as to almost cause tears to come to his eyes.

Speaking of his case, Mr. Atwell says:

"I think Dodd's Kidney Pills made a permanent cure in my case, but I will never be without them in the house. I had Lumbago and Bladder Trouble for years. I tried other medicines and a bandage prescribed by the doctor, but I could get no relief till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills and they cured me."

ANGLO-FRENCH PACT

New Treaty Will Work Tremendously for Peace.

TO COERCE RUSSIA AND JAPAN

An Important Understanding With Reference to the Peace of the Far East—Treaty Provides Generally For the Pacific Settlement of Disputes Between Britain and France.

London, Oct. 10. — The Anglo-French treaty of arbitration is expected to be signed by Foreign Minister Lansdowne and Ambassador Cambon at the end of next week. Lord Lansdowne is at present away from London.

The treaty will not positively bind the two powers to arbitrate all questions arising, but provides, generally, that, whenever possible, disputes shall be settled in this pacific manner, either by their submission to The Hague Arbitration Court or their reference to a special tribunal.

In addition to the settlement of an Anglo-French arbitration treaty, an important understanding exists between the Governments of the two countries in connection with the far East.

The Foreign Ministers of both countries have agreed to exert the utmost possible pressure to prevent their respective far Eastern allies, Russian and Japan, from coming to hostilities. This understanding is the most important factor looking to peace in the far East, and, taken in conjunction with the Japanese assurances to Russia, with regard to the evacuation of Manchuria and the general pacific tone adopted by the Japanese Government and its representatives abroad, it goes far to explain the feeling of security exhibited in London and several other European capitals in connection with the alarming reports emanating from China and elsewhere.

B. C. ELECTIONS.

Skeena and Revelstoke Conservative—Liberals Will Fight the Bye-Elections.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 10.—By the completion of the returns for Skeena, and the receipt of the official count for Revelstoke, it is seen that these two seats have gone Conservative, Mr. Clifford winning the former by 46 and Mr. Taylor the latter by 26. Accepting the announcement that Fernie will go to Smith on the recount, and that Davidson (Labor-Liberal) stands by the party which elected him, the House divides: Conservatives 21, Liberals 19, Socialists 2.

The Liberals will now bend all their energies to fighting the bye-elections necessitated to fill the vacant portfolios of Attorney-General and Provincial Secretary. The Government's hope is now to carry on under Mr. Hawthornthwaite, Socialist, as Speaker.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child become hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough begins, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance, and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

The first championship Rugby game to be seen in Peterborough this season, will be that to be played on Thanksgiving Day between the Wellesleys of Toronto, and the Peterborough team. The game should be seen by a large number as it is certain to be well contested. Both teams have on their line up some good players who should make an interesting game. This will also be the first time the new Burnside rules will be used in a championship O.R.F.U. game in Peterborough. The game will be played on the Nicholls oval, and in view of the efforts put forth by those interested in Rugby to provide interesting games here, the attendance should be large.

LACROSSE.

A most interesting contribution to the history of lacrosse in Peterborough is a photograph just brought to light by Mrs. Alex. Gibson, sister of Mr. Archie Moffat. The photograph in question is the property of Mr. Alex. Gibson, and is one of the Peterborough and Orillia lacrosse teams taken 19 years ago in Orillia preceeding a game played there, Mr. G. E. Whiten, of Peterborough, but at that time in Orillia, was the artist, and the picture, after nineteen years is almost as clear and bright as when it was first made. Below is the report of the game taken from the Examiner of August 1st, 1884. On the line-up of the Peterborough team will be noticed the names of some of the best supporters of the National game in Peterborough to-day, while some have gone to other places and made their mark there. R. Kelly, is the same "Kelly" who played on the shamrocks, and proved such a help to that team. H. Myers died just a short time ago, the report of his death appearing in the Examiner a few days back. Prominent in the picture referred to are the faces of Mr. H. LeBrun and Mr. Arch. Mowfatt, who were then as now strong supporters of the game. In the line-up of the Orillia team are three men who have since filled the office of Chief Magistrate of that town, one now being an M.P. The game is described in the Examiner of August 1st, 1884, as follows:—

At about 2 o'clock the representatives of the Peterborough and Orillia Lacrosse Clubs marched to the lacrosse grounds to the splendid music of the band. These grounds are large and level, and, but for one hollow in the north-east corner, would be perfect. Before beginning to play the teams of both clubs were photographed in a group by Mr. Whiten, the Orillia photographer.

Mr. G. Thomson, of Longford Mills, was chosen referee, and the teams took positions in the field as follows:

Peterborough—Goal, C. Rutherford; point, P. Myles; cover point, J. Henderson; defence field, M. Tierney, J. Howden, W. J. Scott; centre field, J. Sheehy; home field, R. H. Fortye, M. Halpin, R. Kelly, H. Myers, G. Giroux; field captain, J. Coughlin; umpire, E. Brown.

Orillia—Goal, H. Taylor; point, W. Edmison; cover point, C. H. Gunn; defence field, C. Meek, G. Armstrong, J. Tudhope; centre field, E. Moore; home field, G. Tudhope, R. H. Jupp, R. Henderson, W. Garrett, A. E. Lawrence; field captain, J. Ralston; umpire, W. Sherman.

The ball was faced by Sheehy and Moore, and Sheehy drew the ball. The play at once became animated. The rubber was several times close to the Peterborough goal, but it was soon taken out each time and the Orillia goal kept in danger. Finally a finely played game was ended by Giroux catching a drop from Sheehy and passing the ball between the stakes. Time, six minutes.

In the second game the Orillias made a determined effort to score a game, which was eventually successful, but their determination showed itself too freely in rough play. The game lasted 16 minutes, including two faces when the ball was thrown out the bounds. It was won for Orillia by R. Henderson putting the ball through the goal.

The third game was still longer, and rougher. Frequently the ball was close to the Orillia goal, and once it appeared to the spectators to have passed through, but the umpire decided otherwise. Towards the close of a half an hour the ball was held in the vicinity of the Orillia goal for some minutes, but it was sent to the other side and R. Henderson scored another game. Time, 31 minutes.

In the fourth game, Myers was placed in the Peterborough goal and Rutherford took his old position on home. This was a long and tedious game. Soon after it was commenced there was a very close call in the Orillia goal, and during the greater part of the time that the game lasted the ball was kept on that side of the field. The Peterborough boys played well, and Myles and Sheehy did excellent work, but fouls were frequent and rough play general. Scott, who had received several blows, finally had to leave the field and Moore balanced the teams by leaving the Orillia team. Ten minutes was lost then, and soon after three more minutes were lost by G. Tudhope being injured. Tudhope, however, went on playing. Afterwards Giroux was struck on the left eye with the end of a stick, in a scuffle near the fence, and he fainted. He was soon revived, but he had to leave the field. The game lasted one minute over an hour and was won for the Orillias by a shot from Jupp. Orillia thus won the match by three games to one.

Ran a Nail Through His Hand.

While opening a box, J. C. Mount, of Three Mile Bay, N.Y., ran a ten penny nail through the fleshy part of his hand. "I thought at once of all the pain and soreness this would cause me," he says, "and immediately applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm and occasionally afterwards. To my surprise it removed all pain and soreness and the injured parts were soon healed. For sale by all druggists.

MOUNT PLEASANT WEDDING.

Miss Lillian Morden Married to Mr. Joseph A. Agnew.

The first wedding to be held in the Methodist church at Mount Pleasant, took place on Wednesday last when Miss Lillian Maude Morden, daughter of Mr James Mordyn, was united in marriage to Mr. Jos. H. Agnew, of Ashburnham, the pastor of the church, Rev. R. V. Manter, performing the ceremony. The bride, who was attended as bridesmaid by Miss Carrie Sutcliffe, was very becomingly attired in a gown of white voile, with satin trimmings and white veil. She also wore a beautiful wreath of white carnations and smilax, and carried a bouquet of white carnations. Miss Annie Thexton acted as maid of honour. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. George Agnew.

The bridesmaid was attired in white organdie over pink silk, and carried pink carnations. The wedding march by Mendelssohn, was played while the bridal couple advanced to the altar.

The church was very attractively decorated for the pleasing occasion, the scheme of decoration being that of autumn leaves; an arch of leaves was also built over the pulpit, making a very pretty effect.

The bridal party, with a number of friends, after the ceremony partook of a dainty dejeuner served at the home of the bride's parents, the young couple leaving later for their new home on Munroe street, Ashburnham. As an evidence of the high esteem in which the bride is held by her many friends, a handsome array of very valuable presents was seen, among which was a marble clock, presented by the choir, of which she was a member. A family Bible was also given by the officials of the church, given because this was the first wedding ceremony to be held in the sacred edifice. The young couple start out on their married life with the best wishes of their large circle of friends.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

IT IS A QUESTION with some persons whether, or not, lawyers have a conscience—that's for the theological hair-splitters to decide; but a recent incident shows that their clients have a conscience — sometimes. In 1866 a lawyer, then in practice in Peterborough, but who has since gone up higher, not to another world—for that involves another theological question of possibility—but in the profession, prepared some business papers for a client. The fee was, contrary to legal precedent and the experience of clients, only $1.50. The client had only a five dollar bill, and the lawyer no change, so the latter said, "I'll take your face for it." Time went on nearly half of a century. A few days ago the lawyer received a letter recalling the incident of 1866, and containing a five dollar bill, the amount of the fee, $1.50, and accrued interest. The letter was from the Muskoka district, and signed "Pastor ——." Whether this was the work of conscience, is left to conjecture. The ex-soldier had evidently entered the ranks of the church militant, and the assumption is that for some years he has been preaching honesty, and came to the conclusion that it was time to practice what he preached. Hence the pleasant surprise to the lawyer.

• • •

THIS CASE is not the only instance of a lawyer in luck. Another lawyer went to hear Guy Brothers. With a friend he was in the preliminary crush at the doors. Thoughts of pickpockets, led his friend to say, "They can't 'go through' me; I've got my all here in my hand." The lawyer instinctively put his hand on his breast, where he carried his purse, containing only $16—his recent clients seemed to have their pockets buttoned—in the inside pocket of his overcoat. Arriving home he found that his purse and money were missing. He was naturally disgusted The loss of the purse, a new one, and the money, piled on top the agony of the show, conjoined with the unprofessional conduct of the robber, who, perhaps, in his ignorance of the identity of his victim, unconsciously transgressed the principle of the saying—"honesty among,"—but he did not lose any sleep. In the morning, hastening out to set the machinery of the law in motion — aiming doubtless at covering his loss in the shape of a fee, and, incidentally, to serve the interests of justice, he saw alongside the walk leading from the street to his residence, the lost purse, rain-soaked, but the contents intact. He had not worn his coat home from the show, but had carried it on his arm, and the purse had slipped out. A cynical friend remarked that it was surprising that a member of the profession, with so "deep" an interest in other people's pockets, should be so careless of his own.

• • •

THE CHEAP JOKES, and sportive insinuations of lax honesty, made at the expense of the legal profession are largely without point. Man for man, the lawyers are as honest as the average citizen. Whatever, as a profession, the law many have been in the past, its profits have been diminished, in some directions, pretty well to the vanishing point, especially in some departments of practice and the world has advanced so much in shrewdness that the average lawyer instead, as the joke runs, of preying on his client, is kept rather busy protecting himself from the enterprising expedents of others.

• • •

PETERBOROUGH is coming into pleasant prominence as an industrial and commercial centre—an attraction to tourists. A case in point is the announcement made in another column that the faculty of the School of Practical Science, Toronto, with about 250 students will make Peterborough the objective point of their annual excursion. Last year they visited Niagara Falls, the greatest attraction on the continent, and the scene of tremendous engineering operations. And the fact that Peterborough has been selected this year is a great compliment.

• • •

THERE'S A POSSIBILITY, however, of the people of Peterborough being a little too much self satisfied and complacent. With all our achievements in the past, with all our natural and acquired facilities for progress, we cannot afford to rest upon our oars. Eternal vigilance is the price of progress and pre-eminence. We must keep moving. We can't afford to fold our arms for a moment, or we may be left behind in the race, and subject ourselves to a rude awakening.

• • •

THE TRIP of the Trustees to see the workings of the schools elsewhere, showed that we have some ground to gain to be on a level with some other places. They found in some places the advanced idea of free text books successfully applied. They found in Hamilton a commercial course in connection with the public schools where bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting and the general subjects in keeping with modern commercial requirements were taught and pupils fitted for employment in business houses, with an expense of only 20 cents a month for books for a three years' course. The visiting members of the Board of Education found school buildings and equipments superior to Peterborough. With a first-class staff of teachers in Peterborough, corresponding buildings and equipments should be provided to afford a possibility of the best application of teaching ability and give the children of the town the chance they should have.

• • •

THIS IS MERELY touching the fringe of what might be mentioned in this connection. There is one thing now that might be referred to We are wofully in want of an opera house in Peterborough. Last night there was a concert in the opera house, when music of metropolitan calibre was presented. There was a small house, no doubt largely produced by the feeling that the old opera house is a thing of the past, for it is a more dismantled barn compared with which a town like Peterough should have in the way of an opera house. Sitting in a chilly hall, in such surroundings, with no scenic accessories, had a chilling effect both on the audience and singers. One of our most pressing wants is a good opera house or music hall.

• • •

THE LACK of an opera house is not the only one in a musical way. The public need a lesson in musical taste and concert amenities. Last night as stated above there was a small house to hear music of high order presented by musicians of known high class ability. A night or two ago an audience that could not have been packed in the opera house was present at the rink to assist at a decidedly mediocre minstrel performance. Then at last night's concert, many of the audience were late in coming, so delaying matters that it was nearly nine o'clock before the concert opened. Those who had the bad taste to be decently early had to sit for an hour, with no better employment than gazing upon the ghastly stretch of dead wall at the rear of the dismantled stage, blotched with half effaced, or defaced, attempts or remains of scenic painting. Late comers invariably interrupt the music and inconvenience and annoy the audience.

A LETTER in another column deals with the relations of church choirs to the public and the churches. This opens up a subject of live interest, and the Examiner will be pleased to have its columns used for the discussion of the subject, through the medium of brief, pointed, respectful, and not personal, letters.

THE EXAMINER is threatened with an attack of tuber-culosis. An Otonabee farmer brought in a mammoth potato, weighing about two pounds and a half, as a challenge to others to beat it. As a consequence, exhibits are pouring in, but none have yet come up to the mark. However, Mrs. Jas. Bradley, 625 Aylmer street, beats the record. She brought in a fine sample of well-matured potatos planted the middle of July, on the same plot from which an early crop had been removed. This is mentioned to give a black eye to Kipling, who dared to dub as "Lady of the Snows," a country with a climate and soil that can mature two crops of potatoes in one season. Retire Rudyard, and assume a sedentary position.

LECTURE ON VITOSOPHY.

Large Audience Addressed by Prof. Wm. Windsor.

Prof. William Windsor, LL.B., Ph. D., delivered his first address on Vitosophy in the Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening. He had a big audience, and was quite able to keep everybody interested. He defined vitosophy as the gospel of happiness, and declared that it was unnecessary to be poor, sick or unhappy. He termed poverty a disease. He said vitosophy was made up of three sciences—genetics, phrenology and ethics. He said he would only take time in the first lecture to open the book and display a few of the attractive pages. Electricians and scientists were unable to say what electricity was, but the professor said it was the drawing power of emptiness.

The speaker outlined an attractive programme of what he intended to do while in the town. Last night he proved very entertaining especially when he delineated the characters of two prominent citizens with wonderful accuracy and skill.

The professor makes a striking figure upon the platform, and his beaming countenance would indicate that he had really solved the problem of happiness.

He lectures again to-night in the same hall, his subject is "How to Become Rich," and is free to all.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

All the Public Works Items, Except One, in the Supplementary Estimates, Have Been Passed.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—Another busy day in supply enabled the House to dispose of 118 items in the supplementary estimates, amounting to $852,798. The largest batch were those respecting the harbors and rivers of Quebec, in the discussion of which there was little matter except of local interest. Hon. Sydney Fisher announced his hope last evening for the establishment of a national museum, and stated that an extensive exhibit of Canadian art would be made at St. Louis next year. Hon. Raymond Prefontaine announced that an inquiry would be made by an officer into the naval reserves systems in other countries. An interesting announcement was made in the morning that the amendment to the audit act would be withdrawn. This was regarded as a very contentious measure, and its withdrawal indicates that the difference between the Government and the Auditor-General have been settled. All the public works items in the supplementary estimates, except one small item for the Yukon, have been passed. The explanation of those, which numbered several hundred, had been a heavy task upon Hon. James Sutherland; but he has acquitted himself with unfailing courtesy under a fire of questions.

Marvellous 12-Years' Expansion.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—The report of the Committee on Agriculture was presented to the House yesterday. The committee find that the agricultural industry of Canada, both as regards actual production and the commercial value of the products, is in a very prosperous condition. For years it has been steadily expanding year by year, and especially in recent years has the expansion of production and export increased at a most gratifying pace. The report alludes particularly to the development in the exports of cheese, butter and pork in the last twelve years. The export value of all farm and food products from Canada were in 1890, $24,000,000, and in 1902 $80,000,000, showing a total increase of all farm products in the twelve-year period of $56,000,000, or making the export value of 1902 equal to that of 1890 multiplied by 3½.

Public Revenue For Three Months.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—The financial statement of the Dominion, which was issued yesterday, shows a total revenue for the three months ending September 30, of $17,833,104, and an expenditure of but $4,691,805. The latter item is considerably under the mark owing to the Auditor-General having held up several payments. The delayed expenditures will go into October or November, and considerably swell the statement for those months. For the period of last year the revenue was $15,187,867, and the expenditure $7,976,099. The revenue has grown very steadily, the receipts for the past three months being $2,645,787 in excess of the first quarter of the previous fiscal year.

In the Senate.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—In the Senate to-day, after a discussion on the principle of territorial autonomy, the bill to empower the Dominion Government to make advances to the Government of the Territories was approved. Sir Mackenzie Bowell declared that the time was ripe for the elevation of the Territories to provincial status.

The Representation Act was read a second time.

Senator McMullen made a bitter attack upon the Conservative redistribution of 1882 and 1892.

The Senate declined to sit to-day, and will resume on Monday night.

POLO IN CANADA.

A Fascinating Pony Sport That Takes Money to Keep It Moving—Where It Is Played in the Dominion.

Canada's prosperity has made the people's sporting tastes more expensive. Anybody can see that, writes Day by Day in Toronto News. Witness the hundreds of thousands of dollars spent in automobiles within the past two years, while the manufacturers are unable to keep up with the demand. In the same way the increasing popularity of polo is due to the fact that the men who follow the fascinating sport are able to pay the piper, and the polo piper is an expensive musician. No player can get along with fewer than three ponies, and a good mount is worth anywhere from one hundred to two hundred dollars. The animals must have speed, stamina and, if possible, some blood. Possessing all three, the pony is absolutely useless unless he is intelligent. He must know the game almost as well as his master, and it takes at least two years to train him. He must be good-tempered also, and game, for he encounters hard knocks once in a way. His owner's expenses for a season will run well into the hundreds of dollars. Saddles, horse furniture, mallets and his own personal accoutrements leave little left of a thousand dollars at the close of a season, for the polo player pays his own expenses. Like the golfer, he is a genuine amateur. He does not need to be anything else.

With the sole exception of yachting—when one owns his yacht—polo is the most expensive of field sports. Of course, when it comes to sports of all kinds, the noble game of draw poker has the others beaten a block. But poker does not give employment to half a dozen trades, as does polo. The saddlemaker, the bookmaker, the tailor, the dealer in ponies and the farrier all owe a debt to polo. Its introduction to Toronto will doubtless be followed by the formation of a club at London, which, next to this city, possesses the most enthusiastic lot of horsemen in the Province. For years, at considerable expense, the lovers of the saddle horse in that little town of not more than forty thousand maintained a pack of hounds, the nucleus being drafted from the kennels of the Toronto Hunt. It is certain that next year will see a polo club in London, in fact, Mr. Adam Beck, M.P.P., and M.P.H., is already taking steps towards its formation. In Hamilton Robert B. Harris, the city's most enthusiastic patron of all kinds of sports, is engaged in booming a polo club. An ideal ground could be laid out on the infield of the race course, and there is already a well appointed club-house in the neighborhood. Ottawa had a polo club ten years ago, but of late the game has not been played at the Capital. The club had the free use of Cartier Square, which furnished an ideal ground. It is in the centre of the town, and the members had many a good game until the removal of several players brought about the disbandment of the club. As everybody knows, the game has been played for decades in Montreal. Down in the metropolis they have all kinds of money, and the victory of yesterday was due to this very fact. Money buys ponies, and the better ponies won the day for the Eastern players.

Now that the public have had a taste of the game, there is not the slightest doubt that a match every fortnight throughout the autumn would draw as large crowds as lacrosse. Most Canadians love a good horse, even though they may never have crossed one. At Sunlight Park yesterday and on Monday they saw what training of the haut ecole order will make of one of these sturdy, well-buckled-up little beasts. The statement that the game is rough was amply disproved, for there was only one severe toss, and it was not more jarring than the lacrosse or football player receives. The visiting players were somewhat handicapped by the shortness of the grounds. The rules specify that the field shall be two hundred and fifty yards in length. The Sunlight Park is full forty yards short of this, but as the Toronto men were almost unacquainted with it, so far as match play goes, there was only a slight disparity in their favor.

WASTE AND REPAIR.

To carefully maintain the balance between the waste which is constantly going on in the human economy and the repair which nature is also constantly making under a healthy condition of the body, is something which should engage the earnest attention of every thinking man and woman.

The pace at which most people live in this twentieth century increases the waste immensely and now, more than ever before, nature requires the assistance of science in order to make good this waste. A judicious use of FERROL will do wonders in the way of restoring lost flesh and vitality. Ferrol is a concentrated medicinal food containing Cod Liver Oil, Iron and Phosphorous in a scientifically prepared emulsion, easy to take and easy to digest. FERROL holds the record for increasing the weight.

Amusing Story of Late Phil May.

An amusing story is told of the late Phil May, the famous English cartoonist, and a conjurer at the fair at Stratford-on-Avon. Phil was in the crowd which had gathered to watch the very clever gentleman who was wrapping up sovereigns and half crowns in pieces of paper and selling them for 2 shillings. The "sharp" had a beautiful face—such a face as Phil May loved to draw. So he sketched him furtively. But the gentleman saw him, and made a speech forthwith: "If that there celebrited portrit painter with the tight breeches on will 'and up the picter, the equally celebrited benefactor to 'comanity wot is givin' away quids for coppers will reward him accordingly!" he shouted.

Phil, with a twinkle in his eye, handed up the drawing. The conjurer was delighted with the sketch, and pinned it to the tailboard of his cart. With another preliminary speech he threw three envelopes and several half crowns into a piece of paper, screwed it up and handed it to the artist. "You'll be president of the bloomin' R'yal Academy some dye, young man," said he. "Here, catch!"

"A bargain's a bargain," said Phil, walking off with the packet of gold and silver.

He confessed afterward, when he opened the packet and found two pennies and a halfpenny in it, that it was the most entertaining commission he had ever been paid for.

London's Increase of Pauperism.

A notable increase in London pauperism is recorded. The total number of paupers in London was higher in the second quarter of 1903 than it had been in the corresponding months of the previous years since 1879, the rise in both the years 1903 and 1902 having been particularly noticeable. The number of indoor paupers in London, too, was higher in the last week of each month of the quarter than in the corresponding weeks of any of the preceding years on record, showing an increase of nearly 3,000 on the numbers in 1902. Altogether, there were 124,210 paupers in London at the end of June, 1903, as against 101,943 at the end of June, 1902. In England and Wales the total was 606,294, against 588,513 last year.

Any Sore That Will Not Heal.

Any Ulceration, Eruption or Irritation of the Skin is Curable by Means of

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

With all medicines taken internally there is more or less uncertainty as to the effect, because the condition may not be exactly as indicated by the symptoms, but if you have a sore or wound and apply Dr. Chase's Ointment and heal it you can see with your own eyes the definite results.

It is because of the certain results accompanying the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment that this great preparation has become to be standard the world over. If a dealer offers you any other ointment, does he do so on its merits, or does he not rather try to make a sale by saying "This is just as good as Dr. Chase's"?

As a matter of fact, Dr. Chase's Ointment is now so universally used that few dealers think of offering anything else when a cure is sought for eczema, salt rheum, old sores or piles. There is scarcely a town, village or side line in this whole land but can point to some cure in which Dr. Chase's Ointment has made a remarkable cure.

While this ointment is best known on account of its extraordinary success in curing the most torturing skin diseases and the most distressing forms of piles, it is also useful in scores of ways in every home for the cure of scalds, burns, wounds, old sores, chafing, skin irritation, sore feet, pimples, rough skin and everything for which an antiseptic, soothing treatment is needed.

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box of his remedies.

ALL ABOUT RONDEAU

IN THE COUNTY OF KENT, FROM A NATURALIST'S POINT OF VIEW.

Where Longman Was Born and Where the Late Hon. Senator David Mills Taught—A Charming Spot in Western Ontario—Rondeau Park a Veritable Paradise to the Botanist—Garden of Wild Flowers.

It is safe to say that no prettier drive exists in Ontario than that from the village of Morpeth, in Kent, to the lighthouse at the entrance to the Rondeau Harbor. At least nothing could be more charming from a naturalist's point of view. Morpeth itself is a quaint old-fashioned little village, which at one time was a thriving metropolis, the centre of trade for the district; but when the railroad came into Ridgetown, five miles away, it diverted the business from Morpeth, and for the last thirty years it has been dwindling away. Up to a year ago, however, the village contained two interesting buildings at least, which have associations of their own aside from any changes in the commercial world. One is the old school house, in which the late Hon. David Mills taught in his younger days, and which is now used as a residence. The other was the birthplace of Archibald Lampman, Canada's first and truest poet. This building was worth very little, only a few hundred dollars at the most, and was used as an English church parsonage. It could have readily been preserved at a small outlay, but no effort was apparently made to save it, and it was pulled down a year ago to make way for a safer building.

A mile and a half south of Morpeth is Terrace Beach, a group of summer cottages, and a favorite resort for the smaller picnics. An unused dock, rapidly rotting away, and an empty warehouse remind the visitor of the days when Morpeth was the shipping port of the district in the old times before the railroad came in. I took a turn through the warehouse and found it haunted only by bats and by the chimney swallows, who glued their nests to the walls of the grain bins.

From Terrace Beach the road runs along the shore of the lake for several miles, and a more charming drive than this it would be difficult to find. Within a mile or so of the Eau we come to a little village of rather picturesque fishermen's cottages, which lie along the side of the isthmus separating the lake from the Eau.

The left side of the Eau, you will notice at a glance, is covered with a dense forest, mostly pine and oak. It is a large, triangular peninsula, lying between the Rondeau harbor and the lake, and containing some thousands of acres. This peninsula, ten miles long by two or more wide, is what is commonly known as the Rondeau Provincial Park.

The sandy waste lying between the fishermen's village and the park proper is crossed by a gravel road, recently constructed by the Government. This road is being extended this season from the entrance of the park to the pavilion and picnic grounds. At the picnic grounds the Government some years ago constructed a residence for the park ranger, a dancing pavilion and a wharf, in addition to the usual conveniences for picnic parties. An effort has been made to stock the park with deer and pheasants, but for several reasons progress has been slow. The pens at present contain a good number of pheasants, and about a dozen deer are at wild in the park, while seven or eight more are confined in the enclosures.

Since the new road has been built through the sand the park has become a favorite picnic resort, and it is not an uncommon thing to find a couple of thousand people gathered together from all parts of the country. And at the Government wharf you are almost sure on picnic days to find a sailboat moored, in command of a characteristic darkey preacher, who in ferrying you across the water supplements his income by the kindred calling of "saving soles."

From a naturalist's point of view, however, the park has greater attractions than its picnics. First and foremost are its famous black squirrels, which exist here in thousands, and are growing more numerous and more tame every year. The red squirrels, the enemies of the black, are shot off, but all the other smaller rodents—the chipmonks, muskrats, woodhares, raccoons and woodchucks exist in considerable numbers. Every spring a trapper obtains the privilege from the Government of trapping muskrats and digging out the foxes, which are in danger of becoming too numerous on the upper end of the park.

Next to the squirrels the wonderful monster ant-hills claim my attention. The majority of these giant ant-hills are six or eight feet in diameter, but I have seen some as large as fifteen or twenty feet. Some of the ants in these communities are black, but the majority are red-headed, the Rondeau Park, it is claimed, being the only place in Ontario where this species is found. But, although they are exceedingly interesting, they are in some respects very disagreeable, for they seem to cover not only every square inch of the ground, but also the trunks of the trees, up and down which they make a perpetual procession. In the lower end of the park a great number of them have been dug out and fed to the pheasants in the pens, who are especially fond of the larvae.

To a botanist the park is a veritable paradise, and in the midsummer season of the year is a perfect garden of wild flowers. The sides of the road leading to the piers are gay with a profusion of wild bergamot, tick-trefoil, yellow St. John's wort, black-eyed Susans, and the delicate white flower of the spurge, while through the denser woods and along the marshes are to be found almost every species of flower that the season affords.

The trees on the lower half of the park are mostly scarlet oak, but a rarer species, the chestnut oak, is also found. On the upper end of the peninsula the pine predominates.

A rustic road runs through the woods from one end of the park to the other up to the piers, ten miles away; and a most beautiful drive it is, in spite of mosquitoes and deer flies, past great wild-grape vines forming "many a banner fair;" past the wild bergamot and black-eyed Susans, the purple beards-tongue and the flaming cardinal flower; past the monstrous hills of red-headed ants; past the famous twin pines, into the cool pine woods beyond, with lusty black squirrels frisking across your path and the hoarse scarlet tanager singing in the trees above, till you come to the open space at last and see the lighthouse of Erie Eau in the distance, standing out white and distinct against a background of water and sky and sand.

Once, indeed in your progress to the lighthouse, you turn aside from the path to a little open space in the woods. It is an Indian clearing, in which, when I first stumbled on it years ago, I found only an old log hut, a broken-down cutter and a lonely forsaken grave.

The Erie Eau, where the lighthouse stands, is simply the outlet of the Rondeau Harbor, where it joins the lake. In spite of the dust and sand, and the dirt, from the great coal hoist, it has grown rapidly into a considerable summer resort. The bird student who visits Erie Eau cannot but notice the great numbers of swallows, purple martins, chimney swifts, kingbirds and other flycatchers that hover over the spot, in pursuit of the flies that are attracted thither no doubt partly by the picnic supplies.

On an excursion day you may perhaps find that your darkey friend with the "sale box" has preceded you here from the other end of the Eau, and if you wish to continue your circuit around the Eau you cannot do better than take passage with him in the "Wave Crest." He takes you down the western shore of the Eau, and as he passes Shrewsbury, from which he himself hails, some three or four miles from the lighthouse, it would be worth your while to land. Shrewsbury is only a little poverty-stricken negro village, but even as such it is interesting, and if you happen to arrive on one of the feast days of the village, a threshing or a wedding, it is doubly so. As a thriving, growing, go-ahead town it had its own hopes in days past, as the farms for a mile around actually laid out and fenced off into streets and blocks destined never to be built abundantly testify. Its founders long ago had great expectations regarding the great trading metropolis which should some day rise on the marshy borders of the Eau. There was a momentary flutter of excitment, and speculation ran high. But alas! today the wild duck rides unmolested in its reedy harbors and the call of the night heron alone disturbs the silence of its rushy shores.

Between Shrewsbury and the Government dock, for which the Wave Crest is bound, the shore is, in a sense, uninviting—low, marshy, reedy—giving no indication of the rich farm lands behind it. But down in these same desolate marshes there is at least one spot of romance about it. In a little clearing in front of a clump of forest, by the side of a creek, which affords an outlet through the marsh, stands a small white dwelling, in which a solitary Frenchman lives alone, in company with his dogs, his tame quail, and the volumes of his favorite Moliere, a well-read and well-educated man, notwithstanding his loneliness, with an allowance two or three times a year from France to keep the wolf from the door—a lover of the birds and marsh flowers and the lovely Eau, but a mystery, and to me at all times the true habitant and genius of the waste.

The channel near the foot of the Eau is bounded by shoals, and more than once have I spent an uncomfortable and unprofitable hour in vain efforts to clear myself of an unexpected sand-bar; but to-day, being in the hands of the experienced ecclesiastic who conducts divine service of a Sunday in the dancing pavilion, and by long experience knows the safest channels, we arrive at last in safety at the Government dock.—Naturalist, in The Toronto Globe.

are simply kidney disorders. The kidneys filter the blood of all that shouldn't be there. The blood passes through the kidneys every three minutes. I would not be without the Tablets in the house and I think they should be kept in every home where there are young or delicate children."

A Brave Deed.

He was not much to look at. Just a rough lumberman wearing a rowdy hat on the back of his head, and clad in the ordinary camp costume, consisting of a heavy sweater, knee pants, coarse stocking and shoepock on his feet. But he proved he had a heart of gold, and was every inch a gentleman.

As he stood on the corner a runaway horse came dashing up the street, and people scattered right and left for fear of being run over. In the cutter sat a young child clinging convulsively to the back of the seat, white to the lips with fear, and in danger every moment of being thrown out and killed. Taking in the situation at a glance, the lumberman rushed out, and seizing a rein as the frightened animal passed, he brought it to a standstill. Then lifting the frightened child from the rig as tenderly as a mother would, he drew a large cotton handkerchief from his hip pocket and carefully wiped away her tears.

When he had succeeded in calming the little one's agitation, he lifted her in his brawny arms, and strode away. And it was a sight worth seeing to look at the pair going down the street, the child perched on the broad shoulder, while her face was wreathed in smiles.—Rev. H. Harper, Ph.D., in Montreal Star.

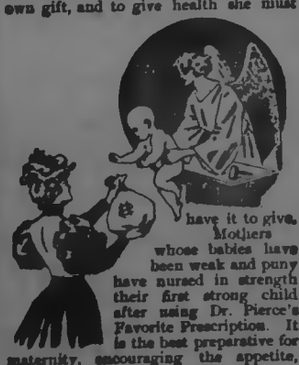
Bargain Babies.

If babies were for sale the most inveterate bargain-hunting woman in the world would not look for a bargain baby. She would want the best baby that could be bought, regardless of price.

Every woman naturally craves a healthy, handsome child, and her craving can be gratified if she will but remember that the child's health is her own gift, and to give health she must have it to give. Mothers whose babies have been weak and puny have nursed in strength their first strong child after using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the best preparative for maternity, encouraging the appetite, quieting the nerves and inducing refreshing sleep. It gives the mother strength to give her child, and makes the baby's advent practically painless.



"My wife had been sick nearly all her life," says Mr. E. E. Pricke, of Petersburg, Menard Co., Illinois, Box 367, "and after trying everything I could think of I made up my mind to try 'Favorite Prescription.' I got six bottles, which my wife took a tablespoonful three times a day, until the baby came. She felt better after taking the first bottle, and when baby was born he weighed nine and a half pounds. To-day he is six months old and weighs twenty-two pounds. He is as good a child as any one could wish. The doctor says he is as healthy as any baby could be, and also says the use of your 'Favorite Prescription' was the cause of such a healthy baby."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best and safest laxative for the use of delicate women.

How to Make Big Soap Bubbles.

It is great sport to make soap bubbles, but it is twice as much fun if the bubbles are big ones, strong enough not to break when they are floated to the floor. Bubbles twice as big as your head or as big as the biggest kind of football can be easily blown by any one who knows how to mix up the soap bubble material. To make these big bubbles take a piece of white castile soap about as big as a walnut. Cut it up in a cup of warm water and then add a teaspoonful of glycerine. Stir well and blow from a small pipe. This will make bubbles enough to last all afternoon, and this is all you really care to make in one day, says a helpful writer for the little ones.

A Winnipeg Joke.

A Montreal man recently in Winnipeg asked at a leading commercial establishment in that city for a Toronto directory in order to find the name of a Toronto firm. "We do not keep that directory here," said the Winnipeg man. "What—you do not in such an establishment as this keep a Toronto directory?" asked the Montreal man.

"Well, no; why should we? We have no particular interest in Toronto. Why, Toronto is side-tracked; not on the main line, you know."

This reply almost took the Montreal man's breath away, but the laugh came in all at once.—Montreal Star.

What the Commonwealth Receives and How Much It Spends.

In the Australian Commonwealth House of Representatives, Sir George Turner, the Treasurer, in presenting the budget, said that during the past year the Federal revenue was £12,105,878. The expenditure for the year was £3,901,759. The receipts for the coming year are estimated at £12,566,178. The estimated expenditure amounts to £4,320,449. Other expenditures under section 89, of the constitution, is estimated at £484,946. The total estimated expenditure shows an excess of £418,690 over that for last year. Kept His Eye on Him.

A gentleman took his little boy to church with him for the first time. Instructing the lad about his behavior, he wound up by telling the boy to keep an eye on him and do just as he did. When the contribution box was passed, papa dropped in a coin. Tommy saw his father's hand go into the box, and, remembering the advice, put his hand in also. When the box was passed by, the lad whispered out loud enough to be heard all round: "Say, papa, I got a quarter, how much did you get?"—Ex.

FOOD CREATED BY ELECTRICITY

(St. Thomas Journal)

The world's food supply may some day be furnished by electricity. We know that when intense electrical discharges occur in air nitric acid is produced, which, when neutralized with soda, potpotash or lime, furnished the indispensable nitrate for plant life. According to the London Lancet, electricity is apparently capable of producing food substances in a much more direct way than this. Given more carbon, hydrogen and oxygen in the simple association existing in carbonic acid gas and water, the current under certain conditions will bring about, according to recent researches, a re-arrangement of the elements, until at length carbohydrates are obtained.

It is stated that by merely passing a current of definite potential through soda water or water impregnated with carbonic acid gas a series of products is formed culminating in sugars. First of all is formed oxalic acid, next citric acid, until, at five volts and three amperes, grape sugar appears. If these things are true, no more wonderful nor astonishing discovery could be imagined. Carbonic acid gas and water are abundant enough throughout the whole world, and to convert these simple substances into complex foundstuffs, for the supply of which we have to look to far countries, by simply manipulating them with the electric current, surely promises to bring about one of the greatest revolutions in the history of the world.

But we have to reckon with nitrogen, the essential element of the proteid or flesh-forming portions of all food. Proteid is a vital constituent of all food and it has been said "without proteid we die." Is it possible, then, that proteid will eventually be built up by electrical means in the same way as is carbohydrate? In such case plant life will no longer be indispensible to man. Though at present proteid cannot be constructed directly, yet the production of nitrate by electricity is a source of stimulus to the synthesizing process of the plant, and therefore, electricity comes again to our aid in the production of food. As to the mineral salts of foods, they are again essential; but, then, of course, chemistry has long since furnished us with material for their production. It seems clear that the chemist and physicist are unfolding Nature's ways with a rapidity which is startling, considering that what they have already achieved amounts to saying that, given an abundant supply of chalk, air and water, the food problem is solved. The ingredients of the formulae are in truth plentiful enough, but what a dismal world when plant life is no longer necessary to the human race.

JOE CHAMBERLAIN'S TRADE PROPAGANDA.

The Situation in the Old Country Set Forth.

Our London Letter From a Former Peterborough Boy.

Actors' Association, Covent Garden, London, England, Sept. 23rd, 1903.

Editor of the Examiner, Peterborough, Ontario, Canada:

Dear Sir,—Events are occurring here every day which directly concern Canada, and more especially Canada's agricultural interests. When the Right Honourable Joseph Chamberlain—Joe, as everyone calls him here—sprang his fiscal bomb on the country everyone was aghast. "What!" they say, "Upset our free trade principles that Cobden proved years ago were the only means of insuring prosperity for the country?" Such a thing was absurd; it was more than absurd, it was criminal. To give preference to the Colonies, meant a tax on bread. To tax bread meant to place the 12,000,000 people of Great Britain who are already underfed, on the verge of starvation. Then the papers attacked Joe, and the labouring man said, "What's this about Joe Chamberlain going to tax our bread, we won't allow it." Not long ago I was in the Empire Theatre, London, and when his picture appeared on the biograph it was greeted with mingled hisses and applause. Then Joe took off his coat and began to work. The Birmingham Tariff Committee was set in motion, and already 16,000,000 pamphlets and leaflets setting forth Mr. Chamberlain's reasons for tariff reform have been despatched to all parts of the country. At present they are issuing nearly half a million of these pamphlets daily. But his opponents are not idle. There are four great organizations in London which are issuing free trade literature every day These deal mainly with the food tax question in its various aspects.

I read, the other day, a letter in a big daily paper, written by a labouring man. He pointed out in all sincerity that, "the more you pay for bread, the less you have for boots; therefore a tax on food is all wrong." Mr. Chamberlain pointed out that he had no intention of raising the cost of living. If a small tax is placed on wheat it will be borne mainly by the foreigner. Moreover the present tax on sugar, tea, tobacco, etc., can be reduced; thus counterbalancing the effect. Then again by preference to the Colonies we knit the Empire, and by encouraging Colonial agriculture we will eventually make the Empire self-supporting, which is a great consideration in case of war. In return the Colonies are to give preference to British manufacturies which would mean more work and wages for the workers in the factories at home. These, together with innumerable other arguments in favour of protection of British manufacturies, and preference to Colonial food stuffs have begun to set the masses thinking, and already the trend of thought is beginning to lean toward Mr. Chamberlain.

He has resigned his position as Secretary to the Colonies; but this is to give him a freer hand to work out his theories. Mr. Balfour the Prime Minister, is in sympathy with his proposals, but a great many of the Government are against them, so the inevitable result will be a general election in the near future. It will be fought out on the fiscal question. Army Reform will also be an important plank. Joseph Chamberlain is the strongest man in the Empire to-day, and if brains and energy can do it, he will win.

In my own humble opinion, I think that preference to the Colonies would mean an immense advantage to Canada.

Kind regards.

Yours faithfully,
WALTER H. CLUXTON.

ANTHONY ROWE'S FATE.

Unless His Counsel's Appeal to Higher Court Succeeds.

Toronto, Oct. 10.—Anthony Rowe in court yesterday declined to recognize Thomas Smith, the Londoner who came across to clinch the prisoner's identity. Smith was the only witness, and his part was a formal identification before the magistrate. The documents in the case were voluminous, including the original warrant granted at Guildhall on application of Allen Gilbert Bartholomew of the Bewick, Moring Company for the apprehension of Rowe for theft of three cheques of £3,125, £4,606, 8s and 9d, and £2,022, 4s and 1d. Rowe, it was said, had absconded and been missing from their offices since December of last year. The cheques are alleged to have been taken while being transferred from one bank account to another. The total defalcations are still placed at $750,000. Mr. Godfrey of Robinette & Godfrey gave notice that a writ of habeas corpus would be applied for to a higher court, being virtually an appeal from the magistrate's order, by which Rowe will, on Tuesday next, be formally committed on three charges—theft, fraudulent appropriation and forgery.

BLOCKADE OF ST. CLAIR CANAL.

Steamer Glidden Sank in Such Way as to Close Channel.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 10.—A steamer blockade that will mean the loss of many thousands of dollars at the fag end of the marine season is on at the St. Clair Flats Canal, one of the three crucial points in the line of Great Lakes traffic. All traffic between upper and lower lakes of vessels loaded to draw more than 10½ feet must be suspended. The huge bulk of the steamer Jong N. Glidden reposes in the narrow ship canal prohibiting practically all passage. The Glidden, bound down about 9 a.m., yesterday, was rammed in the bow by the fleet trust barge Magna in tow of the steamer Empire City, and sank immediately in such a position as to leave but 75 feet of the 292 foot width of the channel clear.

A Peculiar Find at Chemong

Mr. P. Cameron, of Buffalo, N. Y., has been spending his vacation at Chemong. One day of last week Mr. Cameron was taking a stroll along the beach, north of the bridge, and he came across a peculiar stone. On it was the words "Turn Me Over" in a clear black type. Mr. Cameron scarcely knew what to do. However, he did as anybody would do—he turned the stone over, and on the other side he saw this inscription:—"Wise Business Men get their Signs Painted by F. Cook, Peterborough's Exclusive sign Painter. 'Phone 119."

DECLARE WAR TODAY

Morning Post's Correspondent Sends Startling Report.

JAPAN TO BEGIN HOSTILITIES

Russian Fleet Has Cleared From Port Arthur—Reported That Japanese Are Landing Troops at Masanpho, Corea—Field Guns Embarked at Port Arthur For Unknown Destination—Warlike Rumors.

London, Oct. 12.—The correspondent of The Morning Post at Chefoo, telegraphing Oct. 10, says: "It is stated that the Japanese have decided to declare hostilities to-morrow on the expiration of their ultimatum to Russia. The Russian fleet has cleared from Port Arthur. It is reported that the Japanese are landing troops at Masanpho, Corea. There are strong indications that Germany favors hostilities on the ground that it would enable her to extend her sphere of influence in China.

"A number of field guns were embarked at Port Arthur yesterday for an unknown destination. All the available force of workmen is employed on the fortifications."

Another despatch to The Morning Post from Chefoo, dated Oct. 11, 8.50 p.m., says: "The situation is unchanged; all is quiet at Port Arthur. Hostilities are still believed to be imminent. It is asserted that the Russians have fixed Friday next for their commencement."

Russian War Party Controls.

London, Oct. 12.—The gloomiest impression has been created in Europe by the latest developments in the Far East. Both Japan and Russia continue to profess the most peaceful intentions, while pushing forward the most active preparations for war. It is beginning to be believed that they protest too much. Their words and acts both suggest that each, regarding the conflict as inevitable, is manoeuvring to place the onus of initiation on the other.

This is especially true of Russia. It is becoming more evident every day that since M. Witte, the former Finance Minister, who is now practically the Premier, was kicked upstairs, the war party has been in control of the Russian policy, and no better opportunity is likely to arise from their point of view for the settlement at arms of all issues with Japan. The internal distress of Russia threatens a crisis which a patriotic foreign war would probably avert or postpone, and the Manchurian situation has reached a point where Russia must have a fresh excuse for the non-execution of the pledges which she never intends to redeem. Britain is still urging peace on Japan.

Manchuria Not Evacuated.

Yokohama, Oct. 12.—Baron Von Rosen, the Russian Minister to Japan, is still awaiting instructions from his Government in the matter of negotiations now proceeding between Japan and Russia.

A Russian regiment from Baikal military district is reported at Feng-Chang-Teng (Feng-Chenn-Ting), 150 miles west of Pekin and 90 miles from the Russian frontier.

Manchurian Convention Lapsed.

M. Lessar, Russian Minister to China, has announced that the Manchurian convention has lapsed.

The Manchurian convention between Russia and China was April 8, 1902, and according to it the evacuation of the three Manchurian provinces was to be carried out in three successive periods of six months from the signing of the convention.

A note from M. Lessar was appended to the convention declaring that "if the China Government, notwithstanding the assurances given it, violates any provision of the convention, the Russian Government will not hold itself bound either by the terms of the Manchurian agreement or by the declarations previously made in connection with the matter, and will be compelled to repudiate any responsibility and consequences that might result therefrom."

China Refused Under Pressure.

China was to be permitted to maintain whatever force she thought necessary in Manchuria after the evacuation of that territory. Russia also agreed if Tien-Tsin was restored to the Chinese within the first six months, to evacuate New Chwang at the time, this restoration was made. The allies turned over Tien-Tsin to the Chinese Aug. 15 last year. The convention was to have been ratified within three months, but this was not done. Last month M. Lessar in his note to the Chinese Foreign Board promised to begin the evacuation of Manchuria Oct. 8, provided China accepted several new conditions, which China has refused to do, under pressure principally from Japan and Great Britain.

May Back Out Yet.

Berlin, Oct. 12.—Russia and Japan act as though either would fight if the other should hold immovably to the position taken up in the last exchange of communications—this is the actual situation as understood officially from reports received from the German legation at Tokio. Yet, this mutual attitude, with hostile preparations by both countries, is still regarded here as not excluding an honorable arrangement. Neither Government has gone so far that it must fight or be humiliated, but either Cabinet, by a single step, can put the other in that position. This delicate balance may, of course, be violently disturbed any day, though no ultimatum has yet been thrown on either scale. It is believed here officially that war, should it occur, would be between Russia and Japan alone, and that neither England nor France would be involved.

Royal Swindler Savin in Jail.

London, Oct. 12.—The man who was once a candidate, secretly favored by Russia, for the throne of Bulgaria, has again returned to Russia in charge of the police. His name is Savin. He began life as a cornet in the Guards of St. Petersburg. In a few years he dissapated a fortune of $5,000,000, and began a career of high-class swindling. He operated in every country on the continent, the members of various royal families in Europe being among his victims.

Young Thresher's Terrible Death.

Wardsville, Oct. 12.—Saturday afternoon while a threshing gang were at work on the farm of Frank Davis, just east of this village, a terrible accident occurred by which Willie Miller, aged nineteen years, son of Albert Miller, lost his life. He was engaged on the scaffolding throwing down sheaves when he slipped and fell into the cylinder, his right leg was drawn in and terribly mangled, and the hip bone broken. He died in twenty minutes.

Has on the Rocks.

New York, Oct. 12.—The Norwich line passenger steamboat City of Worcester was blown on the rocks off Execution light, near City Island, in Long Island Sound Saturday night, and lies in a dangerous position seven miles off shore.

Mrs. Dwight Moody Dead.

East Northfield, Mass., Oct. 12.—Mrs. Dwight L. Moody, widow of the evangelist, died Saturday afternoon at her home in this town. Mrs. Moody was born in England about 60 years ago.

Cutters on Strike in Rochester.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 12.—Four hundred clothing cutters went on strike Saturday afternoon for an eight-hour day. Only seven of the 32 factory owners signed the eight-hour agreement.

CABINET COMPLETED

New Marquis of Salisbury Succeeds His Father.

AS LORD OF THE PRIVY SEAL

A Number of Minor Offices Have Been Filled—Winston Churchill Says Chamberlain Movement Will Burst Tory Party—Mr. Chamberlain Says He Cannot Add Anything to His Speech Even For Canadians.

London, Oct. 12.—The interesting announcement was made last night that the new Marquis of Salisbury will enter the Cabinet as Lord Privy Seal, the office held by his father until his retirment last year, when Mr. Balfour assumed the post.

The Cabinet now consists of 19 members. The appointment of Lieut.-Col. William Bromley-Davenport, M. P., as Financial Secretary to the War Office, is confirmed.

Secretary to the Admiralty—Ernest G. Pretyman.

Junior Lord of the Treasury—Lord Balcarres, M.P.

Treasurer of the Household—Marquis of Hamilton.

The new Civil Lord of the Admiralty, Major Lee, was British military attache with the United States army in the Spanish-American war, and military attache to the British Embassy at Washington, 1890-1900. He was Parliamentary private secretary to Arnold H. Forster, Secretary to the Admiralty, in 1901.

Will Burst Tory Party.

London, Oct. 12.—(C. A. P.)—Winston Churchill told the Oldham Conservative Association that the Chamberlain movement will bring the Tory party clattering in ruins to the ground.

The Canadian Associated Press asked Mr. Chamberlain: "Can you see your way to give a message to the Canadian people at this very interesting juncture of events?" He replied: "I cannot add anything to my speech."

The Economist does not believe that Canada will put herself in thrall perpetually to British manufacturers and resign aspirations to build up her own industries. "Then," says The Economist, "the entire scheme of Mr. Chamberlain falls to the ground."

Opponents Begin to Shriek.

The Saturday Review says things are going well; the opponents of the new policy begin to shriek; they laugh no more. Alfred Harmsworth, a redoubtable opponent, thinks it well to come to terms with a strong man like Mr. Chamberlain.

The Scotsman, in publishing some interesting diagrams showing the result of the present Canadian preference, says: "The British percentage of dutiable goods stayed the downward rush in the aggregate, but particular lines availed nothing by the duty. Free Canadian imports and American were all but in complete command of 70 per cent. of the trade last year. The United States is the natural storehouse. Canada will provide for herself until her resources are developed. The unalterable geographical contiguity between Canada and the United States puts us out of court, but the preferential tariff will do much to obviate this."

Attitude of Colonies.

Arnold White in The Sunday Sun says: "Canada as a nation prefers separation to the sacrifice of her fiscal independence. The eastern portion is subject to the canon law of the Church of Rome. The tie of Empire is slender and is maintained only by the tact of the Governor-General and the Canadian Ministers, rather than by the active sentiment of the French inhabitants of English connection."

The Outlook, dealing with the attitude of Canada, Australia and South Africa towns to Mr. Chamberlain's project, says: "These future powers within the Empire cannot longer be left in a state of semi-tutelage. We need them regularized if they are to be held for the work of Empire. Mr. Brodrick at the colonial conference made a false start. He tried to lead the colonial statesmen by the impossible Bismarckian road. 'You cannot progress that way,' replied the colonies, 'we are Imperialists, but not the Downing street pattern.'"

Will Address Chamberlain Meetings.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—Hon. George E. Foster, ex-Finance Minister of Canada, leaves this week on a vacation trip to England. When there he will "say something from the standpoint of a Canadian" on Mr. Chamberlain's platforms, he having had many invitations to speak in the old country.

M'F'G.'S TRAIN STRUCK HANDCAR.

Men Who Jumped Hit by Flying Pieces—William Woodhouse Dead.

Winnipeg, Oct. 12.—When nearing Rat Portage Saturday afternoon a handcar with seven men on board was struck by the C. P. R. special train, carrying the manufacturers' excursion eastward. The men jumped, but the handcar was thrown from the track and struck three of the men, Wm. Woodhouse, sixty years of age, an English army pensioner, had his skull fractured and legs broken, and was almost instantly killed. Theo. D. Anstine and J. Kenylube, aged 55 and 45 respectively, both foreigners, have broken thighs and other injuries, but will probably recover. The injured men were taken to the hospital at Rat Portage. Woodhouse leaves a widow at Ostersund. Owing to a heavy wind the men did not hear the special train coming. Before reaching Rat Portage the manufacturers collected a purse of nearly $1,000, which was left with the Mayor to be given to the afflicted families.

Shot Dead While Hunting.

Tobermary, Oct. 12.—Saturday while hunting J. G. Hopkins, a respected farmer of this place, accidentally shot himself. He was two hundred yards from the rest of his party. The dogs were running some game close. His companions heard the report of his gun, hurried to see what he had shot, and found Hopkins lying on his back. The contents of both barrels of his gun had struck him in the chest, death being instantaneous. Deceased leaves a wife and family of several children.

Shot in Pittsburg.

Hamilton, Oct. 12.—W. J. Crowley, 72 West Murray street, was informed yesterday that his son, William, a musician, well-known in this city, had been shot in Pittsburg. He was not furnished with any particulars of the tragedy.

R. H. Savage Dead.

New York, Oct. 12.—Richard Henry Savage, the author and soldier, died in Roosevelt Hospital last night, as the result of injuries received Oct. 3 when he was run over by a wagon in this city.

MORE PROTECTION FOR WOOLENS.

Both Sides of the Situation Presented.

Once again is heard a loud cry to Mr. Fielding, calling for increased duties on woollen goods. The Canadian woollen industries, it is claimed, are rapidly being ruined; they cannot compete with British factories; mills are closing down on every hand. Now, while there is a degree of truth in these contentions, there is also a large amount of falsehood; and, unless the two are carefully separated, we believe that the spirit of partisanship which prompts the mixing of the two ingredients will result in serious injury to the interests which it is desired to benefit. One of the high-tariff newspapers recently published a list of twenty-six woollen mills in this country which had closed down, either permanently or for an indefinite period. The paper in question, however, did not mention that of these mills the majority had closed down long before the preferential tariff was ever heard of, or that in some cases they were shut up simply because their plants had been removed to other places. What is a Minister of Finance to say to an argument so clumsily expressed?

Plain truth obliges us to declare that three-fourths of the woollen mills of this country have nothing to complain of whatever. Some of these are running night and day; others are adding to their capacity. Broadly speaking, the blanket, carpet and knitting sections of the trade are fairly prosperous.

On the other hand, it cannot be distinguished that the manufacturers of tweeds are in a sorry plight. They are butting against the British manufacturers in an industry of which they are the acknowledged masters; the one trade in which Britons have not lost ground. And our mills are doing it under peculiarly discouraging circumstances. The Canadian manufacturer has to send thousands of miles for his machinery, besides which he has to pay duty on it, cost of packing, freight, etc.; he has to pay interest on his investment at say 6 per cent. against 4 per cent. in Britain; his labour costs on the average 40 per cent. more than that of his rival, and his increased expenses taken together certainly offset the protection he now receives, 22 1-3 per cent. But besides this, there are other considerations. The British tweed manufacturer can make the finest goods in the world; but he is also an adept at turning out, with a beautifully finished appearance, shoddy stuff that is not worth the labour of making it up. Then again, under the preferential tariff, not only British but German goods creep into this market by the most ingenious of methods.

Now, an increased duty of something like 10 per cent. net, or perhaps five cents per pound net, would doubtless do a good deal to remedy this state of affairs, and we think the tweed makers are entitled to consideration. But to make the need for a higher tariff on tweeds a casus belli for a general increase all round is altogether different, and calculated not only to defeat its own purpose, but, what is more to be regretted, to postpone the granting of relief to the class which really needs it.—Monetary Times.

THE COUNTRY FAIR.

Synchronous with premature morning frosts, with the gradual russetting of the trees' foliage in early fall, appear the signs in agricultural communities of friendly rivalry. The voice of the noisy huckster, or Aunt Sally man, the cackling of no less vociferous prize poultry, the rattling step of the trotter, are heard in the land; while, wending their way along the rural roads are seen many-shaped wagons, resplendent with their loads of mammoth, high-coloured vegetables or luscious fruit. It is the day of the country fair. Despised by some because its erstwhile importance has been diminished by the ever-growing city of Provincial Exhibition, we confess to a lingering love for the good old smaller institution. The country fair fills a real need in many a district, to whose people it presents the only chance in a year for reaping the benefits of competition among themselves. By its aid they are enabled to grasp an idea of the common and individual progress made from year to year, and from its inspiring influences springs the wish to do constantly better in their life work.

And there is a sentimental interest as well. How often is the spot now occupied by all the joyous, noisy concomitants of a country fair trodden by the feet of the very man who, in the days long past, hewed a way through the primeval forest, the first beholder, perhaps, of the former wilderness; the representative of that noble race of pioneers who, daring all, keeping one aim through obstacles enough to daunt the bravest, have more than any other class of men, perhaps, helped to make our fair Dominion what it is to-day. May the eyes of the first settler continue long to gaze on the final reward of his persistence, and may the days of the fall fair be long in the land!

ENFORCEMENT OF THE FRUIT MARKS ACT.

Retailers Beginning to Understand Scope of Act.

The Inspectors of the Dominion Fruit Division are now devoting special attention to the enforcement of the Fruit Marks Act. Several prosecutions have taken place in Ontario, all of which resulted in convictions, and several are now pending in Nova Scotia. These are mainly for marking inferior fruit No. 1.; although there is such a large amount of first-class fruit in the country packers still persist in trying to palm off inferior fruit as No. 1.

Mr. W. A. McKinnon, chief of the Fruit Division, says that retailers are beginning to understand the scope of the act much better that formerly, and appear well aware of the existence of the law and of the fact that it is being enforced by inspectors. They also understand the fact that it is at the disposal of any private citizen. A prosecution is now pending in Toronto by a private citizen against a retailer who is said to have disclaimed responsibility. Only a single basket is involved but it is clear that if individuals do not protect themselves in the case of single baskets, they are not likely to do so at all, as ninety per cent of their purchases are of single baskets. It will be the policy of the Department to hold retailers more strictly to account in the future for the packages of fruit which they pass on the public. If the retailers themselves do not complain when they find dishonest packing it is because they are willing to share in the fraudulent profit. Of course the original packer will always be prosecuted when he can be discovered, but that will not excuse the retailer.

DWYRE'S CORNERS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Plowing is all the rage now since the last rain fell and many of the people have a fine lot of it done.

Threshing is now coming into force and those who have the job over speak highly of their abundant crops.

Dr. McDonald passed through here last week on his way to Beaver Glen.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Will Dalton, who has been confined to his house for the past three weeks is quickly improving and we hope to soon see him in our midst once more.

Mr. Andy Allen and Miss Bridget Quinlan were the guests of Mr. Edward Herr on Sunday last.

Mr. John Christie has erected a new windmill for the purpose of running a chopper, pulper, fanning mill and for pumping water.

Things are beginning to look like winter in this town as all the milk-men have their mittens and overcoats on in the mornings.

Cannot do Without it.

Once Dr. Chase's Ointment becomes known, it is indispensable in the home because of the scores of ways in which it can be used. While this ointment is best known as a positive cure for eczema, salt rheum, itching piles, and the most torturing diseases of the skin, it is also unapproached as a treatment for unafed, irritated skin, pimples, blackheads, poisoned skin, scalds, burns and sores of every description.

When Struck by Lightning.

Some kind of a memorial should be presented to the engineer of the cogwheel railway on Pike's Peak. Being struck by lightning and stripped of his clothing, he calmly attired himself in a Navajo blanket and continued his duties. We must ever feel an unquenchable admiration for such sprightly unconcern. It is quite customary when struck by lightning to make a great fuss about it; to demand the services of everybody in the neighborhood for our resuscitation, and to bring the business we may have had in hand to a dead standstill. Who would not have insisted on being taken to the nearest hospital in the Navajo blanket instead of calmly rising and wrapping it about him with the statelinass of an Indian orphan, and taking up his task as before? How could resist the impulse to be put to bed and to relapse with ever-multiplying detail just how it felt to be struck by lightning, what he thought, what he saw, and his present symptoms. Not so this engineer. He grunts indifferently, "Hoist" and, rubbing himself again, takes his seat in the cab. Such things are worth gold medals.

A Peculiar Find at Chemong.

Mr. P. Cameron, of Buffalo, N. Y., has been spending his vacation at Chemong. One day of last week Mr. Cameron went aking a stoll along the beach, north of the bridge, and he came across a peculiar stone. On it was the words "Turn Me Over" in a clear black type. Mr. Cameron scarcely knew what to do. However, he did as anybody would do—he turned the stone over, and on the other side he saw this inscription:—"Wise Business Men get their Signs Painted by F. Cook, Peterborough's Exclusive sign Painter. 'Phone 119."

Y.M.C.A. BOYS ENJOY BANQUET

Annual Event was Held at the Hall on Friday Night.

For several days past the Boys' Social Committee of the Y.M.C.A., has been busy making great preparation for the 2nd annual banquet, and Friday night the result of their efforts was shown, when at 6.30 over 80 boys sat down to a gorgious banquet. Mr. Medill, the President, was in the chair flanked by Rev. W. L. Armitage and Rev. J. A. Wilson along with officers of Boys' Department.

After singing the doxology the boys started to "dig in." Many wonderful appetites were exhibited and the storage powers of some of the boys were remarkable. As the time went by the food went down, and when the number of these labouring under difficulties had been reduced to one or two, Mr. Medill called on Mr. Armitage to address the boys. After complimenting the boys on the possession of such fine rooms, the reverend gentleman delivered a stirring patriotic address. This was listened to with great attention and the boys learned something worth remembering.

Here the chorus of the Maple Leaf was sung, and then Mr. Aplin was called on.

The physical director, Mr. Aplin, gave a short speech on Physical Exercise and then performed what he termed a pleasant duty. Calling on Melville Robinson and Gordon Thornton to come forward. Mr. Aplin presented the first named with a handsome silver medal representing outdoor junior championship, and to G. Thornton a beautiful silver Y.M.C.A. button. Amid great applause the two lads received their prizes and sank out of sight.

After this pleasing function Mr. Wilson was called on and he also delivered an address reminding the boys of Canada and Canada's resources. The boys paid apt attention throughout.

Mr. Armitage pronounced the benediction and the happy and contented group dispersed.—Com.

Charm of Circus Life.

"There is a charm, a fascination, about circus life that is hard to explain," said a veteran showman. "It is surely a tough existence, being buffeted about from place to place, often without a bed to sleep in, and the wages, outside of the salaries paid to a few stars, are amazingly small. Yet when a man once gets a taste of circus life it's all up with him. He's never good for anything else and never wants to be. There must be a germ, bred of the sawdust, that gets into the blood. Take the canvasers, for instance. They get $20 a month and their board, which usually consists of bad grub and an impromptu bed in a wagon. Often they don't take their clothes off for weeks at a time. There's one fellow I know who possesses more than the average intelligence. He has a trade, and during the winter he makes on an average $30 a week, and yet just as soon as the circus season opens he throws up his job and goes out on the road with a show for $20 a month. In almost every town the management is besieged by men and boys who want to go along, and many of them offer their services for their board. It's a queer state of affairs."

Profitable Politeness.

"The custom house nuisance can be greatly abated by a knowledge of foreign manners," says an experienced traveler. "Politeness is not absolutely thrown away even on American custom house officials, and in France it is three-quarters of the battle. The whole secret of getting easily and comfortably through the douane lies in the greatest possible politeness and the least possible appearance of flurry. 'Pardon, monsieur; si vous aurez la bonte,' etc., is a safe prelude to a happy and rapid release. If you have nothing to declare say so at once and at the same time begin to open your bags and boxes. In nine cases out of ten this will have the effect of making the officer close all your boxes without a word. A little joke, too, about the absurdity of importing anything into so perfect a country as France or some such mild jest will often go far to put you on the best of terms with the douanier. But above all things be polite. Remember that in France you cannot lay it on too thick."

Small Plastic Judgments.

That insects think in the belief of a French neurologist who has been making careful observations of ants and bees. He thinks that, between the ideas of the naturalist who regards insects as mere automatons and those of the man who treats them as humanly intelligent, there is a happy medium of common sense, and this he has tried to attain. His observations teach him that, although most of the acts of insects can be explained by instinct, there remains what he calls "small plastic judgments" by which they avoid difficulties and steer their way beyond dangers. The digestive faculty of bees especially and their wonderful memory for places one hardly be explained on the theory of automatism.

Plowing the Water.

A curious method of producing platinum is reported to be practised by the inhabitants along the Tura river, in Tomsk, Siberia. They call it "plowing the water." A raft is constructed, and fastened to it is an inclined gutter of boards, which at its lower end is provided with an iron plow. While floating down the river they scrape or plow its bottom. The sand scraped out falls into the gutter and passes into a tub filled with pine boughs, upon which platinum is deposited. The sand of the Tura river and its tributaries is so rich in platinum that even this primitive production is profitable to the peasants.

"Two Pictures at Once."

A well known landscape painter was busy "dashing in" the colors of a sunset. The tints were hurriedly conveyed from tube to palette and from palette to canvas, for the artist was anxious to catch the effect.

A rustic standing by observed the operation for a little while and then remarked: "Ah, you be a-painting two pictures at once. That's clever." He paused a moment and then blurted out, "I like that picture best, the one you've got your thumb through!"—London M. A. P.

FOR PURER ELECTIONS.

Names Not Disposed to Disfranchise An Elector Who Does Not Vote—Passing the Supplementaries.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—Saturday sittings of the Commons were devoted to consideration of the composite bill to amend the Dominion Election Act, and to the passing of further supplementary estimates in Committee of Supply. One of the principal provisions of the bill was that which makes it compulsory for an elector to vote under penalty of being disfranchised for six years. There was strong opposition to this clause, and after a protracted debate it was deemed best not to have it enacted this session. Other sections of the bill will be looked into by the Minister of Justice and put in shape for enactment before prorogation.

In the course of the discussion in Committee of Supply, upon the appropriation for telegraph lines and cables, the Finance Minister announced that wireless stations would be established at Cape Race and Sable Island. Mr. Prefontaine announced that he intended to establish an office of the Marine Department in Montreal, also that the new system of lighting the channel between Montreal and Sorel will be installed by Nov. 1. It is hoped by this system to have the St. Lawrence so well lighted that it can be navigated as safely by night as in day time. The sum of $60,000 will be expended to start eight new fish hatcheries in the Maritime Provinces. Items for Marine and Fisheries to the amount of $865,000 had been passed when the House rose at midnight.

CASE AGAINST KENNEDY.

Prof. Ellis Has Completed His Analysis—Chicken Bag Found.

Brantford, Oct. 12.—Prof. Ellis, Provincial Analyst, has completed his report on the clothing of the prisoner, Joseph Kennedy, accused of the murder of little Irene Cole, and it is now in the hands of Dr. Ashton. It will be read at the preliminary hearing of Kennedy on Tuesday. Dr. Ellis refuses to say what the result of his analysis is.

The police have recovered the bag in which it is said Kennedy carried off the chicken he procured from Mrs. Howe of Darling street. The bag was found by some person in "The Willows," not far from the spot where the body of Irene Cole was discovered. It was handed over to the police, who submitted it to Mrs. Howe, who identified it as the one Kennedy carried.

The preliminary hearing will be concluded on Tuesday. There are several more witnesses to be called.

Kennedy is apparently well and healthy at the jail and gives himself very little concern about what is happening in the outside world.

TO POISON NATIONAL GUARDSMEN.

Wholesale Attempt to Get Rid of Them Near Cripple Creek.

Cripple Creek, Col., Oct. 12.—The fact that a wholesale attempt to poison the garrison of National Guardsmen at El Paso was made on Thursday has just been made public, the officers having kept it quiet pending a still hunt for the perpetrators. Every man in the command, sixty-eight in all, was taken violently ill, dropping in their tracks when on duty. Prompt medical attendance checked the symptoms, however, and all are now recovering. It is believed that poison was placed in the water tank of the mine used for domestic purposes. Many miners were also poisoned.

Died as His Boy Passed in Parade.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—As his son, a member of the G.G.B.G., passed opposite him down Yonge street, near Carleton, in the garrison parade yesterday afternoon, Ephriam Lee, a well-known citizen of Toronto, but lately residing in Todmorden, sank to the sidewalk, struggling between life and death. He was taken into Jaffray's drug store, and died before medical aid could reach him. His wife was with him at the time and his son was called out of the parade. Heart disease was the cause of death. Mr. Lee was fifty-three years of age and was born near Crewe, Cheshire, England. He leaves a wife, two daughters and two sons to mourn his loss.

J. H. Parnell Meets Defeat.

Dublin, Oct. 12.—The bye-election for member of Parliament in South Meath Saturday resulted in the return of David Sheehy, the regular Nationalist candidate and nominee of the United Irish League. He was opposed by John Howard Parnell, City Marshal of Dublin, and brother of the late Charles Stewart Parnell, who ran as an independent Nationalist and represented those opposed to John Redmond and William O'Brien. Mr. Sheehy received 2,245 votes and Mr. Parnell 1,081.

St. Mary's Man Killed.

St. Mary's, Oct. 12.—Word has been received that Andrew Kelly, an old St. Mary's boy, but now of Pittsburg, Pa., and who is a member of the police force of that city, while trying to quell a disturbance on Sunday night, was shot by a revolver in the hands of one of the persons who was raising the disturbance, Mr. Kelly dying shortly after from the effects of the revolver bullet. He was about 26 years of age.

Hurt at a Fair.

Woodstock, Oct. 12.—While judging horses at the Ingersoll Fair Saturday, P. Farrell, sr., proprietor of the Royal Hotel, this city, was struck on the back of the head with the end of a buggy shaft, knocked down and trampled upon by his horse, after which the rig passed over his body. He is in a critical condition.

Given One Year.

Guelph, Oct. 12.—William Keough was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison on Saturday for highway robbery.

Knew Dr. Chase in 1867.

One of Dr. Chase's oldest patients in Canada is Mr. G. W. Parish of Sturgeon Bay, Simcoe Co., Ont., whom he cured of kidney disease in 1867 by means of his now celebrated Kidney-Liver Pills. Mr. Parish writes that he does not think there is any medicine half so good and that he always keeps Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the house as a family medicine.

Will Involve 80,000 Wage Earners.

Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 10.—Owing to the fact that the leading clothing manufacturers of this city have refused to grant a reduction from nine to eight hours per day, which was demanded recently by the United Garment Workers' of North America, there will be declared at noon today in the clothing industry of Rochester, a strike that, directly and indirectly, will affect 30,000 wage earners. Those directly concerned are the clothing cutters.

Caught in Driving Belt.

Fergus, Oct. 10.—A very sad accident occurred in the power house of the electric light plant about 8 o'clock last evening. While Ed. Thomson, assistant engineer, was working about the engines, he became caught in the driving belt, and was instantly killed, the body being badly mangled. Thomson, who was about 35 years of age, had but recently moved to town from Guelph. He leaves a wife and several children.

Dead Body Found.

Hamilton, Oct. 8.—The body of a man about 45 years of age was found lying beside the T. H. & B. tracks, near the Summit Station, yesterday morning. The clothes would indicate that he had been in fairly comfortable circumstances. There was nothing by which he could be identified.

The Wisdom of the Birds.

Come with me for a walk to-night, Mr. Worldly Wiseman, somewhere where we can get away from the row the insistent trolleys are making. Turn your face up to the black vault and the twinkling stars and listen. Hear that? "Peep-peep" issues from somewhere up in the vast and lonesome spaces of the highs. That means, Mr. Worldly Wiseman, that somewhere up there the birds are flying south to escape the winter's coming chill.

How marvelous the instinct that tells those birds that winter is coming, tells them long before we feel the touch of the frost. How marvelous the instinct that guides them to their destination in the sunny south. They have no maps, no compass, no guide, they have not even daylight, for there they are though you can't see them, flying confidently forward through the midnight darkness to the land of perpetual summer.

Listen awhile with me, Mr. Worldly Wiseman, listen awhile and then bow your diminished head, for those little birds are doing what you with all your learning, could not do. Put you into the darkness, with no paths before you, and you would wander in a circle till daylight, or else sit down and wait for the dawn. You think you are wise, but have I not shown you your knowledge is less than that of one of those feathered atoms calling cheerily to its fellows through the starry spaces of the night!—H. D. O., in Toronto Star.

The Speed of Piano Playing.

Quite astonishing is the rapidity of working of brain and nerves in modern piano-playing. At the Conference of Musicians, in Dublin, it was shown that the ordinary player must cultivate the eye to see about 1,500 signs per minute, the fingers to make about 2,000 movements, and the brain to perceive 1,500 signs while issuing 2,000 orders. In a part of Chopin's "Etude in E Minor" the rate of reading must reach 3,950 signs in two and a half minutes. This is equivalent to about 26 notes per second, and as the eye can receive only about 10 consecutive impressions per second, it appears that in very rapid music the notes must be read in groups instead of singly.

HUNDREDS HOMELESS

Great Suffering at Paterson, New Jersey, and Elsewhere.

MANY BRIDGES WASHED AWAY

Buildings Float From Their Foundations and Railway Tracks Are Submerged—Damage to Mill Property Very Heavy, and Thousands of Men, Women and Children Will Be Without Work.

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 12.—For nearly 48 hours Paterson has been at the mercy of the Passaic River. The waters reached a height sufficient to cut the western from the eastern half of the city. Two bridges above the falls remain and three bridges below the valley of the rocks still stand, but it is impossible to reach them. Seven other bridges in the city have been carried away, at a loss of a million dollars. The inundation of the low-lying districts of the city has resulted in inconceivable damage to property.

The flood, however, is beginning to recede. A number of buildings fell yesterday, and many others have been rendered untenable. Spruce street hill is falling away, and only a little more than two feet of dirt and stone separate the falls basin from a big race through which millions of gallons of water are rushing. The gate house is in a very weakened condition and is liable to go if Spruce street hill breaks much farther.

Boatmen Rescue Hundreds.

All day boatmen have been at work rescuing people from the flooded districts. The suffering in the first and second wards has been intense, as it was almost impossible to reach the residents there. Several hundred persons were removed from houses which had been completely surrounded by the flood, and which were ready to collapse.

A dozen more of these houses later tumbled in and floated away.

The damage to mill property is heavy, parts of plants and stock having been submerged. Thousands of men, women and children will be without work for a long time, and it seems altogether probable that this flood will cause to the city of Paterson a greater direct loss of money and property than the disastrous fire of two years ago. The great loss then was six million dollars, with $4,000,000 insurance. The present flood loss is estimated at more than two millions of dollars, with no insurance.

Five Hundred Families Homeless.

Five hundred families are homeless, but many are being cared for in public halls and at the city armory.

The city of Passaic passed a sleepless night, it being feared that the Dundee dam would give away. That would have relieved the river at Paterson at the expense of the city below. Fortunately, however, Dundee dam is still intact. The suffering in Wallington and Duttonville has been very great, as no relief has been able to reach these places. All through this district houses and outbuildings, together with a great quantity of dead stock, may be seen floating about.

300 More Without Homes.

Duttonville, which is a suburb of Paterson, was practically wiped out of existence by the breaking of the Westbrook dam, and three hundred families are homeless. At midnight a dozen persons were unaccounted for, and it is believed that all but two have been drowned.

Twenty-five bridges are down in Passaic and Sussex Counties on the Susquehanna Railroad.

The maximum height of the flood was two feet over the flood of 1902, and last night it was practically maintained.

Pompton Lake Dam Bursts.

The dam confining the waters of Pompton Lake, N.J., burst. The iron bridge across the Ramapo River was carried away, and a hundred houses below it were partly submerged. The engine room of the Pompton Iron and Steel Works was demolished. Pompton was isolated, as no trains could pass. The lake, which was emptied, was more than a mile long and half a mile wide.

Nearly all the cities in Northern New Jersey were partly flooded. Electric light plants had to close, schools could not open and many houses were wrecked.

Miles of outlying territory in Brooklyn were submerged, and the only means of communication was by hastily constructed rafts. Schoolhouses were closed and fire engines answering alarms had their fire extinguished by the flood. Five horses were drowned in one of the city streets. Part of the retaining wall at Brooklyn Heights fell.

Only One Bridge Standing.

Easton, Pa., Oct. 12.—The Delaware River began to recede about midnight and continues to fall rapidly. The Lehigh and the Bushkill are still backed up for miles and everything along their banks is flooded. It is impossible to estimate the loss, but in Easton and towns on the Delaware, it will take millions of dollars to replace bridges and repair the general damage. Only one bridge, from the head waters of the Delaware to Easton, is standing.

Landslide a Mile Long.

Buckingham, Que., Oct. 12.—A landslide occurred yesterday morning about 5 o'clock, at Poupore, Que., twelve miles north of Buckingham, completely blocking the Lievre River for a distance of a mile and running the Little Rapids lock. The river here has fallen eight feet, and is still going down.

Two Men Lost.

North Sydney, Oct. 12.—The Gloucester schooner Bohemia reports the loss of two men.

Note Your Weight.

By noting your increase in weight while using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you can prove for a certainty that new firm flesh and tissue is being added to the body This is the severest test that can apply to any treatment and proves the superiority of this great restorative prescription of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author.

PETERBORO GIRL SUICIDE.

Filled Pockets With Stones and Tied Weights to Her Body.

Sarnia, Oct. 12.—Saturday morning an Indian from Sarnia Reserve reported to Chief of Police Marvin that a white woman had been found drowned in the river a couple of miles below Sarnia. Chief Marvin and Coroner Hayes went to the place and viewed the body. It was clearly a case of suicide, as the young woman had taken off her underskirt, filled it with stones and tied it together at the top and bottom, and then tied it to her waist. She also had tied a handkerchief around her head covering her mouth and then waded into the river into deep water and was drowned.

The residents of the vicinity where the body was found, say they saw the young woman Friday afternoon walking along the river road, but no person seems to have seen her while making preparations to end her existence.

It appears that the same young woman was in Sarnia Friday. During her stay she called at the House of Refuge and had a talk with Mr. Kelly, the manager, enquiring if any help was needed. To Mr. Kelly she gave the name of Ella Hubbell, and said she had escaped from an asylum. On being questioned by Mr. Kelly she suddenly became uncommunicative and left the place.

Cut His Own Throat.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Oct. 12.—W. S. Hacker, a wealthy resident of Wilmot, Prince County, was found near this city yesterday with his throat cut. He had been suffering from nervous depression, and was brought here for treatment, but eluded his wife. He took his own life.

Suicide in Ottawa.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—Daniel McDonald, aged 42, an employe of J. R. Booth, residing at 261 Rochester street, committed suicide by shooting Saturday, while in his son's bedroom. Despondency is given as the cause of the act.

RITCHIE'S REASONS.

Ex-Chancellor of Exchequer Speaks at Croydon.

AFRAID OF UNITED STATES

Statement That Britain Must Not Offend American Republic Because of Canada Arouses Resentment—A Scene of Disorder Consequent Upon His Saying That Mr. Chamberlain Had Been Inconsistent.

London, Oct. 10.—Mr. Ritchie, M. P. for Croydon, and until recently Chancellor of the Exchequer, delivered a speech last evening on free trade and the reasons for his resignation at Croydon Town Hall. A large Liberal element was present. The reception of Mr. Ritchie was decidedly unharmonious, consisting of cheers, hoots and counter cheers for Joseph Chamberlain.

Mr. Ritchie said that if any suspected to hear a denunciation on his part of his late Cabinet colleague he was happy to disappoint them. He believed Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain were actuated by the highest motives. Mr. Chamberlain's administration of the Colonial Office had been the most successful of the present generation.

The speaker later precipitated a scene of disorder by declaring that Mr. Chamberlain had been inconsistent because he upheld free trade, while president of the Board of Trade, and protection while Colonial Secretary.

Mr. Ritchie said that as Chancellor of the Exchequer he could not consent to a fiscal revolution and overturning of the policy of his Conservative precedessors on the strength of the arguments of Mr. Chamberlain.

The former Chancellor of the Exchequer felt convinced that the present preferential proposals were merely an entering wedge "which would ultimately land the country in the same position as Germany, where food taxes had driven the workingmen to socialism."

Continuing, Mr. Ritchie asserted that one of the principal questions to be considered was the attitude of the United States. This country must try to guard against giving the United States any cause for resentment, which would result in her punishing Canada.

The speaker resumed his seat amid a scene of disorder, but a vote of thanks was ultimately carried amid shouts and hoots.

Mr. Ritchie revealed that he was solely responsible for the abolition of the shilling duty on wheat. He said that Mr. Chamberlain proposed to retain the duty and give the colonies preference, but the speaker, believing that it was only the beginning of a larger scheme of protection, threatened to resign if the duty was not forthwith abolished.

The London Daily Mail scores Mr. Ritchie's fear of offending the Americans, owing to the Canadian preference, saying it is the pusillanimous gospel of little Englandism, which could hardly be better condensed.

The German View.

London, Oct. 10.—(C. A. P.)—The Frankfurter Zeitung says: "The practical carrying out of Mr. Chamberlain's proposals is a possibility we must seriously reckon with in our international commercial policy or be confronted with a new phenomenon: shall we see the colonies retain their independent fiscal policies and enjoy preferential treatment at the hands of another country and vice versa? While both parties claim from outside States the most favored nation treatment, they decline to grant anything in return, as in the case of Canada, which has shown that this policy does not work. England's declining exports are due not to the hostile tariffs, but to the backward state of their industry and to the want of modern commercial methods."

GOES TO FIFESHIRE.

Mr. Chamberlain Talks From Car Platform to Large Crowds.

Glasgow, Oct. 10.—Joseph Chamberlain started yesterday morning on a day's visit to a friend in Fifeshire, and was welcomed on his arrival at Cupar by a large crowd. He made a short speech, which captured his hearers, remarking that no one had benefited more than himself in the past by the support of the working class, and he hoped to have the same confidence and support in his present undertaking.

Hugh Bell's View.

London, Oct. 10.—Hugh Bell, managing director of the large firm of Bell Bros., Middlesborough, on the future of the British iron trade, said Mr. Chamberlain had not a single item of information to justify the opinion that he had formed. Similar forecasts of ruin of the iron trade had been current for three centuries.

South Africa For Chamberlain.

Cape Town, Oct. 10.—Interviews with leading men in the South African colonies show that the general trend of opinion strongly favors Mr. Chamberlain's Glasgow program.

One of Tupper's Points.

London, Oct. 10.—The London Globe says: "One of the veteran (Sir Charles Tupper) colonial statesman's points ought not to be missed. The Canadian Liberal politicians have ceased to be convinced free trad[ers]

Can Canada Do It.

London, Oct. 10.—A member of the Corn Exchange of Dublin doubts whether the colonies can supply the demand of the nation for foodstuffs, but he says that difficulty will in time be met principally by a rapid influx of American farmers into Canada.

Freeman's Journal calls Mr. Chamberlain "a separatist." It says "he practically invites Canada and Australia to secede unless his ideas are adopted by the people of the three Kingdoms."

The Congress of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, in session at Peterboro, representing most of the railway employes of the United at Kingston, passed a resolution favoring a thorough inquiry before any scheme of retaliation is adopted.

SENATOR BALLANTYNE.

Western Dairymen's Association Will Urge His Appointment.

Brantford, Oct. 10.—At the directors' meeting of the Western Ontario Dairymen's Association yesterday, a resolution was adopted urging the Government to make Thomas Ballantyne a Cabinet Minister in charge of the dairymen's interests, after first calling him to the Senate. A deputation was named to urge Premier Laurier to appoint Mr. Ballantyne a Senator. The annual convention will be held in St. Thomas on Jan. 12, 13 and 14, 1904.

Now There's the Rub.

London, Oct. 10.—(C. A. P.)—The long argument in the Alaskan case over, the question now naturally arises, "What is going to be the issue?"

That the Canadian case has been most ably prepared and most vigorously pressed is universally acknowledged, while the oral argument of Sir Robert Finlay and Christopher Robinson, K.C., could not have been more comprehensive and effective.

TOOK A STRAW VOTE.

Interesting Experiment in a Restaurant.

An advertising agent, representing a prominent New York magazine, while on a recent western trip, was dining one evening in a Pittsburg restaurant.

While waiting for his order he glanced over his newspaper and noticed the advertisement of a well known dyspepsia preparation, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; as he himself was a regular user of the tablets, he began speculating as to how many of the other traveling men in the dining room were also friends of the popular remedy for indigestion.

He says: I counted twenty-three men at the tables and in the hotel office I took the trouble to interview them and was surprised to learn that nine of the twenty-three made a practice of taking one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal.

One of them told me he had suffered so much from stomach trouble that at one time he had been obliged to quit the road, but since using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets had been entirely free from indigestion, but he continued their use, especially while travelling, on account of irregularity in meals and because like all travelling men he was often obliged to eat what he could get and not always what he wanted.

Another, who looked the picture of health, said he never ate a meal without taking a Stuart Tablet afterward because he could eat what he pleased and when he pleased without fear of a sleepless night or any other trouble.

Still another used them because he was subject to gas on stomach, causing pressure on heart and lungs, shortness of breath and distress in chest, which he no longer experienced since using the tablets regularly.

Another claimed that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was the only safe remedy he had ever found for sour stomach and acidity. He had formerly used common soda to relieve the tablets were much better and safer to use.

After smoking, drinking or other excesses which weaken the digestive organs, nothing restores the stomach to a healthy, wholesome condition so effectually as Stuart's Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the natural digestives, pepsin, diastase, which every weak stomach lacks, as well as nux, hydrastin and yellow parilla, and can be safely relied on as a radical cure for every form of poor digestion. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Servian Appeal to Britain.

London, Oct. 12.—M. Yevitchitch, the Servian Charge d'Affaires, is still unrecognized officially by the British Government, which suspended diplomatic relations when King Alexander was murdered. On Thursday he made a direct appeal, saying: "Every other nation in Europe has recognized Servia. Here, however, I am living the life of a hermit. We are a young and rising nation and feel freedom now for the first time. This surely entitles us to sympathy."

Kruger Keeps Strong.

Amsterdam, Oct. 12.—The three principal heroes of the Boer cause in South Africa are well. Mr. Kruger is still at Hilversum, and is enjoying excellent health. The ex-President keeps up a regular correspondence with the Boer leaders in South Africa. He proposes to go to the Riviera for the winter. Mr. Steyn is said to be still making progress toward recovery. Dr. Leyds lives surrounded by luxury at Utrecht, but is very little seen.

Vanderbilt Lines Reduce Men.

New York, Oct. 12.—Orders are issued whereby 15 per cent. of the employes in the car shops, repair shops and round house of the entire Vanderbilt railway system will be informed to-day that their services are no longer needed. One thousand five hundred men will be thrown out of employment with hardly a minutes notice, and a saving of nearly $9,000 a day will be effected.

The Horrors of War.

Uskub, European Turkey, Oct. 12.—Official despatches regarding the recent engagement between Turkish troops and insurgents at Kalmakchalan state that 100 insurgents were killed, including four chiefs. A band of 80 revolutionaries was destroyed near Nervokop Wednesday. Two villages, each of 600 houses, have been bombarded and burned.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. David Harum, To night.

There are two different versions of this play, on route, one played by W. Crane and the other written and played by Harry Lindley. The latter has been produced by him all over the Pacific slope in cities like Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, Victoria, Vancouver, etc. The version differs in treatment from the other and has been pronounced superior as regards humour, etc. There are several deviations and interpolations; noticably one in the introduction of the stable boy (Little Mystic) who has elaborated and created a new role; the other in change of text. Of course the Deacon and the adjuncts of the farm yard are there, whilst his good-hearted sister and the rest of the habitants are not absent. This is the last appearance of the Company. We noted on Saturday evening that the Company has put in new electric footlights and made other improvements. The price is as usual, 10, 20 and 30 cents.

POTATOES GROW A SECOND CROP.

Mr. Jas. Bradley of Aylmer Street, Makes a Successful Experiment.

Indications of the almost unlimited possibilities of our climate continue to be evidenced. The latest is that of the fact that two crops of potatoes have been grown from the same soil in one year. Mr. Jas. Bradley of 625 Aylmer street, after having taken up the first crop about the middle of July, planted, as an experiment, one peck of potatoes, and the result of her industry is a product of five and a half pecks of as good tubers as one could wish for.

At the time of planting these potatoes, Mr. Bradley had little faith in the experiment proposed by his wife, but the result has been of such a satisfactory nature that Mr. Bradley may be pardoned if she makes use of the usual woman's retort, "I told you so!" Her faith has been abundantly rewarded.

TRAVELLED IN SOUTH AMERICA

Mr. Jack Ward, who is now on a Visit in Town.

Mr. Jack Ward of Brampton, is a guest at the home of his uncle, Mr. W. J. Scott, Water street, for a week, and is relating to his friends some of his experiences since his last visit here, some ten years ago. Mr. Ward was for some years a member of the Southamptonshire Regiment of England, and as such served in the war in South Africa for about ten months, afterwards going to India with his regiment. After remaining there for some time he bought his discharge, and since that time, about a year ago, has been travelling through South America, having visited Brazil and a number of other countries in that continent. He has but lately returned to his home in Brampton, bringing a valuable store of information relating to the different countries he has visited, and a young tiger, which is a source of great wonder and interest, especially to the younger element of his parents' neighbours.

HOUSE TO HOUSE CANVAS OF PETERBOROUGH TOWN.

The Sunday School Association's Excellent Scheme.

The Sunday school Association of the town, has set on foot a scheme which, it is felt, will meet with the approval of the citizens of the town generally, because of the benefits which will be derived from it. The association has undertaken a house to house canvas of the town, which will be effected by the municipality being divided into sections, each section being canvassed by two members of a church. Every house will be visited, and every church will help in the visitation. The main object of the canvassers will be to ascertain what church, if any, every several family throughout the town attends, in order that families may be brought into contact with the clergy and members of the respective churches; and the children under, as far as possible, the influence of the Sunday school. On the completion of the canvas the names and addresses of the families who attend such and such a church will be given to the rector or pastor of that church, who will thus be able to visit persons whom he previously had no idea came under his pastoral supervision.

The president of this organization is Rev. J. A. Wilson, of St. Paul's church, the Vice-Presidents, Rev. A. H. Brace, and Mr. T. W. Robinson, the Secretary, Mr. A. J. Johnston, while the superintendents of the various Sunday schools constitute the executive.

The scheme is an excellent one as can be readily seen, and should it meet with its deserving success it will be most beneficial to the inhabitants of the town and a great help to the clergy.

EAGLE LAKE FISHING CLUB ON ANNUAL TRIP.

Most Successful Expedition in History of the Club.

Six members of the Eagle Lake Fishing and Hunting Club returned on Friday night from Lake Kotchecum, where a week had been spent on a most successful fishing expedition. Those returning were Messrs. H. LeBrun, J. Crane, Robert Fair, A. H. Stratton, W. H Bradburn and J. M Brooks, while fourteen members still remain on the fishing grounds to participate in future sport. In addition to the enjoyment by reason of the excellent fishing, a very pleasant social time was spent, made additionally pleasing by the presence of a number of musicians in the party, and the evenings were enlivened by songs and musical selections, which in many cases would have done credit to the stage.

The fishermen bring home as one of the results of their trip, a great many fish, all of which were caught in Ketchecum Lake, where the sport has been better than in previous years. Partridge hunting, also, is very good this year, and the hunters of the party, Messrs. Hal. Burnham, Wm. Collins, and the latter's son, bagged some especially fine birds. To Mr. A. L. Davis belongs the honour of having captured the largest fish caught by any member of the club.

Those who returned to business did so with the greatest reluctance, and all will look forward to the event next year with considerable pleasureable expectation.

THE LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH'S MEETING.

The Attendance and Business Transacted.

At a meeting of the local Board of Health there were present Messrs. Wm. Eyres, Mayor Roger, A. Parker, G. Schneider, Drs. Burnham and Bingham and Chief Roszel.

On motion of Dr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Schneider, it was resolved that Mr. Eyres take the chair in lieu of the chairman's absence in Toronto.

The Secretary read a petition from seven ratepayers ,asking that the lane east of George street and north of Hunter street, be attended to at once, owing to it's unsanitary condition.

It was moved and seconded that the matter be referred to the Board of Works, and that they be asked to advise what is being done in the matter.

An account from St. Joseph's Hospital was on motion referred to the same committee as was appointed in regard to an account from the Nicholls Hospital.

Mr. Eyers reported a complaint of imperfect flushing in the vicinity of the George street church.

On motion it was resolved that the Inspector of Plumbing be requested to enquire into the matter.

The Board adjourned for two weeks.

POVERTY A DISEASE.

Prof. Windsor Says Curable if Taken in Infancy.

Professor William Windsor, phrenologist and "vitosophist," faced an audience which filled every seat in the Y.M.C.A. Hall Saturday night to hear him lecture on the subject of "How to Become Rich."

"Poverty is a Disease," said the professor, "and it is curable if taken in time. But the fact that it is not regarded as a disease, and no attention is paid to its proper remedy, has filled the world with financial wrecks. Frequently the victim goes down under the strain and too often he lands in the penitentiary. 'Vitosophy' sets everybody right by surveying the mental capacity of each individual and putting him in his proper place and vocation, besides indicating the limit of his financial responsibility."

At the conclusion of the lecture two persons were chosen by the audience for public examinations. The professor surveyed the head of one with an odd looking machine, called the phrenometer, with which surveys were reproduced upon the blackboard. To-night the lecture will be on "Health."

MR. A. P. ANDREW AWARDED MEDAL.

Was a Successful Exhibitor of Cheese at Dominion Exhibition.

Honours continue to come Peterborough-wards, the latest to be noticed is a silver medal presented by the Dominion Industrial Exhibition to Mr. J. P. Andrews, of South Monaghan, for coloured cheese exhibited at the Fair this year. Mr. Andrews is the cheesemaker at the Bensfort factory, and the fact that in the class in which he secured the prize for which the medal was awarded, there were 150 exhibitors. Another silver medal was also awarded to a Peterborough county exhibitor for cheese.

In the dairy class a particularly large showing was made, nearly 600 cheese being on exhibition, and in the face of this the record made by the local cheesemakers is especially creditable. The medal was manufactured by the P. W. Ellis Co., Limited, of Toronto.

The patrons of the Bensfort factory will doubtless be gratified to learn that the cheese manufactured there is of such a superior quality.

A CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS.

Mrs. Mulcahy of Keene, Injured by Bicyclist.

Boy run Over by Waggon but was not Seriously Injured—A Bicyclist Comes to Grief.

An accident, which was attended with serious results, occurred on Saturday afternoon at the corner of Simcoe and George streets. Mrs. Mulcahy, of Keene, a lady about 60 years of age, was crossing Simcoe street, on the west side of George street, when she was run into by a bicyclist, and knocked down, sustaining some severe injuries. She was at once conveyed to Ormond & Walsh's drug store, and Dr. Greer, who was near, was called, who on examination found that Mrs. Mulcahy's arm was broken and that her head had been badly cut Her arm was set, and her other injuries attended to as much as possible before she was taken to her home the same evening.

At the same time a boy whose name could not be learned, was injured by being run over by a farmer's wagon at the same corner. His injuries, which were slight, were also attended to in Ormond & Walsh's drug store. He was able to walk home and will, it is believed, suffer little from the effects of the accidents.

A third accident, and the least serious, occurred about five o'clock at the corner of George and Hunter streets. A man was riding a wheel upon George street, returning from work, and was riding at a fairly rapid rate, when the front fork of his wheel broke and dropped the rider rather unceremoniously into the road. By rare good fortune no bones were broken and beyond a badly dilapidated wheel and a few bruises, the damage was slight.

HENRY WEESE RUN OVER AND INSTANTLY KILLED.

A Sad Occurrence at Havelock on Saturday Morning.

A wife and twelve children are left to mourn the death of Henry Weese, a car repairer, who lost his life about ten o'clock on Saturday morning at Havelock. It transpires that Weese with another man, F. H. Faulkner, was doing some repairs underneath a car at the rear end of a train consisting of some fifteen cars. A few yards away and on the same track an engine and six cars were shunting, the driver of this train not being aware of the presence of Weese and Faulkner, shunted into the other train and joined on, the action resulting in Weese being knocked across one of the rails, and two trucks passing over his body, which was almost cut into two pieces at the middle, while his left leg was nearly severed at the knee. Faulkner was also knocked over but miraculously escaped injury.

Upon learning the news, Dr. Gray, coroner, went to Havelock to enquire into the facts. He interviewed Mr. Wellington Hart, chief of the car repairers, Mr. F. H. Faulkner, Mr. Vance, yard foreman and the driver of the shunting engine, and it was the general opinion that the fatality was purely accidental and that no one could be blamed. In view of this, Dr. Gray deemed an inquest unnecessary.

The man who is about forty years of age, was buried this afternoon at two o'clock.

Fellow Employees Give Him Gent's Companion.

Mr. J. H. Humphries, who for some time has been employed in the office of the Peterborough Lock Works, left that company to accept a position with the C. P. R., at the freight office, and was presented with a beautiful gentleman's companion at noon to-day by the employees of the company, whose services he is leaving. An address was read in which regret was expressed at his departure and wishing him success in his new position.

WORK BEING RESUMED IN AUBURN WOOLLEN MILLS.

About Two-Thirds of the Staff Now Being Employed.

The Auburn Woollen Mills are gradually resuming operations, after having been partially closed for some weeks, because of a scarcity of orders. It is learned that the trade has improved to a certain extent, and about two-thirds of the staff will now be given employment. For some time prior to the partial shutdown, the mills had been running on staple goods such as beavers, etc., until the fancy trade should show a sufficient revival to warrant them resuming their manufacture. The trade having been stocked with staples, a partial cessation of work was decided upon, and now that the orders are again coming in for dress goods and worsteds the mills will resume work.

It is probable that the condition of the local mills may be more satisfactory than with the majority of Canadian mills, because of the fact that the equipment here is superior to that of many mills, and orders could be secured for it when they might not be forthcoming for others.

A statement has been made by a Scotch manufacturer to the effect that the real cause of the dullness of the trade in Canadian woollens is the fact that they are not prepared to produce goods equal in newness of design to those of the English and Scotch makers. This is refuted here, and it is pointed out that the designers employed are men brought over from the British mills.

The Monetary Times, on the other hand, points out that the manufacturing of tweeds is an industry for which Canada is not naturally adopted, and in which the mills are working at a disadvantage. This is the one industry in which the British manufacturer has never been excelled, and under the natural favourable conditions surrounding the industry, it is doubtful if the British woollen trade will suffer from the competition of the Canadian mills.

SUCCESS OF FAIR DUE TO THE 57TH BAND.

So Says Secretary of West Durham Agricultural Society.

As a further evidence of the popularity which the 57th Band attained at the Bowmanville exhibition, the following letter from Mr. M. A. James, secretary of the Association, is published. Mr. James is the editor of the Canadian Statesman, and it is largely due to his energetic effort that the Fair has reached such a successful stage. The letter to Mr. Gliddon follows:

Bowmanville, October 9, 1903.

Mr. Rupert Gliddon, Peterborough,—

Dear Sir, — I beg to enclose check for the balance due the 57th Regiment Band for services in connection with the West Durham Fall Fair. The directors are exceedingly well pleased with the programmes you rendered. Your band proved a splendid attraction, as is shown by our receipts, they being more than double of last year's gate money. Your concerts gave very great satisfaction, and we doubt if better pleased audiences ever left the drill hall. We are all very glad we engaged the noble 57th Regt. Band. We hope the boys landed those mammoth apples all right. They might display them in a show window as souvenirs of the Bowmanville Fair.

We were highly pleased with the behaviour of your members and request you to convey to them at your next meeting our high appreciation of their services and best wishes for the future success of yourself and of the boys of the 57th Regimental Band.

Yours sincerely,
M. A. JAMES,
Sec.-Treasurer.

Attractive Shoe Journal.

The Canadian Shoe and Leather Journal for October, just published, is a handsome trade journal of 114 pages, with a number of very creditable illustrations, including those of the principal buildings at the St. Louis World's Fair. It should be appreciated by the dealers in leather goods, for whose particular benefit the Journal is published.

THE POPULATION OF PETERBOROUGH.

This Year's Returns Show a Satisfactory Increase,

Scarcity of Houses Influencing Against Rapid Growth.

The population of Peterborough as shown by the assessment returns just made by Messrs. John Kincaid, T. H. McGrath, Wm. Aldridge and Thos. McKee, is for 1903, 11,807, as compared with 11,067 for 1902, which shows an increase of 740 for this year. The population of Ashburnham is 1,781, which added to that of Peterborough makes the total population for the two municipalities 13,588, as compared with 12,886 in 1902. This population will be increased by about 150 when the portion of Smith township, for the admission of which a petition is now before the Council, is included, and which it is expected will be taken into the town. This will increase the area by about eight acres. There has been a decrease in the population of Ashburnham of 88 during the year, the figures for 1902 being 1819.

This is a most satisfactory increase, and it is confidently asserted that if dwelling houses were more plentiful the increase would have been even more than they shown. It is known that a great many men have come to the town during the year to work, who have been unable to move their families here because of their inability to secure suitable houses in which to live. A case is cited to show the demand for houses. A house was about to be vacated, and even before the landlord had been informed by the tennnt of his intended departure, in one day fifteen applications were received for the house from those who had heard that it was to be vacant, and in view of this, it is safe to assert that the lack of dwelling houses is a condition that is responsible for the fact that Peterough is not growing as rapidly as it should.

Another satisfactory evidence of the prosperity and progress of the town is the increase in the value of assessed property, which this year, according to the table published in Saturday's Examiner, amounts to $5,048,015, as compared with $4,727,970 in 1902, an increase of $320,045. The assessment of Ashburnham is $463,574, after making the exemption deductions which amounts to about $30,000. The total population of the town is divided in the different wards as follows:—

	Ratepayers	Child'n, 5-21
Ward 1...	1235	1108
Ward 2...	1010	485
Ward 3...	867	753
Ward 4...	1575	486

These figures are interesting in that they show the percentage of children to the number of ratepayers in the different wards. In Ward No. 1 the percentage of children to the ratepayers is 81, while in Ward No. 2, it is but 48, Ward No. 3, is another high one, the children there being 78 per cent of the ratepayers, and in Ward No. 4, the per centage is but 30.

The births this year are 131, as compared with 136 last year, while the deaths were 63, and last year 53.

THE LATEST NEWS OF LOCAL SPORT.

Two Interesting Rugby Games on Saturday.

Trinity College School Defeated the Britannias—End of Lacrosse Season in Sight at Last—Other Sporting News.

RUGBY.

That the match between the Rough Riders and the All Saints' team, which was played on Saturday afternoon was expected to be exciting, was evidenced in the large number there was on the scene of conflict. The match was great. Both teams were confident of winning, and both had good points about their play. The Rough Riders in point of size and weight, had a considerable advantage. However, they had not the trickery art of the game, as an aggregation, as had the All Saints' boys.

The match was a most curious one, the All Saints playing the first half with the wind, and compiling a score which it was thought the heavier team would not equal. But to the astonishment of the crowd, when the Rough Riders had this wind behind them they gradually scored, until at last it was equalled by them.

The contesting teams were lined up as follows:

All Saints. — Back, S. Alford; half back, E. Ford, B. Cranfield, and N. Dusty; quarter back, A. Gillespie; nap, S. Canniff; wings, T. Henderson, W. Hopkins, H. Roddy, L. Peddler, P. Gilbert, and S. Campbell.

Rough Riders — Back, F. Craig; half backs, H. Kennedy, McPherson, R. Davidson; quarter, Pascall; snap, R. O'Brien; wings, R. Craig, R. Cameron, S. Rosemond, J. Lundy, W. G. Perks and Giroux.

Shortly after three o'clock, Mr. R. F. McWilliams, who acted as referee on this occasion, which will go down in the annals of very exciting and tooth and nail play, blew his whistle and the game began.

Within two minutes, All Saints, through a piece of pretty combination, rushed their opponents and got a rouge. During the larger part of the first half, the All Saints, who, it must be admitted, are a nervy team of clever tacklers, held the Rough Riders in their half of the field, only letting them break away on one or two occasions, not, however, resulting in scoring on the part of that aggregation. At half time the score stood at 10—0 in favour of the All Saints' team.

With the wind behind their backs and the humiliating sense of defeat goading them, the Rough Riders in the second half put their backs into the game, and played. The tables were completely turned, and now the All Saints were held in their own ground, the forcing play of their opponents making them to punt all the way through the half. Pascall did some especially fine work and pluckily tackled, as did Ford, for All Saints. Gradually point by point the Rough Riders pulled up their score and tied, five minutes before time, the score being 10 to 10.

Owing to the fact that another game was to be played, no extra time was allowed to make a victory.

• • • •

The Britannias were decidedly hard "up against it" when they came face to face with a team representing Trinity College School, Port Hope, and, notwithstanding the fact that everything seemed in favour for a victory, they suffered defeat to the tune of 23 to 0.

The teams lined up during the first half as follows:—

Port Hope—Back, Willis, halves, Kidd, McPherson, Elliott, quarter, Lawson; snap, Carey; inside wings, Colledge and Rhodes; centre, Hammond and McKenzie; outside, Duke and Rathbun.

Britannias—Back, Weller, halves, McFarlane, Hodgson and Bellegham; quarter, Walkey; snap, Mullern; inside wing, Fitzpatrick and Boucher; centre, Harmer and McDonald; outside, Sawers and Ferguson.

The Port Hope players were the faster men and were exceptionally good on the half back line, while the play was far superior to that of the local boys, who, however, put up a plucky game. Within a few minutes after the commencement of the game the visitors scored and continued to do so until half time when they had compiled no less than 23 points to Peterborough's nil.

During the second half the old game was played, the Peterborough team lining up as follows: — Back, Lee, halves, Morgan, Macfarlane and Crowley; scrimmage, Lush, Walkey and Noble; quarter, Graham; inside wing, Fitzpatrick and Boucher; centre, Sawers and Macdonald; outside Harmer and Bellegham, while the Port Hope scrimmage consisted of Hubbard, Carey and Copeland.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Peterborough team was strengthened by six senior men they did not score, although they held the Port Hope boys, who are used to this style of play in their own territory. After a stiff struggle during which no one scored, the game ended 23 to 0.

The second game of the junior League was played on Saturday at Lakefield between the Rough Riders and a team of that town, which resulted in favour of the Rough Riders by a score of 18—3. It was a very exciting game, especially in the first half, when the score was 4—3, but in the second half the Rough Riders got to work, and scored 14 to their opponents' nothing. The Rough Riders put up a very brilliant game and every player did his part well, especially Kelly, whose punting was a marvel. The Lakefield boys have shown a great improvement since their last game and will no doubt with more practice be hard to beat. The Rough Riders lined up as follows: Back, B. Laing; halves, T. Kelly, W. Burritt and A. Wood; quarter, W. Cahill; snapper, G. Greer; wings, W. O'Brien, W. Sheffield, H Sager, A. Perks, C. Ackerman and M. O'Brien.

• • • •

Varsity team, with MacPherson playing back, defeated the Trinity College team in the Intermediate series in Toronto, on Saturday, by a score of 33 to 1.

• • • •

The Britannias will practice every night this week at 7.15 at the T.A.S. grounds.

• • • •

The senior team will practice at 7.15 this evening on the T.A.S. grounds with the Britannias.

GOLF.

Thanksgiving will witness a final turnout of the members for a whole day's play. It will be the nominal close of the season, which has been very successful and enjoyable. In the morning at 9.30 entries for the handicap medal round will close. The handicaps will be the same as in the Stratton Trophy contest. The draw will be made at that hour, after which the game will begin without delay. The president, Mr. Dennistoun, has given two pewters, one of which will be awarded for the best gross score, and the other for the best nett score.

At two o'clock sharp, the driving and approaching and putting contest will take place under the direction of Mr. Hamilton, and according to the regulations of the Canadian Golf Association, of whose Executive Committee he is a member. The club will furnish pewters as prizes for this competition also. The Edmison Trophy for teams of six chosen from the best cards put in by a certain date, and arranged in the order of the scores, was played for on Saturday afternoon. This trophy is a splendid silver dish given by Mr. Edmison, K.C. Each win counts one point, and the names of the winning team are to be engraved upon it from year to year. The following were the teams and score:

0 H. Burnham	R. M Hamilton	0
0 V. McGill	J. Laurence	1
0 S. Ray	H. D Burnett	1
1 J. Gracey	L. Eastwood	0
1 F. McGill	P. Campbell	0
1 J. W. Garvin	C. McAllister	0
3		2

Mr. Burnham's side winning by one point. This contest being the only one for teams, provides a very enjoyable variety, and will serve to perpetuate many pleasant memories. About the end of November it is intended to hold the first annual golf dinner.

A friend has received a letter from Mr. Robert Granger, who is at present in the Northwest, where he says one, if desirable, can have "links of 1800 holes, instead of 18, and as smooth as a billiard table," as he "puts" it.

BASKET-BALL.

The time for entering the league has been extended until Friday, Oct. 16th; entries must be in the directors' hands by that time. A meeting of the committee who have charge of the arrangement of the schedule, will meet on Saturday evening, October 17th, at 8 o'clock. A representative from each team entering is requested to be present to assist in the arranging of games. Entry fee, $1.50 each team, to be paid on entering.

SPRINTING.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—As far as I can understand, the main object which Mr. Schneider had when he so kindly gave his cup to the sporting element of Peterborough was to further the interests of legitimate amateur foot-running among the bonafide residents of Peterborough county. Now, Mr. Editor, I do not for one moment think that Mr. Schneider ever intended that "ringers" would ever be qualified to partake in the friendly and sportsman-like contests which would undoubtedly take place for this cup.

However, if he did intend these contests to be open to any sprinter in the world who might drift into the town, I cannot say that I perceive any benefit which the sprinters of Peterborough county could derive from it. I am sure Mr. Editor, that I am offending Mr. Schneider's sense of justice and manliness in even mentioning this supposition.

Under these circumstances if the gentlemen who control the Schneider cup wish it to be run for by those who are qualified, as was the donator's intention when giving it, I am willing to give a five-yards' handicap to everyone in the town—tourists and pot-hunters omitted—and run on Thanksgiving day at the driving park. There are about fourteen runners in town and the race could be divided into two sections, the first two men in each heat to qualify in the final. I feel quite satisfied that there are some to whom I cannot allow such a handicap and win, and my proposition is prompted only by a genuine feeling of generosity and a keen desire to see others besides myself have the pleasure of winning this much prized trophy. I trust that my townfellows will not feel offended at my suggestion but will accept it in the spirit in which it is made. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space I am yours very truly,

FRED McGRATH.

MR. BELLAND AND THE CUP.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In an evening paper of Saturday I noticed a letter signed by Mr. Fred. McGrath, in reference to the cup so generously donated by Mr. Schneider, jeweller, George street, in the interest of local amateur sport, and as I am interested in said sport and also [illegible] I would like to say a few words in connection with the matter. Now, as far as I am concerned I have no desire to interfere with the committee in charge of the cup, and in whom I have the greatest confidence, being a resident of the town since last March, and having a liking for the sport, desire to participate in the running for said cup, or any other trophy that may be put up here, and might say further that I will be pleased to place any cup such as I might win, in Mr. Schneider's or any other window in town, as the committee may direct, thus keeping it in view of the younger athletes as an incentive to them to keep up their practice until they also excel. I think, personally that this idea is in preference to hanging up such beautiful trophies in a back room.

Now as to "tourists and pot-hunters" I notice that at the last annual events of the M.A.A.A. a young gentleman, who won several events, entered himself as a resident of Point St. Charles, but people in this part of the country, in reading the leading Canadian papers, recognized the fact that they credited him with being a resident of Peterborough. Was this a case of tourist?

Now as to the next race for the cup I will be pleased to participate and do not propose to dictate to the committee in charge as to when it shall be run, or what the conditions shall be, and can assure you that I will ask for no handicap from any of the fourteen runners in town mentioned by Mr. McGrath.

Yours in the interests of true sport,
D. BELLAND.

LACROSSE.

The Judicial Committee of the C. L. A. has given out its decision in the Durham-Wallaceburg protest and has administered a punishment to the former team. The team is expelled from the C.L.A., and also two men, Pearson and Coppin, the latter for playing under the name of the former in the game protested. This decision leaves Wallaceburg and Elora in the finals for the Junior championship and the game will be played in Seaforth on Friday, October 16th.

Truly there is something wrong with the arrangement of the schedule, when the final games are not played until the middle of October, at least six weeks after the season should have closed.

St. Paul and Chicago like the Canadian national game so well that they are still playing it. The Calumets of Chicago, and the St. Paul, Minn., team had a hard fought battle last week to decide the championship of the western states, and the Saints left the field victorious, winning the game by the score of 9 to 5. As usual, Rubidge of the Calumets, but who learned the game in Peterborough, played a very effective game, scoring three of the five goals credited to his team. F. Rubidge acted as field captain for the Calumets. This game gives the championship to the St. Paul team.

VICTIMS OF NIAGARA.

The Indian Legend of Its Calling for Another Victim.

The Indians held that Niagara claimed its yearly quota of victims. Even to-day, when the wind is in a certain direction and the roar of the falls has a peculiar thunderous sound, they say, "Niagara is booming! It is calling for another victim!" And long indeed is the roll-call of the lost. All guides point out the spot where the French lady, stooping to fill her cup from the rapids, fell, and was whirled away in an instant. Nothing was seen of her but once: then for the space of a flash a hand tossed above the waves.

They shot past the rock to which Avery clung for twenty hours, for half a day in view of the frantic crowd, who sent raft after raft to reach him, yet saw him swept like a weed to destruction at last.

Perhaps the most tragic story is that of the young man who was walking with his bride on Luna Island. Just at the brink of the falls they stopped to greet a party of friends. The young husband, in merry mood, took in his arms a little girl of the party. Smilingly he held her out over the brink, never doubting the security of his strong grasp. The terrified child struggled and screamed, and in the struggle slipped from his arms and fell into that whirl of foaming water.

Overwhelmed with the awfulness of his act, and doubtless actuated by a wild thought of saving the child the young man leaped after her to his own death, and the two were swept away before the horrified gaze of their friends.

Perhaps that bride's fate, who stood and saw this awful tragedy, was sadder than the lot of the other ill-starred bride, who went rowing in a little boat with her young husband on the river above the falls. Although warned not to venture too far, they rowed on and on over the smooth, treacherous, fair-seeming waters, till the terrible current seized their little skiff and whirled it into the rapids. The last glimpse of them showed them standing up in the rocking boat, clasped in each other's arms. Then boat, bride and bridegroom were engulfed in the relentless waters.

WAS INCURABLE BUT IS CURED.

Joseph Boone at Work Again After Seven Years' Illness.

Cottle's Cove, New Bay, Nfld., Oct. 12. — Special. — After being for seven years a hopeless invalid, unable to work, and racked by aches and pains, Joseph Boone, of this place is back to his old work as a fisherman. It sounds like a miracle, but it is not—it was Kidney Disease that was the matter with him. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him.

"It is something worth relating what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me," says Mr. Boone, and I am glad to tell it. I had doctored with several doctors and after seven months in the hospital was sent home as incurable.

"Richard Quirk, who had been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, advised me to try them and I had. I took 21 boxes before I was able to go to work. But I can hardly believe it is myself at all, after all these years of suffering."

Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure all forms of Kidney Disease from Backache to Bright's Disease. Thousands of cured ones will tell you so.

Uncle Josh's Query.

"I occasionally get hold of a queer passenger," said a conductor on one of the suburban lines the other day, "but I had always managed to hold my own until a week ago. Then a regular Uncle Josh took my car for the first trolley ride in his life. He sat up in a corner and watched things for a few minutes and then beckoned to me and said:

"'Conductor, you look like a smart young feller.'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'Then tell me what makes this car go.'

"'Electricity, sir.'

"That didn't satisfy him for more than three minutes. I saw a doubtful, puzzled look spread over his face, and presently he beckoned to me again and said:

"'Conductor, I should say you was about as smart as they make 'em.'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'And I guess you know it all.'

"'About all, sir.'

"'I asked you what made the car go, and you said electricity.'

"'That's correct.'

"'All right. If electricity makes the car go what in tarnation makes electricity go?'

"He had me there," smiled the conductor, "and I went out of business in half a minute, and the grin on the old man's face was something to be remembered for many days."—Detroit Free Press.

Tragedy of a Glass Eye.

From Odessa comes the story of a tragedy in which a glass eye was a most important factor. Two young people of good position were at the altar to be married. The ceremony had hardly begun when a woman's voice came from the back of the church, crying that the wedding must be stopped, as the bride was blind. The bride fainted and was revived, and the ceremony proceeded. Hardly had the priest given his blessing when the bride fell dead. It seems that the bride's sister was in love with the bridegroom. The bride had a glass eye which she in some mysterious way had concealed from her future husband. Therefore the bad sister went to church to break up the wedding and took the glass eye as a pretext for so doing. As a fitting sequel the bad sister went mad.

A MIGRATING BUTTERFLY.

King Billy, Danais Archippus, Is the Only Migrant Among the Dwellers of the Nectar-Laden Flowers.

This is the season to watch for the migration of the orange and black butterfly, familiarly known as the King Billy, to his intimate friends, the Danais Archippus. In the insect world, the world of myriad wonders, this familiar dweller among the nectar-laden flowers is the only migrant, says The Toronto Globe. And why should insects come or depart with the changing season? Ephemeral atoms in the great sea of life at one time crawling on the earth like reptile, at another flying in the air like birds or swimming in the water like fish, again burrowing in the ground like moles and relapsing into inert forms that sustain, like seeds, the mystery of life through the fiercest northern frosts, sometimes eating voraciously and again sustaining a life of activity without food, they change with the passing seasons, dancing in the summer sun or congealing in the frozen earth in winter. But the orange butterfly, familiar in his dizzy, undulating flight among the chimney tops or feasting daintily on the nectar and polen of the asters, is impelled to go from zone to zone in the fulfillment of his life mission. In the middle of the lake his indolent, irregular flight seems purposeless and indifferent. He seems to heed the passing steamer no more than the passing of time. In his giddy flopping there is no apparent progress, and one wonders how he traverses the length of the continent to spend the season among tropical flowers, how he crosses the Gulf of Mexico to a still more attractive climate, and how, a few years ago, he crossed from the southern extremity of this continent and invaded our sister colony Australia. Around Toronto these butterflies generally move westward, and, although they are sometimes encountered over the lake, it is thought that the flock or swarm from this part of the country crosses at Niagara. It is only three or four days after their departure that they are tasting the nectar of the flowers in Florida and other States around the gulf.

With their migrating habits there is a resourcefulness that other insects do not possess. The greater part of their life is spent not in the inert chrysalis state, like so many of their class, but in the highest activity of perfect development. Their wings must be protected for the long flight, and when their delicate health are threatened by a storm of rain they hide under the little twigs of the willow. There they hang back downward, their wings closed flatly together below them in the position they often assume when resting on the flowers. Sometimes they seem to forget their usual caution in a shower and fly excitedly about, hither and thither, rising higher and higher in an apparent effort to get above the rain. But that is only an occasional folly, for they generally anticipate the storm and suspend themselves carefully out of harm's way. The young generation, now ready to try their beautiful, unburnished wings in the long southern journey, will not have the guidance of experience. That is a means of progress and advancement denied in the insect world, for each generation passes with the fulfillment of its procreative mission. As long, black and white crawling worms they have been feeding voraciously on the leaves of the milkweed, a plant named after Asclepias, whose knowledge of medicinal herbs was so profound as to excite the envy of Jove himself and thus lead to his undoing. And the butterfly larvae, whose preference for the milkweed is no doubt more wise than the medicinal faith of the past generation, have also inherited the name.

A short time ago they ceased devouring the milkweed leaves, curled themselves up for a brief nap as inert pupae, then burst from the shroud of their own weaving as winged insects, their jaws discarded for long tubular tongues to draw the nectar from the nodding flowers above the leaves they so lately disfigured. They have changed from the worm to the butterfly and turned from the leaf to the flower. Their long southern migration is merely a climatic necessity. They will come back again in the spring, meagre and ravenous, their wings worn and battered by the long flight. They will probe the horn of the columbine, the slender tubes of the honeysuckle, and every flower that promises them nectar or polen. The exuding sap of the maple or birch will be a rich repast, and they will revel for a time in the luxuriance of our northern land. Soon they will seek their mates, like the returning swallows, and give up their lives in the fulfillment of the law of perpetuation, the first law of nature.

Abitibi District.

Messrs. G. F. Kay, geologist; T. D. Jarvis and Harold Jarvis of the Ontario Agricultural College, an exploring party, sent out a few months ago by the Ontario Government, have returned from the region of Lake Abittibi. Mr. Jarvis reports rolling land is characteristic of the eastern part. The whole region is intersected by numerous small rivers and lakes. The rivers are short, broad, sluggish, and have low, marshy banks. The lakes are mostly very shallow, Lake Abittibi itself being about 90 miles long, and not more than 15 feet deep at the most. It is probable that the problem of drainage will solve itself when the country is cleared.

"Judging from what I have seen of the clay belt, I should say it is well named, for about three-quarters of all the soil overlying the rock is clay. The clay differs in color, composition and origin. In the Indian gardens around the lake there were on the 4th of July potatoes about seven inches high. Those must have been planted about a month, and had not been injured by frost. Onions, turnips, carrots and cabbages all thrived, even with the little care that was bestowed on them.

PERILOUS SOUNDING.

HOW WILLIAM LAROCQUE OBTAINED THE DEPTH OF NIAGARA RAPIDS.

Nerve at Niagara—The Story of a French-Canadian's Ingenious Bravery, by Which He Secured a Much-Needed Sounding in the Rapids—Risked His Life, But Saved It by His Own Skill and Inventiveness.

Almost from the day the first white man looked upon the great cataract, Niagara Falls has had its heroes, says The Niagara Falls Gazette. During the past few years a large number of names have been added to the list of those who for the saving of human life or furthering the cause of science or industry have dared the perils of the Niagara River in one way or another. This week another is added to the roll.

One of the most amazing tasks in connection with the present power development is that undertaken by Battle Bros., contractors, of Thorold, who are building a great wing dam at the head of the White Horse Rapids for the Niagara Construction Co., builders of the works of the Ontario Power Company. This dam is being thrust out into the deep, silent, swift-running water at the head of the rapids for a distance of two hundred and ninety feet, and then down stream seven hundred feet, involving a work of almost incredible difficulty. The first section is now completed, and four hundred feet of the second have been built. A few days ago the contractors decided to obtain, if possible, soundings of that part of the river in which the rest of the dam is to be built. At first they were at a loss for a method of doing this, but the matter was referred to William Larocque, their French-Canadian foreman from below Montreal, and in a few hours the problem was solved.

Larocque first built a sort of float, 32 feet long and 14 feet wide. The up-stream end of it was only about a foot thick, but at the other end it sloped up to a height of three feet. On this a mast twenty feet high was erected and securely braced, and to its top a stout cable was attached. Two other cables were then fastened to the front of the float, and the queer craft was started down stream from the extremity of the dam. Another cable led out sideways to aid in directing the float. The current runs over fifteen miles an hour at this point, and as soon as the float was fairly started the water rushed over the low front of it, and bore down so hard as it was forced up over the higher back that the float went to the bottom like a stone. This was exactly what Larocque had intended. The two cables were paid out slowly and carefully till the float had gone down stream about two hundred and seventy feet. It was found then by pulling on the cables that they would stand a strain as great as if the float were anchored to the rock at the bottom of the river.

Then Larocque came to the front again. He had a sort of box attached to the cable stretched from the mast on the float to a mast on the dam, and into this he got, and ordered his men to let him slide out on the cable. The box was hung to the cable by a pulley, and the mast on the dam was higher than that on the float, so that the box would slide out. The rope attached to the box was controlled by the daring foreman's brother, Napoleon Larocque, and another man named Philip Clermont. They were on top of the "shore" mast, and directed the whole operations on the dam. A life line was fastened round the waist of the man in the box, and a gang of trusty men held the other end of it.

Out on the thin cable, swaying to and fro in his crazy box, Larocque slid, foot by foot, till presently he signalled that the box be stopped. Then he lowered an inch and a quarter steel sounding rod into the water, till he touched bottom, and the engineers on the shore levelled their instruments and took the level. Out again went the box, and another sounding was made, and so on again and again, until the intrepid foreman was close to the sunken float, and only about fifty feet from the break of the rapids. Every few feet he signalled for the box to stop and let down his rod. By an ingenious arrangement he was able to lower the box nearer to the water, and once he was down within two feet of the rushing tide. No man ever went out there before and returned to tell the tale. Death in the boiling rapids and a final plunge of a battered corpse over the cataract was always the inevitable fate. Larocque did not seem to realize the terrible peculiarity of his position, but went on making his soundings till all was completed. Then he gave the signal, and was drawn up to the dam without accident. A crowd of contractors, engineers, photographers and other spectators crowded forward to grasp his hand, but the Frenchman seemed unable to realize why they should make such a fuss. It was all in the day's work to him. The sunken float was dragged back, and to-day, if you visit the spot, you will see no sign of where a brave man in blue jeans risked his life and saved it by his own skill and inventiveness.

Napoleon's Bad Handwriting.

Napoleon had seven or eight theories to account for his defeat at Waterloo; but he failed to mention one which was put forth by Alexandre Dumas, who says that Napoleon lost the battles which did go against him because he wrote such an illegible hand.

His generals could not read his notes, and trembling marshals, afraid of disobeying and yet unable to decipher directions, went wavering about, and failed to rule the issue.

He would have been a bold man who ventured to criticize the emperor's handwriting by asking to have it explained. The Imperial temper was worse than peppery. The great man one day drew his pistol to shoot a little dog which had barked at his horse. A marshal might have fared still worse.

No one could emulate the daring of that Danish officer who "spoke up" to Nelson, at Copenhagen. He had been sent in before the fight with a flag of truce, and was asked to put his message in writing.

"If your guns are not better than your pens," said he, trying the assortment offered him, "you had better retire."

Children of Lord Aberdeen.

Lord Haddo, the eldest son of the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen, was twenty-four last month. He is very popular on the estate. Like Lord Aberdeen, he is very quiet and studious, and has charming manners. His two younger brothers, the Hons. Dudley and Ian Gordon, are apprentices in a shipyard in Aberdeen, and it is stipulated in their indentures that their hours of work are to be similar to those of other apprentices. Mr. Dudley Gordon is in his nineteenth year and Mr. Ian in his eighteenth. The only daughter of the house, Lady Marjorie, is tall and good looking. She has a creamy complexion and dark hair and eyes while her mouth is expressive and pretty. She is clever, thoughtful, and, while enjoying life thoroughly, regards it as possessing certain responsibilities, which she conscientiously undertakes.

The Hon. Dudley and the Hon Ian Gordon are in camp at Newburgh, a coast town in Aberdeenshire, for duck shooting, etc. It is very pleasant under canvas, and they must cook or starve, no servants being taken with them. The two lads are serving their time as practical engineers in Aberdeen, and that after the orthodox manner, no special concessions being either asked or given. In after years such an experience of real life, besides fitting them to sympathize with the working classes in their struggles, will enable them, for instance, to mend their motors on the spot, and be otherwise equal to any emergency.

The first great country house function in the north came off this season at Haddo House, when the annual games were held. The Earl and Countess of Aberdeen were absent, but sent a letter of welcome to the ten thousand people gathered within their gates.—Montreal Witness.

Statistics Affecting Canada.

The recently issued British Board of Trade return, dealing with the trade between the United Kingdom, Canada and Germany, shows that the value of imports into Germany from Canada in 1902 was £472,000, as compared with £370,000 in 1901, £209,000 in 1897, and £104,000 in 1895. The value of exports from Germany to Canada in 1902 was £1,937,000, as compared with £1,325,000 in 1901, £837,000 in 1897, and £618,000 in 1895. Proportionately, the imports into Germany from Canada have grown more rapidly than the exports from Germany.

Imports from Canada into the United Kingdom were in 1902, £22,965,000; £19,855,000 in 1901; £19,218,000 in 1897, £12,708,000 in 1895. The total exports from the United Kingdom to Canada were, in 1902, £11,906,000. The total trade between the United Kingdom and the Dominion in 1902 was £34,871,000, whereas in 1892 it was only £21,000,000.

A Celebrated Suicide.

Haydon, the celebrated historical painter and writer, overcome by debt, disappointment and ingratitude, laid down the brush with which he was at work upon his last great effort, "Alfred and the Trial by Jury," wrote with a steady hand, "Stretch me no longer upon this rough world," and then with a pistol shot put an end to his unhappy existence.

First Serious Trouble.

The Cause of the Disturbance.

Health and Vigor for Sickly Women.

By Supplying an Abundance of Rich, Red, Life-Sustaining and System-building Blood,

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Thoroughly Cures the Ills Peculiar to Women.

The feminine organism is an intricate mass of delicate and sensitive nerves which require an enormous amount of pure, rich blood to nourish them and supply them with the vital force necessary to properly perform their functions.

When the blood is lacking in quantity or quality the nerve cells waste and shrivel up and by means of pain and irregularities make known their starved and depleted condition.

Unless the nervous system is put in proper condition all the medicine in the world will never cure the weakness and irregularities peculiar to women. Because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food contains the elements of nature which go to form new, rich blood and create new nerve force it is the most certain cure obtainable for such ailments.

When the nervous system becomes exhausted the whole body is more or less affected and the various organs fail to perform the duties devolving upon them. Digestion is impaired; there are feelings of discomfort in the stomach after meals, nervous sick headaches, irritability, sleeplessness; spells of weakness and dizziness come over you; you feel downhearted, discouraged and despondent and fear prostration, paralysis or insanity.

But there is no hope for you in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Not the false hope which is aroused by medicines composed of alcohol and other stimulants, but the hope which finds foundation in added flesh and tissue, in better appetite, more buoyant feelings and gradual disappearance of annoying symptoms.

As a blood builder and nerve restorative Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is bound to benefit your whole system. By noting your increase in weight while using it you can prove this beyond a doubt.

Fifty cents a box; 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box. 10

ON THE TRAIL OF A VALENTINE

By LESTER GRAY

...Copyright, 1903, by S. S. McClure...

Peace and harmony had descended upon the Briarton district school. Not a single braid was surreptitiously tweaked, nor did the usual feminine titter greet each masculine failure at the board. The season was not far to seek. It was the work of the little blind god—aided by natural vanity and the desire of enrolling. It was St. Valentine's day.

Many an anxious eye was turned toward the canvas mail bag hanging before the teacher's desk. As yet it guarded its secrets jealously, but at the close of the afternoon session it would be opened and its contents distributed. The heads bent so studiously over books were filled with fancies never garnered from their dull pages.

At recess the girls walked in twos and threes, with mysterious whisperings and sly glances. The boys gathered in an awkward group in the vain effort to evince the usual interest in skating and the respective merits of each bobsled. Carson's head towered above them all. One bright girl climbed half up school. In fact, that it behooved him to put childish things and take up the dignity of manhood. In this spirit he had declared that valentines were "plumb foolishness" and that he, for one, should not send any.

But the boys greeted his cigarette with derision. It was all very well for him to talk, but every one in school would send valentines, and every one would get them except perhaps Molly Anderson.

Josh glanced over at the widow. Yes, there was the fashion plate figure looking coy enough. Molly never came out with the showy, but Josh grudgingly admitted. It was not because she was homely, though the boys made many a slighting remark at her red hair and pale cheeks, but because she was different. She was the only girl in the school who had never had a valentine. In her pale, still face and dreamy eyes the boys read withdrawn from the fun altogether, and themselves felt her quietly alone.

As the bell rang and they filed back into the dilapidated desk seats, planned at Molly. She was looking at the mail bag, and there was a wistful ache in her throat. An unpleasant feeling filled him. Promptly thought he'd like to get a valentine. Did Molly think of it?

Jack was rather hopeful. Many a battle had he fought to conquer that tortured feeling of unhappy fear. He was afraid to see the misery in Mary's face when the others were remembered. By the time the bell rang for resuming his mind was made up.

It was on the stroke of 4 when the teacher stood up and took the mail out from the bag. "Miss Edwards, Helen Wilkinson, Miss Emery," rapidly she read the names, and the recipients, blushing or sheepish, came up to claim their own. Josh Carson had quite a pile, but he still looked anxiously at the bag.

At length teacher held in her hand a box of generous size. "Miss Amelia Anderson," she read slowly.

Molly rose mechanically and walked up to the desk. When she reached her seat again the fingers which opened the precious package trembled violently. The lifted lid disclosed the pink valentine, which had reposed in admired state in the dry goods window for the last week. There was a general murmur of surprise.

Molly glanced about wildly. Her blue eyes, shining with joyful tears, encountered a pair of brown ones which sought to evade them. Jack blushed up to his ears. There were unspoken question and answer before Molly sank back in her seat with a little sigh of satisfaction. She knew, but somehow Jack did not mind her knowing.

Yet he had a boy's distaste for [illegible] and so lingered behind the school with the ostensible purpose of [illegible]. But when he came out [illegible] half light of the gray [illegible] was waiting for him. [illegible] overcome Molly's shyness. She [illegible] forward resolutely. It was [illegible] faltered and backed away from the outstretched hands.

"I want to thank you," she said breathlessly, "though [illegible] half tell what I [illegible] why you did it. You are a [illegible] good boy, and I will never forget it."

Jack gazed down into her shining eyes. Why had he never before noticed how little they were? "I did it because I wanted to, Molly," he said gently. "I was glad to do it." An unusual emotion held him spellbound till teacher's steps on the stair filled him with the horror of discovery and sent him hurrying out into the frosty air.

That was the last St. Valentine's day for Molly in the Briarton school. In the spring her grandmother died, and she went to live with an uncle "in the city," as folks vaguely said. And it was the last for Jack too. He left school and bent all his energies to the farm and the happiness of his widowed mother.

He stamped into the Briarton post office one afternoon in expectation of nothing more exciting than a pile of summer seed catalogues. When the postmaster handed him out a package addressed in a feminine hand he gave a low whistle of surprise. One of the bystanders ventured the surmise that it must be a valentine.

Jack laughed as he said easily: "I guess not. I'm not enough of a ladies' man to receive valentines. But tomorrow is Valentine's day, after all. I had forgotten all about it."

He carried the package home and laid it on the table. Then he went out to do the chores. Supper was eaten in silence. Finally his mother said: "Aren't you going to open your package, Jack?"

Jack reddened. "Why, I had forgotten all about it," he said, and began to untie the string. Then he gave a low whistle of surprise. Lying on the table was a pink valentine.

"Why, mother," he said, "I never sent this. I wonder who did?"

"Perhaps it is from the girl you were with when you came home from school," suggested his mother.

Jack looked at the valentine. Then he looked at his mother. Then he looked at the valentine. Then he looked at his mother. Then he looked at the valentine. Then he looked at his mother. Then he

New York,—Practically the same conditions surround the Wall street market as for months past. There have been no material changes for the better, nor are there likely to be in the near future. The happenings of the week have served but to confirm the impressions of those who have watched the surface rumblings and initiatively gained an insight of the inside. The disclosures in the U.S. shipbuilding only open to view the proceedure of the flotation of many other stocks which have found a public market. The tensile abilities of any and every project have been thoroughly tested among Wall street financiers before its committal to the tender mercies of outsiders. Some have by reason of fortuitous circumstances been able to withstand the dividend strain. Others have succumbed to natural laws and the long drawn out panic may end in collapse.—New York News.

Town Topics.—The new week opens under a cloud and holds little promise of improvement until after the removal of some unfavourable factors in the general situation. The sharp break in steel preferred at the close on Saturday apprehensive of some unfavourable developments, the heavy damage by severe storm last week and closing of iron furnaces, steel mills, etc., the unrest of labour and general belief that there are weak spots still to be uncovered are more important to the street than the relaxation in the money market. The public will not come into the market until assured that there is no other scandal to be brought forward.

MANITOBA WEDDING.

Mr. Walton Brisbin Married to Miss Katie Playfair.

The report of a wedding which took place at Baldur, Manitoba, on September 30th, will be read with considerable interest here, because of the fact that the groom, Mr. Walton Brisbin, is a former resident of Ashburnham, and is well known by many here.

The bride was Miss Katie Playfair, youngest daughter of Mr .G. W. Playfair, and the bridesmaid was Miss Annie Playfair, sister of the bride, while the groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Jas. Brisbin. Rev. J. H. Miller performed the wedding ceremony in the presence of a number of friends of the contracting parties, and afterwards the party partook of a dainty wedding breakfast, leaving shortly afterwards for their new home in Pilot Mound, Manitoba. The bride, who is very popular with the residents of her home town, was the recipient of many valuable and handsome presents.

Mr. Walton Brisbin is a son of Mr. Fields Brisbin of Ashburnham, and his many friends will join in wishing him continued happiness in his new domestic relations.

THE CHURCHES.

ALL SAINT'S CHURCH.

The services yesterday were very well attended and the congregations manifested considerable interest in the sermons, which were preached by the Rector, his morning subject being "He Cut it with a Penknife," in the evening he spoke on "Let the Dead Bury their Dead." The music was an enjoyable feature. At the morning service, Miss Mary Rush, in her usual sweet voice, sang "Just for To-day," while in the evening the anthem was "Now the Day is Over," Mr. Jos. Legg taking the solos.

GEORGE STREET METHODIST.

The pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, preached yesterday at both services. The music for the day was as follows; Morning—Anthem, "The Sands of Time are Sinking," Gounod. Organ Offertory, "My Faith Looks up to Thee." Evening, — Anthem, "My Shepherd is the Living God," Eugene Thayer. Mr. Smedley sang the bass solo in this anthem. Offertory, "Through the Day," which was sung unaccompanied, making a very good effect.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

The choir was assisted yesterday by Miss Helen Davies, who ,in addition to singing with the chorus, rendered a much appreciated solo.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.

Remember the meeting of the Men's Guild this evening, when an interesting debate will be held. Rev. Canon Greene will be present and address the meeting. After the meeting a social hour will be held. All men are heartily invited.

CHARLOTTE STREET CHURCH.

Large congregations greeted the pastor at both services in Charlotte street yesterday. The choir rendered a pleasing musical programme. In the morning the anthem was "Zion Awake," and for the offertory Mr. Walter Stocker sang splendidly "Hosanna in Excelsis." In the evening the choir sang as an anthem "Softly Now the Light of Day," solos being taken by Miss Clara Bolleghem and Mr. T. N. Jolliffe. The offertory selection sung by Miss Bolleghem was very much enjoyed. It was "Man of Galilee," to the tune of Annie Laurie, and Miss Bolleghem's rendition of the beautiful composition was much enjoyed.

"CHARITY" REPLIES TO "MUSIC LOVER'S" LETTER.

Says Singers Should Receive Encouragement not Criticism.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In your issue of Saturday appears a communication from an alleged "music lover," He or she must be a wonderfully superior being to assume such superior airs and exercise the right to deal out such blastin~ criticism of choirs and choir singers. I was at church last night (I do not mention this as an especial merit,) but it enabled me to judge of the justice of "music lover's" criticism or rather snarl. The singing of the choir and soloists was, perhaps, not up to the mark, but it was fairly well done and by no means tempted me to profanity. It was, at any rate, as good as the pay received by the chour. "Music Lover" must remember that choirs and soloists in Peterborough give their services without pay and when one considers that whatever the weather—whatever desires, attractions or pleasures tempt them, they must be in their places twice on Sunday, besides at practice, perhaps twice a week. They make great sacrifice and give the best service—this, however, without fee or reward. When we get fairly good music for nothing we should remember that good taste requires that we should 'not look the gift horse in the mouth." Neither "Music Lover" nor anybody else can expect volunteer choir soloists to be Melbas or Albanis or Sims Reeves nor Plunkett Greens. If we want perfect church music we must pay the price. Is "Music Lover" ready to put his hand is his pocket and pay his share of the price of getting professional singers that will measure up to the standard of his superior tastes. I don't believe he is a music lover at all—perhaps some disgruntled member of a choir who is not put down for a solo. If he were to sing some Sunday and made a mess of it, as he probably would, would he like to see his effort discussed in the papers on its merits. "Charity covereth a multitude of sins." This should aply to the defects of choirs as well as other things. A good choir master's duty is to look for the faults of his choir, but the average churchgoer should be charitable enough to try to discover the good points of the singers. I agree, however, that our choirs can be improved, but they never will be up to the mark till church officials and "music lovers" in the congregation are generous enough to provide the means to employ competent choir leaders to put raw vocal material into fairly good shape.

Yours truly,
CHARITY.

Something More Than a Purgative.

To purge is the only effect of many pills now on the market. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are more than a purgative. They strengthen the stomach where other pills weaken it. They cleanse the blood by regulating the liver and kidneys, and they stimulate where other pill compounds depress. Nothing of an injurious nature, used for merely purgative purposes, enters into their composition.

ANNUAL MEETING OF WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

Ladies Help in the Work of the Y. M. C. A.

Reports of Last Year Presented by Officers—Annual Election Held.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A., was held Oct. 1st, in the parlours of the Association with a fair attendance. Mrs. Hunter, the President, occupied the chair. After the usual routine, Mrs. McPherson gave a Bible study, taking for her subject "Peace." Mrs. James Coyle Brown, Treasurer, presented her monthly report which was accepted.

The matter of issuing a Christmas calendar was discussed and it was decided to offer copies for sale in the holiday season.

Arrangements were also completed for the monthly Strangers' Teas; that in October being assigned to St. Andrew's church, and for November to All Saint's.

The regular meetings of the Auxiliary were fixed for the last Thursday of each month.

Reports of the several Committees were presented and dealt with. The reports of the President, Secretary and Treasurer were also presented as follows:—

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Mrs. Hunter, President, thanked the ladies of the Auxiliary for their hearty support in all the branches of the work intrusted to them. Also the ladies of the town for the willing and generous response to all the calls made upon them during the year. It was not expected that all the members of the Auxiliary would be present at every meeting, but it was suggested that by a little forethought and planing all the members could be present at some of the meetings during the year. Financially the year has been a prosperous one, but there yet remained, as the Treasurer's report would show, a little debt, and there was still a great deal of work to be done, both financially and otherwise, and it was strongly urged that the special work of the Association in the interests of the moral welfare of young men should appeal more particularly to the mothers whose sons would be benefitted by the work the Association was doing which would be the more effective in proportion to the extent of the co-operation and united efforts of those interested.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

Mrs. M. J. Frost, Secretary, presented her report as follows:—

Annual report of the Ladies' Auxiliary for 1903:

During the past year eight regular and four special meetings were held, with an average attendance of eight.

The usual auxiliary work has been carried on very successfully. In January last was held a carpet tea to provide a new carpet for the parlour floor. Samples of carpet were voted upon, the carpet receiving the largest number of votes being chosen. Oysters were served in the evening.

The eighth annual convention of the Y.M.C.A. was held in Peterborough in February from the fifth to the eighth, which proved both a pleasure and benefit to our society.

Friday evening, February 6th, the Ladies' Auxiliary entertained all the delegates to a banquet in the hall of the building. In February the ladies decided to issue a souvenir calendar for the coming Christmas, also to hold quarterly open meetings, the first of which was held on March 25th. After the regular business of the meeting tea cake were served. A solo by Mrs. Scott was appreciated by all, also papers by Mrs. Whiten and Mrs. Mason.

In March the Auxiliary decided to adopt the plan of collecting 10c monthly from all those willing to contribute, also to hold a concert in the opera house to defray carpet debt. The concert was held on May 1st and was a great success, the ladies clearing $190.05.

TREASURER'S REPORT

Mrs. J. Coyle Brown, Treasurer, presented her report as below:—

Abstract statement of the Treasurer of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. from October 30th, 1902 to September 30th, 1903. The items are shown on Treasurer's book.

MARY E. BROWN,
Treasurer.

After some little commendatory remarks upon the reports, they were on motion, adopted.

OFFICERS

The officers for the coming year were then elected as follows:—

Hon. President—Mrs. James Hall.
President—Mrs. (Dr.) Hunter.
1st. Vice-President—Mrs. Wm. Davidson.
2nd Vice-President—Mrs. F. Mason.
Treasurer—Mrs. J. Coyle Brown.
Secretary—Mrs. M. J. Frost.
Assistant Secretary — Mrs. W. Whiten.
Pianist—Miss Ackerman.

The following Committees were struck:—

Membership—All the members of the Auxiliary.

Social—Mrs. W. Hamilton, Convenor, Mesdames. C. B. McAllister, Jas. Madill, John Jeffries, Geo. Matthews, B. Shortly, F. H. Dobbin, G. H. Williamson.

Rooms Committee—Mrs. John Nugent, Convenor, Mesdames. J. C. Brown, F. Mason, Wm. Davidson, Joshua Collins, Shook and W. H. Hill.

The satisfactory nature of the reports presented, and the spirit of interest and enthusiasm that has pervaded the membership during the year under review made the annual meeting an occasion of great encouragement, and stimulated those present as it must stimulate others connected with the Association, to enter upon the work of the coming year with greater zeal. There was a fuller realization of the great amount of important work to be done in promoting the operations of an Association whose success means so much for the moral and physical welfare of the young men of the town and the consequent additions to the happiness of the home and the welfare of Society.

The meeting closed after the usual devotional exercises.

OLD "MOORE'S" ALMANAC.

Some Very Peculiar Things About Canada Within Its Covers.

Knowing the covert belief which the majority of mankind places in soothsayers, says The British Canadian Review, London, and that much confidence is placed in the prognostications of Old Moore's Almanac by the lower classes in this country, one would almost believe that some 'oute official of the Canadian Emigration Department had interviewed the editor of this quaint publication, seeing that the most happy anticipations hold out in the coming years are mainly connected with Canada. "Old Moore" tells us that at the commencement of the year "our sister colony is skating with death on what looks like very thin ice," but we are glad to be reassured "the fair maiden will not fall through," and we are greatly cheered by reading that "Old Moore" predicts "a most prosperous future for this grand country." In February, we are told that "Canadian rails will be strong." During April the enterprising Yankee will apparently endeavor to make a corner in corn, and as the prophet tells us that "England will be well on the alert," and the Yankees "will burn their fingers," we feel comforted. In July we are told to expect news from British Columbia "which will bring a heavy rush of miners to that colony." As British Columbia is a large territory, it is perhaps a pity that "Old Moore" could not have indicated more nearly the location. We wonder if he has heard about the recent discovery of rich quarts in the Lardeau district? In September we get this cryptic prophecy: "The whole of the Empire will have occasion to rejoice on the receipt of some wonderfully good news which will come to us by cable from Canada, business in many quarters will improve in consequence, and the increase of emigration to that colony will be very marked." "Old Moore's prophecies" may very likely help to swell the tide of emigration to Canada, as this penny almanac is widely read by the masses, many of whom still believe in Mother Shipton and others of that ilk.

"What time the grey fly winds her sultry horn" is the time we usually have composed ourselves to sleep. The manner of winding the horn is too familiar to us all. It is an ominous sound of a summer's night, for the mosquito is a nocturnal insect. Low and deep is the note borne to our slowly involving consciousness as the limbs relax and the breath draws long. At some stage, however, we take hold, pause and try to recover ourselves. The droning changes to a higher, shriller, fiercer key, ending in a small shriek that suddenly awakes us to the knowledge that some part of our exposed anatomy has been selected as a banqueting place. We rise with haste, and profane, to strike a light, and anxiously scan the rails and walls for a grey fly with a horn and humps and a mouth that for its size is one of the marvels of nature. No less than five lancets, fitted with dreadful harpoon-like hooks, are used to pierce the skin of her victim. To the wound thus made she applies her proboscis and sucks her fill of blood. If the dire deed is done on the back of your hand you can detain the enemy at your will by clenching your fist, so tightening the skin and preventing the extrication of the harpoon. Gloat, then, over her helpless struggles to escape, before delivering the fatal blow.

The droning sound and the agility of the mosquito are attributable to the rapid vibration of the mosquito's wings. These vibrations have been measured by means of a siren and found to number 9,000 a minute. What mere man can hope to compete with an insect that can get a hustle on like that. The shriller music of the mosquito is made by special organs situated like little drums on the openings of the air tubes. Her song serves a double purpose; in warning her human victims of her approach, and in signalling her approach to her lovers. It is the female in this case that enjoys the gift of song. It may somewhat mitigate our rage and pain in the watches of the night to reflect that the voice we hear with dread is the signal of delight on another plane of existence.—Pharos, in Toronto Globe.

Felt Faint and Had to Sit Down While Speaking in Senate.

THE DEBATE THEN WENT OVER

Secretary of State Attributes His Sudden Indisposition to the Heat of the Chamber, and He Felt Better Immediately on Reaching the Purer Air Outside—Walked Home After the Attack.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—The debate on the Grand Trunk Pacific bill, which was commenced in the Senate last night, came to an abrupt conclusion owing to the indisposition of the Government leader, Hon. R. W. Scott. Mr. Scott had been speaking vigorously for an hour and a quarter, amid considerable interruption, in support of the motion for the second reading of the bill, when he was obliged to desist and sit down. The Secretary of State waited for a minute or two in the hope that the feeling of faintness which had seized him would pass away, and then made an effort to resume his remarks. It was then suggested that the debate should be adjourned until to-day, and this was greeted with loud cries of "carried." The debate then went over and the House adjourned at 9.30.

Mr. Scott was accompanied from the chamber by two physicians, Senators Fiset and Duncan McMillan. He walked up and down for a few minutes in the reading room, and afterwards retired to Senator Watson's room, where he could enjoy greater privacy. His sons, Messrs. W. L. Scott and D'Arcy Scott, were soon on hand. The Secretary of State insisted upon walking home, and left the Senate, accompanied by Mr. D'Arcy Scott and Mr. Fiset. It is hoped that Mr. Scott's illness is not serious, and that he will be quite recovered today.

He explains his indisposition by the fact that the heat in the chamber was oppressive. The feeling of faintness passed off the moment he reached cooler and purer air. Mr. Scott is 78 years of age, and his activity and vitality for this advanced age are impressive. It is perhaps attributable to the fact that he has been a vegetarian, or practically so, for many years. He was elected Mayor of Ottawa in 1852, and was returned to the Legislature for Ottawa in 1857.

Mr. Aylesworth and Lord Alverstone.

Inquiries by members of the Opposition elicited from the Treasury benches yesterday morning the opinion that the language attributed to Mr. A. B. Aylesworth in reference to the position taken by Lord Alverstone with regard to the Canadian contention in the Alaskan boundary case was not to be accepted without hesitation and inquiry. The report concerning Lord Alverstone's alleged avowed opinion that the United States had the stronger case was characterized by Sir Richard Cartwright as almost impossible of credence. The promised attack by the Opposition upon the administration of the census branch of the Agricultural Department was made by Mr. R. Blain, who charged that the expenditure was excessive and extravagant. The Government majority on his amendment in a small House was 34. Hon. Sydney Fisher, in reply, explained the reason why the cost of the census in 1901 was greater than in 1891, and gave some striking illustrations of the methods by which the returns of the former census were manipulated. In supply about $2,000,000 was voted.

LENNOX ELECTION CASES.

Homer Miles and Elias P. Smith Charged With Bribery.

Napanee, Oct. 13.—Messrs. Homer Miles and Elias P. Smith, two respectable farmers residing near Napanee, were summoned yesterday before Mr. Justice Teetzel to answer charges of corruption in connection with the last Provincial election in Lennox. The charge was that Mr. Miles, at the request of Mr. Smith, had given one Maley two dollars to induce him to vote for Mr. Madole. The evidence of Maley was practically unsupported. He admitted that he had since the election endeavored to make money out of the alleged transaction by causing actions to be brought against both Smith and Miles, which actions were dismissed owing to his failure to put up security for costs. Mr. Smith most emphatically denied that he in any way endeavored to influence Maley by improper means. Mr. Miles admitted loaning Maley two dollars, but swore that no mention was made of the election, and that the transaction had no connection with the election. Judgment was reserved.

Homes For Rubber Workers.

Port Dalhousie, Oct. 13.—The Toronto Rubber Company proposes erecting a large boarding house and 35 dwellings for non-union employes, since accommodation in the village has been denied the working people of the factory. The company has purchased the Clark farm for the colony, and the contract has been let for several of the houses.

Factory For Gravenhurst.

Gravenhurst, Oct. 13.—The bylaw which was voted on yesterday between the Town of Gravenhurst and Digby Grimston, for the establishing of a factory, was carried by a large majority, the voting being almost unanimous, viz., 257 for and 6 against.

Died in Halifax.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 13.—The death occurred yesterday of Lieut.-Col. Charles J. Macdonald, postoffice inspector.

Canada and Her Canals.

The Rochester, New York, Chamber of Commerce sent a commissioner into Canada to study the canal system there in operation, under construction and projected, and to ascertain if artificial waterways there stood in danger from the proposed $10,000,000 canal across New York State, on which the people are to vote next November. In his report to President Dunn, Commissioner Dennis says that the Canadian does not feel at all disturbed about the proposed 12-foot waterway here. An American ship canal which would receive vessels of the great lakes and take them to the seaboard with their cargoes unbroken would be regarded as a menace to Canadian commerce, but having now canals deeper than ours will be, when completed, 10 or 15 years hence, if ordered by the people, Canadians feel no apprehension about competition. As Canadians abandoned their own ten-foot canals many years ago, a twelve-foot waterway seems to them to be trivial in these days when engineering skill has opened up possibilities of ship canals, the Commissioner says.

Grew Nest in the North.

The interesting fact has lately come to the attention of the Government scientists that the frog, the edible variety, attains its greatest and best development not, as one would imagine, in the semitropical swamps of Florida and Louisiana, but in far northern Canada, on the extreme northern limit at which these reptiles are found. This bears out an old and pretty safe rule that both plants and animals attain their best development at the northernmost point of their habitat. Thus the diamond back terrapin of the Chesapeake brings nearly eight times the price of the diamond back of Louisiana, and the best oranges are grown not in tropical Cuba (people of the older generation still remember the coarse grained, sourish Havana oranges), but in northern Florida, where the trees are frequently cut down by the hard frosts and cold weather.—Washington Post.

TONE IS BELLICOSE.

Attitude of Press Although War Has Not Been Declared.

BEAR AND JAPS PREPARING.

Britain May Be Involved in the Event of War—All Reports Indicate That a Crisis in the Far East Is Almost at Hand — Heavy Reinforcements For Russian Fleets.

London, Oct. 13.—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Kobe, Oct. 12, reports that the situation is somewhat easier, but that the tone of the press is distinctly bellicose, while the same paper's correspondent at Geneva says that several Russian officers there have been suddenly recalled to rejoin their regiments.

Other special despatches describe Russian war preparations, etc., and the newspapers are already publishing maps and estimate of the naval and military forces of the prospective belligerents. The greatest attention is paid to the changed tone of Baron Hayashi, the Japan Minister in London, who is much less confident that peace will be preserved than he was a week ago.

It is noteworthy that the King has just approved the appointment of Vice-Admiral Sir Gerard Noel as commander-in-chief of the China station. Vice-Admiral Noel is an officer of great energy and decision. It was he who cleaned the Turkish troops out of Crete because of an insult to the British flag.

The peculiar official explanation of the postponement of the Czar's visit to Rome "owing to circumstances over which he has no control," is interpreted in some quarters to mean that the threatening outlook in Far Eastern affairs calls for the Emperor's presence in Russia. There is no confirmation of the alarmist rumor.

Russia's Troops Move.

London, Oct. 13.—A despatch from Moscow to The Times, dated Oct. 10, states that a large force of Russian troops under orders for the Far East are now on their way thither by rail from Kharkoff. The Russian correspondents of the same paper send quotations from newspaper articles, pointing to Russia's intention to remain in occupation of Manchuria, and add that it is reported from Vladivostock that as a result of famine in China, roving bands of Chinese have crossed into Manchuria, where their presence constitutes a danger to the Manchurian railway, and that this necessitates keeping Russian troops in Southern Manchuria for an indefinite period.

Prepare For War.

Yokohama, Oct. 13.—The announcement of M. Lessar, the Russian Minister to China, that the Manchurian convention between Russia and China has lapsed is received here with ridicule.

Despatches from Che Foo report that a Russian warship and a transport with 500 troops left Port Arthur, Oct. 4, for Corea. Sixty Japanese civilians left Port Arthur, Oct. 10, for Nagasaki. The Russian forces at New Chwang are reported to have been increased.

Gen. Kodama, the Japanese Home Minister, has been appointed chief assistant to the military staff. The Premier will assume Gen. Kodama's portfolio.

The Premier and the Ministers for War, Navy and Foreign Affairs had a simultaneous audience of the Emperor yesterday. Baron Von Rosen, the Russian Minister, and Baron Komura, the Japanese Foreign Minister, have not yet had a conference.

Public Opinion Excited.

London, Oct. 13.—It was announced at the Foreign Office yesterday, relative to the situation in the Far East, that the powers having treaty rights with China will require such rights to be maintained unimpaired, whatever arrangement Russia makes with China. If these rights are respected the British officials consider it improbable that either Japan or any other power will do anything which may threaten peace in the Far East.

In spite of the reassuring statements of the Foreign Office and Baron Hayashi, the frequent iteration that hostilities between Russia and Japan are imminent, the mysterious movements of the Russian and Japanese fleets and the excited state of public opinion in Japan are beginning to cause disquiet in Great Britain. Only the most sanguine persons believe that in the event of hostilities they could be kept within the limits which free Great Britain from her obligation to support her Japanese ally.

Baron Hayashi was not so optimistic yesterday. Indirectly he admits the possibility of war by expressing the hope that in the event of a crisis Japan will have the active sympathy of Great Britain. Baron Hayashi admitted the diplomatic situation had changed since Oct. 8.

Reached a Crisis.

Berlin, Oct. 13.—The relations between Japan and Russia have reached a crisis, according to the official view here.

No Act of War.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Aside from extensive military preparations by both nations, the Japanese Legation here is not advised that either Russia or Japan has as yet committed any act of war.

Battleships on the Way.

Port Said, Oct. 13.—The Russian battleship Czarewitch and the Russian armored cruiser Bayan, arrived here yesterday, bound for Chinese waters. The Czarewitch proceeded yesterday.

Do Not Prove Obdurate.

London, Oct. 13.—John Redmond warns the Irish landlords and the Irish Government not to prove obdurate regarding the sale of land.

Pile Claims in Canada.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 13.—Miners in Bear Creek district, Portland Canal, on the northern border of British Columbia, and now considered in United States territory, are locating their properties in the British Columbia mining recorder's office, fearing the territory will be awarded to Canada at the close of the Alaskan Boundary Commission sessions, now on in London.

Pulp Wood in Lake Ontario.

Watertown, N. Y., Oct. 13.—The boom of the Dexter Pulp and Paper Company at Dexter was broken by the rapid swelling of Black River Sunday night and 100 cords of pulp wood carried into Lake Ontario. The greater part of the wood will probably be saved, but the expense of reclaiming it will reach about $1,500.

$2,000,000 Damage.

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 13.—Yesterday morning thousands of men, women and children employed in mills and factories could not go to work on account of the mills and factories being shut down. Conservative estimates place the loss by floods at $2,000,000.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN CREDIT

(The Chronicle.)

Our United States contemporaries are never weary of drawing disparaging comparisons between the financial affairs of Great Britain and those of their own country. Such patriotic pride is creditable to a people, but displays of it so incessantly are somewhat wearisome. When the sign is first hoisted on a booth, "Greatest Show on Earth," it attracts attention, but in a brief space of time it is passed unnoticed. Were the American Eagle to take a rest now and again and not be continually screaming and flapping its wings its demonstrations would be more effective. The "British Press" is not given to such boasting. Some of the most ably edited papers published never make, and never did make comparisons between England and other nations in order to exalt their own land at the expense of a foreign one. "Comparisons are odorous" said Mrs. Malaprop, when made as a boast they are indeed odious.

The "New York Times" has been comparing the price of Consols and the price of United States bonds, and the amount of each country's national debt in order to show thereby how financially superior is America to Great Britain. When the British debt is compared to the American the debts of the several States are usually overlooked. It is also forgotten that, debts are gross and net, and to give the amount of a nation's gross debt without referring to its assets is a very unbusinesslike statement. Canada, for instance, has a gross debt of $366,112,017, but it owns assets to extent of $106,677,293, by which the net debt is reduced to $259,434,723 and the national properties in value exceed that amount. If our American friends wish to get a clearer, more accurate view of the situation they are fond of discussing as it is seen by them through a dense fog of national prejudice, they should learn what is the total amount of the net public debts of all kinds for which the people of the United States are liable, and what is the amount resting on the people of Great Britain. With these data in hand and others relative to the subject, a reasonable judgment might be formed as to the respective financial conditions of the two countries. The comparison instituted by the "New York Times" is made from much too imperfect data to have any statistical value.

The theory that, the United States is much wealthier than Great Britain is demonstrated to be a myth, a delusion, a mere fantasy born of national vanity by the notorious fact that, the alleged richer nation is very heavily the debtor of the poorer country. Uncle Sam struts around swaggering about his wealth, but he is perpetually asking poor John Bull to advance him a few dollars, although his debt to Mr. Bull already amounts to a larger sum than Sam could pay without calling in an auctioneer and selling off part of his property.

Our New York contemporary argues that the superior financial position of the United States as compared with England is shown by Consols, yielding 2 7-8 per cent. whereas United States bonds yield only 1.84 per cent. From this comparison it concludes that the British Government has to pay a 50 per cent. higher rate for loans than the United States Government, and that the credit of the two countries, as reflected by the burdens they have to bear, is thus shown to be as three to two in favour of the United States.

There is a vital distinction between British Consols and United States bonds; the former have become the one standard, proverbially sound security for investors who desire to run no risk whatever. Many scores of millions of pounds sterling are held in consols by trustees, trust companies, by retired traders, widows, and the innumerable persons in Great Britain, and all over the globe who are content with the small return of Consols, because nothing short of a world-wide catastrophe could shake their soundness. Such persons would never dream of investing their funds in United States bonds. The very fact that the American Government compels the National Banks to hold $500,000,000 of its bonds as a condition of carrying on their business as bankers, while the English, Scotch and Irish banks have not the slightest restraint of a like nature put upon them, proves to a demonstration that the American Government bonds are not in demand by private investors, and that to float its bonds the United States Government has to force one-half of its entire issue upon the banks. Every bank note issued in the United States is nothing more than a representative of and a fractional part of the Government bonds, and the American public is thus compelled, practically, to advance money to the Government at a nominal rate of interest.

Such a system of compulsory financing to keep up the amount of United States bonds certainly does not justify their being compared with Consols in acceptability to investors. If we allowed the New York Times' argument, that, the soundness of a security is proportionate to the smallness of its yield, some strange situations would arise. If it were followed out to a strictly logical conclusion the soundest of all securities would be those that yielded no revenue.

The financial resources of the United States are prodigious. They are being developed with unprecedented energy and skill. The credit of the United States stands too high to be compared with much older nations. United States credit would be still higher were there more of the conservative spirit in Americans, which they regard as the reproach of the British people. It would tend to the development of a more judicious and more reasonable spirit were the press of the United States to cease bragging and swaggering to the disparagement of Great Britain, to whom they owe all they possess that is the just pride of a nation.

THE CHAMBERLAIN POLICY.

(St. Thomas Journal.)

Mr. Chamberlain's tariff policy as set forth in his Glasgow speech, may be summarized as follows.

Tax of 2s. per quarter (six cents a bushel) on foreign but not on colonial wheat.

Duty of 5 per cent. on foreign meats and dairy produce, except bacon.

Preferential duties on colonial fruits and wines.

Cut the sugar duty in two, with reductions on coffee and cocoa.

In this way Mr. Chamberlain hopes to be able to levy a tax on food, without increasing the cost of living, the remissions being sufficient, he expects, to balance the impositions. The net result, he says, will be, that the town artisan's food will according to elaborate calculation, cost him twopence half-penny (five cents) less per week than it does at present, while that of the agricultural labourer will cost him twopence (four cents) less; but if, as he believed, a great part of the tax on food would be paid by the foreigner, there would be a reduction in the cost of food both for the artisan and the agricultural labourer.

Mr. Chamberlain is concise and candid in his treatment of the colonies. "We can intervene now," he says, "but it is doubtful whether we could intervene twenty years hence. We can say to our colonies, we understand your views and aspirations and do not desire to dictate or think ourselves superior to you: we recognize your right to develop your industries so as not to be dependent on foreign supplies, but there are many things you do not know how to make, for which we have a great capacity of production; leave them to us; do not increase the tariff walls against us; let us exchange with you for your productions; do it because we are kinsmen, because it is good for the empire as a whole, and because we have taken the first step and set you the example; we offer you a preference; we rely upon your patriotism, and your affection, that we shall not be losers thereby."

NEW ASSISTANT SECRETARY.

The appointment of Mr. Thomas Mulvey, K.C., to the position of Assistant Provincial Secretary, places a most efficient man in the service of the province. Mr. Mulvey's training and experience in the law, as well as his personal qualifications, give him a special fitness for the discharge of the duties of the new office. Within the Assistant Provincial Secretary's more especial province comes the control of corporations, and the safeguarding of public interests in connection with the granting of powers under charters to joint stock companies, and in this branch of his work Mr. Mulvey is certain to perform good service to the public. To a judicial mind and clear perception is joined in him a sensitive appreciation of public rights and policy. In his profession, although a young man, he has attained to good standing, with especial prominence in the Admiralty branch of practice. The fact that he has never been an office seeker, and that he was not an applicant for the position to which he has now been appointed, need not be stated to those who know him, but the statement will not lessen the credit which his appointment reflects upon the Government and Mr. Stratton.—Toronto Star.

GEN. MACDONALD VINDICATED.

(Hamilton Times.)

A brief despatch intimates that the commission appointed to inquire into the charges against the late Sir Hector Macdonald, which preyed upon his mind until he took his own life in a Paris hotel, has made its report, declaring them to have been utterly unfounded. The finding goes to show that the gallant soldier was the victim of spite and jealousy. The man who lacked not the courage to face death in the excitement of the battlefield, or challenge the creeping assassin's shot or dagger thrust, broke down under the strain of contemplating himself as the central figure in a trial under a series of odious charges that were, the commissioners say, without "the slightest particle of truth." The brave soldier lacked the special qualities that enable men to bear up under undeserved disgrace. Perhaps he saw a combination of circumstances which in the hands of his enemies would have led many to believe him guilty, and the thought of such a thing turned his brain. Perhaps the rash deed may have resulted from physical causes. He had endured many hardships, climatic exposures, fatigue, exhausting effort—and some of these may have told upon his mental organization so as to render him unfit to bear the shock of the publication of the charges, and self-destruction was the work of one rash moment after reading them in the papers. Whatever the cause, the deed was a fearful mistake—suicide is always a mistake. General Macdonald's friends, however, will remember with pride his military achievements, his rise to a high position by his own unaided exertions, and his great services to his country; and they will mourn that envy and jealousy should have encompassed his destruction. His Scottish fellow-countrymen never wavered in their fealty to his honour, and they are now preparing to erect a fitting memorial to the gallant but unfortunate soldier, whose name will go down on the long roll of Scotland's sons who have nobly served the empire.

THOSE WHO STILL COUNTENANCE GAMEY.

There could be nothing more indecent than Mr. Gamey's tour of the Province, making his scurrilous attacks upon the judges who were obliged, out of his own testimony to condemn him. And in the indecency which characterizes his conduct the men who invite him to their platforms have a large share. It must be a curiously constructed mind that can lionise a man like Gamey and countenance his vilification of the most irreproachable judges that ever sat upon a British bench.—Toronto Star.

LATEST FASHION NOTES.

A BEAUTIFUL BODICE OF PEAU DE SOIE.

Peau de soie was the material of which this pretty little waist was made. It is shirred over cords on both the sleeves and the waist. The heavy lace collar extends well over the shoulders and appears on both the front and back. There is also a narrow strip of the lace down the front reaching to the belt. The collar and belt are outlined with bands of peau de soie, stitched through the middle with Corticellic stitching silk.

Small girls generally wear their skirts quite short, reaching usually to the knees and made very full. The waists are variously trimmed, hem stitching, feather stitching, lace stitching, feather stitching, lace fronts and lace undersleeves being favourite methods of adorning these small garments. Almost all materials are considered suitable for little girls, from muslin to silk, but nothing can be prettier or more simple when they cannot wear wash materials, than the soft wool frocks. Young girls always are delighted with a coat and skirt to match and fashion decrees that they may wear them this year. The skirts are short, made with narrow tucks around the belt and sometimes a flounce, while the jackets often have two or three capes, giving them a very smart appearance.

BAD CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS.

Miss M. Ferguson Killed by a Train at Georgetown—Brakeman Glover Crushed to Death at Chesley.

Georgetown, Oct. 13.—Miss Mary Ferguson was struck and killed by a Grand Trunk engine just west of Georgetown early Sunday evening. While walking on the track on her way to church she was overtaken by the train. She was going through a cutting at the time, and, in trying to scale its steep side, slipped and fell on the rails.

Crushed to Death.

Chesley, Oct. 13.—A brakeman named Glover was crushed to death while coupling cars at Chesley Grand Trunk Railway Station yesterday morning. His home is at Palmerston.

Accident to a Lacrosse Player.

Port Arthur, Oct. 13.—Tucker Turner, well known in lacrosse circles as a fast and reliable player, was very badly injured Sunday at the Canadian Northern elevator here. He was running the steam shovel, moving wheat out of the cars, when his foot got caught in the gear. His leg was broken off clean, just a little below the knee, and his condition is very serious. He had only been married a month.

Motorman Lost Both Legs.

Hamilton, Oct. 13.—Two cars on the radial tried to pass each other on the same track about 7.30 yesterday morning, with the usual disastrous results. Motorman Choate, Burlington, had one foot torn off and the other so badly crushed that it had to be amputated at the City Hospital. He is about 50 years of age, and the shock was so great that he may not recover. Conductor Harrison of the same car had a finger cut off by flying glass. Many passengers were severely cut and bruised. The cars crashed into each other at Ghent's crossing, near the Beach road. The officials say Motorman Choate's car, which left here at 7.10, should have waited at Ghent's Crossing to cross the other car, which left Burlington at the same hour.

Crushed to Death.

Toronto, Oct. 13.—Joseph Smith, 45 years of age, a G.T.R. yardman for the last 20 years, was crushed to death yesterday between two cars. He was a married man, with one daughter, and boarded at 643 West King street. He originally came from Cobourg.

Emery Wheel Burst.

Hamilton, Oct. 13.—Steven Rinker, 83 York street, was taken to the City Hospital yesterday afternoon with what the doctors fear are fatal injuries. He was working over an emery stone in his shop that was propelled by electricity, when the stone broke in two. One part struck Rinker on the forehead. He dropped to the floor like a log. He is still unconscious.

Child Took Strychnine.

Windsor, Oct. 13.—Ida Patterson, the three-year-old daughter of Rev. Mr. Patterson, of Maidstone, went into a convulsion, which lasted thirty minutes, and died. She had opened a box of tablets which her mother had been taking the past week. Dr. Doyle was called, but the child was dead on his arrival. He examined the tablets and found that they contained strychnine, the child having taken a sufficient number to cause death.

3,000 Tons of Coal on Fire.

Toronto, Oct. 13.—Three thousand tons of soft coal, owned by the Toronto Street Railway Company, and piled in their yards at the foot of George street, are on fire, having been burning and smoldering for the past three weeks. Up to the present the coal pile has been depreciated in value many hundred of dollars. Many tons of it are at present nothing more than coke. The company is carting it elsewhere as fast as possible.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child become hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough begins, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance, and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

9,000 Acres of Peat Burning.

A Peculiar Find at Chemong.

Mr. P. Cameron, of Buffalo, N. Y., has been spending his vacation at Chemong. One day of last week Mr. Cameron went aking a stoll along the beach, north of the bridge, and he came across a peculiar stone. On it was the words "Turn Me Over" in a clear black type. Mr. Cameron scarcely knew what to do. However, he did as anybody would do—he turned the stone over, and on the other side he saw this inscription:—"Wise Business Man get their Signs Painted by F. Cook, Peterborough's Exclusive sign Painter. 'Phone 119."

Pandora Range.
MEALS ON TIME.

If a dinner, which should be cooked with a light fire, is fixed for the hour of twelve, you can use a light fire and absolutely depend upon the "Pandora" to cook it by twelve—no need to waste fuel in keeping up an unnecessarily strong fire, "just to make sure." And the same accuracy can be depended upon if a strong fire is necessary.

The hot-air flues force all the heat around the oven twice and directly under every pot hole, which means that every atom of heat is used, and only smoke goes up the chimney; also facilitates the work of cooking.

"Pandora" Range is entirely new, and is equipped with every latest feature for cooking in a hurry, saving fuel, and lessening kitchen troubles generally.

STANDARD SYMPATHY.

London Paper Tactically Handles the Alaskan Boundary Case Although It Is Still Sub Judice.

(Canadian Cable.)

London, Oct. 13.—The Standard, referring to the Alaska Boundary Commission, says: "Here in London we are content to await the publication of the judgment, whereas in Ottawa and in New York a lively game of speculation is going on as to its tenor and probable consequences. On both sides of the Atlantic absolute confidence is placed in the capacity of Lord Alverstone and his British colleagues to give the fullest consideration and assign just weight to every feature of the Canadian contention. It would be lamentable if the award, when known, should fail to commend itself to the unreserved assent of the two communities primarily concerned in the decision. It will lose much of its value if received with distrust by either of the affected parties. The award of the majority, according to the treaty, to be binding is the supreme interest lying at stake outside the strict pale of judicial interpretation. No fact in recent history is more striking than the close and warm affection that has grown up between the island home of the Anglo-Saxon race and our numerous kinsmen in the United States, but the cause of our sympathy with America operates with even greater force in the case of the hopes and wishes of our Canadian fellow citizens. The Canadian Government and people regard with national pride their splendid and as yet imperfectly developed domain the Northwest. It is easy, therefore, to understand and impossible not to sympathize with their anxiety that the award should not deprive them of access from the Pacific Ocean."

In the Home Stretch.

London, Oct. 13.—The secret session of the Alaskan Boundary Commission began yesterday. A. B. Aylesworth, K.C., was late in arriving, and caused some anxiety. The Commissioners adjourned at 3.10 p. m. without a decision.

A SPEECHLESS DINNER.

Lord Strathcona One of the Guests of Yankee Side.

London, Oct. 13.—John W. Foster and the American counsel of the Alaskan Boundary Tribunal, entertained the Arbitration Commissioners and the English counsel at a dinner last night at the Carlton Hotel. United States Ambassador Choate, Lord Strathcona and Sir Thomas Sanderson, Permanent Under Foreign Secretary, were the guests of the evening. Forty-one persons were present. No speeches were made.

MAKE JUST ONE MORE TRIAL.

No Matter How Many Remedies You Have Tried, Here is one That Will Cure Your Piles.

If you are suffering from pain and torture of piles and want to be cured spend 50 cents at the druggists for one package of Pyramid Pile Cure, and convince yourself beyond a doubt that it can be done. There is no earthly doubt that this remedy will cure you just as it has cured thousands and thousands of others, if you follow the directions and give it a fair trial.

You may have tried so many remedies that you may feel that yours is a hopeless case. You may have become discouraged and suffered so long that it is almost second nature to you. It makes no difference how serious your case is, or how long you may have had it, you will be cured just the same.

Pyramid Pile Cure is in the form of suppositories, and reaching the seat of the trouble gives instant relief. It does away with the torture of the knife and the humiliation of an examination and operation by the physician. It is administered by the sufferer himself in the privacy of the home. There is no record of it ever failing to cure the most severe, aggravated and long standing cases.

Mrs. R. T. C. Boylan, Marshall, Mississippi, writes: "I suffered awful torture for years from piles. I used Pyramid Pile Cure and was well in three days."

Amos Crocker, of Worcester, writes, "After going through a frightful surgical operation and after trying any number of salves and ointments, one 50 cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure gave speedy relief, and it quickly cured me."

James Kenton, Memphis, Tenn., says: "I suffered the tortures of itching piles for years, and not even mercurial ointment would relieve me. One 50 cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure cured me entirely."

Pyramid Pile Cure is for sale by all druggists, or will be sent upon receipt of price, 50 cts. a package, by Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich.

Clericals Kill Socialists.

Bilbao, Oct. 13.—As a result of a collision between Socialists engaged in a demonstration and a body of clericals, seven persons were killed and thirty-three were wounded. Revolvers were fired from the Catholic clubs and from the windows of the Church of St. Nicholas. The vicar of that church was arrested on the charge of shooting several Socialists, and a number of other priests were arrested, charged with instigating riots.

Committed Suicide.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—W. S. Russell, manager for James Coristine & Company, wholesale furriers, drew a revolver yesterday morning in his office and put a bullet through his temple, and is now lying in a dying condition in the General Hospital. The motive for the deed is not known. Russell is a married man of 45. He resided at Norwood, a suburb on the Back River.

LIFE OF THE HOUSE.

Austen Chamberlain Tells the Conditions of Dissolution.

DEPENDS UPON WAR OFFICE.

Lessons of the Boer War, as Set Forth in the Commission's Report, Must Be Applied and War Office Reorganized—Mr. Chamberlain Elaborating His Scheme and Preparing Reply to Objections.

London, Oct. 13.—Mr. Chamberlain is now resting at his residence in Birmingham, and is not engaged to speak for another fortnight. He will utilize the interval to elaborate his scheme and prepare a reply to the objections raised by his opponents. Meanwhile the fiscal campaign is being vigorously pursued in the country. Speeches will be delivered daily by political leaders, particularly of the Liberal party.

Austen Chamberlain, the new Chancellor of the Exchequer, replying to a vote of congratulation at Acock's Green, Worcestershire, his Parliamentary constituency, last night, said that the Government would not dissolve until the lessons of the South African war commission report had been applied and the war office reorganized.

The foregoing interesting announcement confirms the general impression that it is the Government's intention to meet Parliament and proceed with business, leaving the fiscal problem as far as any attempt at legislation is concerned.

Mr. Ritchie Explains.

Mr. Ritchie, late Chancellor of the Exchequer, has written a letter in explanation of his recent speech. He says in part: "May I add that when I spoke of possible difficulties between the United States and Canada I was proceeding to say that the United States might punish Canada by refusing free entrance to her harbors of Canadian wheat for shipment to Great Britain if Canadian wheat enjoyed preference in our markets, but there was so much interruption that I was unable to complete my sentence. Doubtless, it would have been better to use the word penalize than punish; but, I think, had my sentence been completed, it would not have been open to the objections which have been made to that portion of my speech."

Afraid of Defence Idea.

London, Oct. 13.—(C. A. P.)—The Post's special correspondent in Canada writes: French-Canadians generally are convinced that Chamberlain's scheme includes compulsory military service."

He says that an Ottawa Minister, probably the next Premier, told him that "he would be ready to go to the country on Chamberlain's scheme and carry the election, provided that no rider were tacked on about any contribution for Imperial defence."

Profits in Railways.

London, Oct. 13.—(C.A.P.)—Referring to the Canadian Pacific Railway's increased receipts The Financial News says: "We are not surprised that the Canadian Government want to do some railway building on its own account."

Throw Them Down.

London, Oct. 13.—(C. A. P.)—The Morning Leader says: "No two countries in the world are more designed of nature to have free interchange of commodities than Canada and the United States. The sooner they break down the artificial barriers between them the better for us, as it would tend to extend the system to England and create an Imperial free trade."

LAND SLIDE IN QUEBEC.

Many Buildings Wrecked and Cattle Killed at Poupore.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—Three hundred acres of rock and earth slid into Du Lievre River at Poupore, twelve miles above Buckingham, Quebec, at 5.15 o'clock Sunday morning. The noise sounded very much like an earthquake, and the residents were for a time panic-stricken. The house of Mr. Clements, which had been located on a hill, was moved into a hollow. All the barns and outbuildings were wrecked and the cattle killed. The live stock of Maurice Brazeau were also killed, and the outbuildings destroyed. A yawning chasm was created in front of Mr. Brazeau's door. One hundred acres of land from Duncan McMillan's farm slid into the river. The outbuildings of Alexander Clemow, who lives a half a mile from the river, were ruined and his house damaged.

A Toad in a Hole.

If you poke about the corners of a garden you will soon understand, says the Garden, how the stories of toads imprisoned in a solid rock arise. You hardly ever find a toad in its chosen retreat without wondering how it managed to get in and how it proposes to get out again, and our ancesters enshrined this batrachian habit in the phrase "toad in a hole" as the name of a dish in which a piece of meat is baked inside a batter, with no visible means of entrance or exit. This peculiar faculty of the toad for burying himself without leaving a trace behind is due to his trick of burrowing backward, as a crab does, his strong hind legs shovelling the earth forward until he is covered.

BARRELS ARE SCARCE.

Apple Men Down Near Brighton Are Much Worried.

Brighton, Oct. 13.—The scarcity of apple barrels in this section is becoming a serious matter. The coopers cannot fill more than one-half their orders, claiming they cannot get enough stock to keep their workmen busy. Barrels are being imported from Western Ontario, but not in very large quantities, as the price is very high. The price of barrels has jumped from last year's mark of 32 cents to present price of 50 cents. The result will be that a great many apples in this section and Prince Edward will be frozen on the trees before barrels can be secured to pack them in, and the crop is unusually heavy in these sections.

Stern Will Go Back.

Toronto, Oct. 13.—After fighting for nearly two months against extradition, Leopold Stern, who is wanted by the United States Government in connection with the postal scandals at Washington, has thrown up the sponge and will return to stand trial on a charge of receiving money under false pretences. He will accompany the United States officers, who are here, at once.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley, "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for the same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grip; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. How People Came to Have Blue Eyes.

There is a legend about blue eyes that is very interesting. When the world was first made people all had, so runs the story, eyes as dark as the duskiest night. And of all the people on the face of the earth the fairest was a maiden who lived on the banks of a great sea and who used to sit and watch the waves roll up on the shore and anxiously wait for her father, who was a sailor, to come home and bring the day's net of fish. But one night the fisherman did not come home, and his daughter sat and watched for him until morning. And all next day she walked up and down the sands, still gazing at the sea and praying for her father's return. But as day after day passed and all hope of him was given up and his empty boat was washed upon the shore the girl lost heart and cried bitterly. All day long she sat on the beach looking into the blue water until little by little her eyes turned from black to blue, so the story runs, and that is how there came to be so many blue eyed people in the world.

But when her guardian angel saw the change and noticed how the girl grieved she whispered to her "that henceforth half of all the great people of the earth should have blue eyes.

CENTRAL MILLING CO'S ANNUAL MEETING

Held This Afternoon to Elect Directors and Receive Reports.

The second annual meeting of the shareholders of the Central Milling Company, Limited, is being held this afternoon, commencing at 2 o'clock, in the Foresters' Hall. The principal business was the reception of reports from the president and secretary-treasurer, and the election of directors.

It is expected that the reports will show the year to have been a most successful one. The mills have been running at their full capacity, and a ready market has been found for the product. It has been found necessary during the year to erect a new steel-clad elevator with a storage capacity of 50,000 bushels, which will greatly facilitate the operation of the mills. This elevator was to have been completed by September 1st, but because of delays in building material it is but now ready to be used.

It is not anticipated that there will be many changes in the directorate of the company. The following directors are now in office: Messrs. D. Carlow, president; G. F. Warde, secretary-treasurer; J. Stoddard, G. Taylor, W. Hall, J. W. Lucas, J. Madill.

The shareholders include many of the most prosperous farmers in Peterborough County

Stone by stone and brick by brick the Cereal Company's new dam and power house are being erected and at present the work stands in a state verging on completion. Of late the operations of the workmen have been directed mainly on the brickwork of the power house and the foundation and erection of the north abuttement, while a gang of men from the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company have been putting up the iron framing to the power house. The brick work of this part of the building has been completed, while it will not be so very long before the cementing will be done. Five pillars stand up in a state of finish awaiting the completion of the other five, which are being begun upon, ere the superstructure of the bridge is commenced. The north abuttement has been founded and begun and one can safely say that it will not be so very long before the same will be opened.

A FORMER NORWOOD RESIDENT DEAD.

William S. Russell an Employee of Jas. Coristine & Co. of Montreal.

An Associated Press despatch tells of the death in Montreal of a former Norwood resident. The despatch is as follows:

Montreal, Oct. 12. — William S. Russell, who has been for twenty years in the employ of Jas. Coristine & Co., of this city, was found almost dead at his desk in the company's warehouse this morning, shortly after he had begun his work for the day. A revolver shot summoned the other employees, and when they reached the spot they found the man unconscious with a bullet wound in the head, and a smoking revolver lying close at hand. A removal was quickly made to the General Hospital where death followed at six o'clock this evening. No reason can be given for the man's action, except that despondency had been noticed of late. Russell came originally from Norwood."

OUR INCREASED ASSESSMENT.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—I desire to call your readers' attention to the unbusiness-like conduct of the majority of our present council. To-day they are engaged in a law suit to test whether or not they can pay to the Peterborough Light and Power Co. the sum of $14,000 more for our street lighting than the Otonabee Power Co. are willing to supply the same light for. I should have thought that if there were any favours going they would have been given to the Otonabee Power Co, as they have been the means of reducing the cost of domestic lighting one-half of what it was before they entered the field. Instead of being favoured in any way the council seem to be willing to pay the Peterborough Light and Power Company anything they may choose to ask. From this unbusiness-like conduct it is quite easy to see why the assessment of our property is being increased over $300,000 this year. That means that the taxes of every property-holder in town will be increased, I would suggest that a property holders' association should be formed to enquire into the administration of the affairs of the town during this last few years and that a report be made to the ratepayers before the next municipal election takes place. I am satisfied that the investigation will prove that the majority of our council are incompetent to fill the positions they occupy. We can surely find thirteen men in town who will know that light at $35.00 per lamp is cheaper than light at $50.00 per lamp.

Yours truly,
WM. SNOWDEN.

DAVEY'S BODY FOUND.

Was Drowned in Sturgeon Lake More Than a Week ago.

The body of Albert Davey, who was drowned in Sturgeon Lake a week ago Saturday, was discovered Sunday afternoon by a party patrolling the lake in Mr. Brown's yacht. It was found near Graham's Landing, and in his pockets was found fifteen cents, tobacco and pipe. Dr. Burrows, coroner, was notified. An inquest was held at Sturgeon Point yesterday.—Lindsay, Post.

REV. DR. SYMONDS ON THE ANGLICAN CHURCH.

At Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, on Sunday morning, the Rev. Dr. Symonds continued his series of sermons on "The Church," his theme being "The Anglican Branch of the Church," his text being taken from 1st Corinthians, xii., 5:—"There are diversities of administration, but the same Lord." A large congregation listened to the remarks of the preacher.,

At the outset of his discourse, Prof. Symonds gave a brief historical sketch of the Anglican Church; then he spoke of the Reformation, which, he said, really belonged, not to the reign of Henry VIII., who "was a Roman Catholic to the day of his death, only a disloyal Roman Catholic," but to that of Edward VI. This was followed by a resume of the problem which faced the Reformers in "arranging religious affairs so as to hold in one the whole people" — those on the one hand who were prepared "to accept the breach with the Pope, but who wished to keep their old services and ceremonies," those, secondly, who were "in favour of reform both of theology and worship;" and thirdly, "the extreme Protestants, who wanted "to sweep away everything and make a clean start altogether."

Passing on, Dr. Symonds spoke of the ideal of the Anglican Church, what she had "to offer to the world as her contribution to the stream of organized effort to realize the kingdom of righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost."

EAT SAND AND BE HEALTHY.

That was Prof. Windsor's Advice at the Y. M. C. A. Hall Last Night.

"Eat sand if you want to be healthy," was the text of the remarkable lecture delivered at Y.M.C.A. Hall last night by Prof. W. Windsor, the phrenologist. The lecture was perhaps the most interesting of any the professor has yet delivered here.

Professor Windsor took the position that all disease is caused by filth and that to keep clean and avoid disease of all forms, whether it be smallpox or fevers, one should learn the current of magnetism possessed by oneself and control it. This was the basis of the lecture on "How to Become Healthy."

The professor explained that there are two kinds of stomachs, the electric and the magnetic. The man with a dark mouth has an electric stomach and needs warm food, while the man with a bright red mouth has a magnetic stomach and eats his food cold all the time.

Expiating on the kinds of food which man should eat he said that nothing should ever be slaughtered for food, that it was sinful to take human life except in self defence, therefore he was opposed to the slaughter of beaves and to capital punishment.

At the conclusion of the lecture all of the audience passed in review before the lecturer and by taking the hand of each Professor Windsor was able to say whether each person was magnetic or electric.

His lecture to-night will be on "Matrimony."

ST. PETER'S CEMETERY BEING BEAUTIFIED.

Extensive Improvements Have Been Made to the Grounds.

During the last few weeks marked changes and improvements in the appearance of St Peter's Cemetery, have been effected, and those visiting that locality will notice a much appreciated additional beauty given to the spot. The cemetery committee, of which Rev. Father McColl is the chairman, has had the work in charge; in fact it is due to the energy and enterprise of the chairman that the work of improvement was commenced.

A new iron fence has been erected along the front of the cemetery, which is a decided improvement, and constitutes one of the most noticeable improvements. This fence was manufactured in Ottawa, and was shipped here ready to be erected. In addition to the fence in front, new fences have been built on all sides of the property, and a large addition has been made to the size of the grounds by taking in a plot on the south end, which will give additional room.

The grounds themselves have been given considerable attention. Nearly all the graves have been lowered, and the whole cemetery graded; where a difference of level has existed terraces were made, which has added greatly to the appearance.

The ground on which sod had not formed was seeded, and the grounds all cleaned up.

Water works have also been installed, which will enable the green covering to be kept fresh during the summer months, and flowers may also be grown.

The extensive works mentioned above have been carried out by Mr. Jas O'Keefe, with an efficient staff of workmen, and the results of their labours may well be pleasing to them, as they are doubtless to the members of the committee, and, in fact, the whole parish.

ST. LUKE'S YOUNG MEN'S GUILD MEET.

Regular Meeting Held Last Night and Address Given by Canon Greene

The second monthly meeting of St. St. Luke's Young Men's Guild was held last night in the Sunday school room. There was a fairly large attendance and considerable enthusiasm was manifested in the meeting. After the regular routine business had been despatched, the Guild listened with interest to an address given by Canon Greene, of Orillia, in which he spoke of the benefits to be derived from the social gathering together of the young men of the church.

This was followed by refreshments served by the ladies, and brought to a close a very enjoyable evening. The president of the Guild, Mr. J. J. Turner, jr., occupied the chair.

The Guild in its work this season, is pursuing a somewhat different line to that adopted in former years. There is an effort being made to have the young men become interested, and make the younger element predominate.

This is the oldest Guild in the town, and the success which it has attained has doubtless influenced the other Guilds in their institution. The annual election of officers will be held on the second Tuesday in December.

VICTORIA CHEESE BOARD MEETING.

Over 1200 Boxes Boarded but no Sales Were Made.

A meeting of the Victoria Cheese Board was held at Lindsay yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. The buyers present were Messrs. Flavelle, Fitzgerald, Cook and Whitton. Over 1,200 boxes were boarded by thirteen factories, but as the price offered wasn't high enough, the meeting was adjourned for a week.

The following factories boarded the number of cheese set opposite:—

Star	131
Cameron	102
Dunsford	122
Mariposa	100
Cambray	70
Janetville	65
Omemee	144
North Ops	82
Pine Grove	45
Reaboro	80
Maple Leaf	120
Palestine	100
North Verulam	108

THE NUMBER GROWS.

Eighty new members have joined the Y.M.C.A. as a result of the premium plan thus far. These have been brought in by thirty members, a number of whom have had their tickets extended for a year—having secured five or more each. There are scores of members who have not taken advantage of this plan, which will be in force until Nov. 1st. There should be a large increase in membership this year.

The rule to receive in no boys under 12 years of age has been strictly adhered to for the past three seasons and will continue. Experience of this Association and many others proves the wisdom of this, both for the good of the boys and the Association.

There is no Y.M.C.A. building better equipped or able to offer better inducements to young men. This should lead the members to even greater activity in bringing the benefits to the large number of young men not yet on the roll.

Bishop Pinkham Here.

Bishop Pinkham, of Calgary, Alta., was in town to-day on his way from the meeting of Bishops, recently held in Toronto, to Washington, D. C., where he will represent the Canadian Church at a missionary conference. The Bishop was here in 1891 and addressed a meeting on that occasion.

In Thanksgiving features the November Designer is wonderfully strong.

THE LATEST NEWS OF LOCAL SPORT.

The Wellesleys Will not Withdraw From the O. R. F. U.

An Exciting Match to be Played off on Thursday at the Oval—Will Peterborough Hold the Cup?

RUGBY.

Local Rugby enthusiasts were greatly relieved when a paragraph in the morning papers announced the fact that the Wellesleys had decided to remain in the O.R.F.U. Intermediate series, and that the team would come to Peterborough on Thursday to play the scheduled game with the Intermediates of this town. The Wellesleys took the position that the Victorias in being given the bye after the games between the former and Peterborough, were being given the best of the schedule, and asked as a condition of their remaining in the union that the schedule be revised to give the Victorias home and home games with both Peterborough and the Wellesleys, and the executive will accordingly revise the schedule to bring this into effect. This revision will also be welcomed by Peterborough as it will give the town one more home game.

The Wellesleys have been practising steadily for some weeks and are in good condition to play a fast game, which they fully expect when they meet the Peterborough team.

The game will be played on the Oval and judging by the interest being manifested there will be a record crowd to witness this, the first, championship O.R.F.U. game of 1903 to be played here. Mr. George Biggs of Varsity, will referee the game.

The members of the local team have worked strenuously this season to provide good Rugby games here and they should be given the encouragement which their enterprise deserves. The team will be chosen from the following players; Crough, Lush, Shortell, Crowley, Lee, Rickey, R. Craig, Ford, Dillon, Noble, Paschal, Asselestine, Morgan, Hurtubise, Thornton, Cameron, Graham, Meagher, Grady, Cole and Burnham. A practice will be held this evening at 7.15 at the T.A.S. grounds, to which all the above are asked to attend.

Notwithstanding the reports that are current in the Toronto papers to the effect that the Wellesleys will withdraw from the O.R.F.U., and accordingly default the game scheduled to be played here on Thanksgiving Day, it will be gladsome news to the football enthusiasts of the town to know that the Wellesleys intend remaining in the series, and will be here for Thanksgiving Day. At a meeting of the Wellesleys last night it was decided to remain in the Intermediate Series provided that the schedule be arranged so that home and home games be played between the Wellesleys, Victorias and Peterboroughs. This the O.R.F.U. executive has decided to do.

The game on Thanksgiving Day afternoon promises to attract an especially large crowd, and the officials of the Peterborough club are carefully looking after every arrangement. It is likely a row of seats will be placed along the east side of the gridiron, for the accommodation of the ladies, and every effort will be made to keep the crowd off the field during play. Mr. Geo. Biggs of Varsity, will officiate as referee. Capt. Crowley has a strong aggregation ready, and the locals seem confident as to the outcome. Should Peterborough win out this year they will become the permanent owners of the cup, which they now hold, and which they have won for the last two years. It is likely that a large delegation from Toronto will accompany the visiting team to Peterborough. The members of the executive have been busily engaged selling membership tickets, while tickets for admission to the match may be obtained at Ormond & Walsh's drug store or the Peterborough Bookstore.

SPRINTING.

Belland is training daily for his race on Thursday with Knox of Orillia, and the event promises to be one of unusual interest. This much is assured, that it will be a good race and the winner will have no easy thing.

BASEBALL.

Mr. Flaherty, Peterborough's star is in town to-day on his way home from Osbawa, where he pitched on Saturday against the Crescents of Toronto. The score was 6—0 in favour of the Toronto boys, but nevertheless Flaherty did his part striking out ten men and only allowing them one earned run, the other two being made on over-throws. — Port Hope Guide.

* * * *

The Charlotte street Guild baseball team some days ago issued a challenge to the team connected with the George street Guild, to play a game on Thanksgiving morning. The latter team will accept the challenge, if the former will agree to the game being played in May, 1904.

MOTHER OF THE POPE.

A Simple Peasant, From Whom Pius X. Inherited His Humility.

The modest tastes and simple habits of Pope Pius X., which have always been distinguishing traits of his character, were an inheritance from his mother, whom her distinguished son greatly resembles in feature as well as in the sterling qualities that finally placed him at the head of the Roman Catholic Church.

Signora Sarto, the mother of Pope Pius X., was a peasant of the town of Riese, Province of Treviso, near Venice, and her maiden name was Marguerite Sanson. Her husband held a small municipal office in the town, and she added to her slender income by plying her needle as a dressmaker. She died in 1894, having lived to see her son elevated to the Cardinalate. After he became Patriarch of Venice she still continued to occupy a small house in Riese, in her humility refusing to live with her son, as even his modest establishment was considered by her to be too luxurious in comparison with what she was accustomed to.

MOTHER OF POPE PIUS X.

After Giuseppe Sarto was made Patriarch he still allowed his family to continue in the modest line of life to which they were born. Three of his sisters are spinsters, and one of the others, Antonie, is married to a man so poor that she is compelled to assist in the support of the family by dressmaking. Lucia, another sister, is the wife of a church sexton, who is occasionally a peddler, and the husband of a third is the keeper of a small inn.

The elder brother of the Pope, Angelo, lives in the village of Dellegrazie, Province of Mantua, being the postman of the district and receiving about $80 a year for his services.

When Pius X. was Bishop of Mantua his brother often went there for reasons connected with the postal service. The other clerks would ask him jokingly why his brother did not find him a better place. Angelo, with the sturdy independence which is characteristic of the Sarto family, answered that he preferred to be what he could make himself.

WAS INCURABLE BUT IS CURED.

Joseph Boone at Work Again After Seven Years' Illness.

Cottle's Cove, New Bay, Nfld., Oct. 12. — Special. — After being for seven years a hopeless invalid, unable to work, and racked by aches and pains, Joseph Boone, of this place is back to his old work as a fisherman. It sounds like a miracle, but it is not—it was Kidney Disease that was the matter with him. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him.

"It is something worth relating what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me," says Mr. Boone, and I am glad to tell it. I had doctored with several doctors and after seven months in the hospital was sent home as incurable.

"Richard Quirk, who had been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, advised me to try them and I had. I took 21 boxes before I was able to go to work. But I can hardly believe it is myself at all, after all these years of suffering."

Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure all forms of Kidney Disease from Backache to Bright's Disease. Thousands of cured ones will tell you so.

COLONIES AND WAR.

ROYAL COMMISSION SIZES THEM UP IN ITS REPORT.

Lessons in Regard to Proper Recognition of Volunteers and the Training of Their Officers—Commission Collected and Summarized Much Evidence as to the High Value of Colonial Troops, Especially the First Contingent.

In the report of the Commission on the War Office reference is made to the proceedings which led to the assistance given to the colonies, and, in this connection, to the celebrated telegram which certainly appeared to discourage the contribution of mounted troops, says The London Times. The original parent of this message appears to have been Sir Redvers Buller, who, as frequently happened, expressed himself so as to be misunderstood. Both Lord Lansdowne and Lord Wolseley admitted that the telegram was unfortunately worded.

The Commission collected and summarized much evidence as to the high value of the colonial troops, especially the first contingents. If, as an important witness said, they were not so useful as British troops for a serious attack, which had to be driven home, they, on the whole, were more akin to the Boer than to the regular in individual resourcefulness, ability to look after themselves, "instinct for country," intelligence in scouting and despatch riding and so forth.

Bird's Eye View.

The Commission make the following general observation:

"In Canada, Australia and New Zealand the permanent military forces, which appear to consist of thoroughly trained men with trained officers, form a comparatively small body of men, principally artillery, for defence of the seaports. There is, however, a considerable amount of Militia, or partially paid men and Volunteers, all of whom being actively engaged in civil life, their training is very slight. None of these Colonies supply a good arena for the practical education of a highly skilled staff of regimental officers. Canada, indeed, possesses in the Royal Military College at Kingston, Ontario, an efficiency and most useful institution, which has returned out some distinguished men. But, from the nature of things, the number of man trained at this college is necessarily small. At the same time, the freedom and peace in these uncrowded countries, and the easier and more rural life of a large part of the inhabitants, their intelligence, their resourcefulness, their knowledge of country and the fact that a great number are first-class horsemen, readily enable them to become, if properly trained and disciplined, as fine a body of mounted infantry as any general would desire to command. They are, in fact, as one witness expressed it, "half soldiers by their up-bringing."

"They, however, require training and discipline, and in order to acquire this they should have trained officers, and some period of time to exercise before being placed in the field as opposed to regular troops. It is not fair to expect that men straight from the plough or stockyard will at once acquire habits of discipline, and become of value, simply because they can ride well, and are very intelligent and resourceful. The free life they live, which enables them to be of so much value, is in itself antagonistic to that rigid discipline which is to all soldiers so essential.

Kernel Is Reached.

The Commission make the following general observation:

"Attention, then, should be given to the question how to provide and train adequately skilled officers for men who according to the evidence can be trained and disciplined in a comparatively short time."

The Commission speak less highly of the military value of some 50,000 to 60,000 colonials who were raised in South Africa itself, and evidently think that, with the exception of certain picked corps, they were hardly worth the money received by them from Imperial treasury in pay, amounting to nearly £8,000,000, more than thrice the amount paid to the over-sea contingents. They observe that "it seems to be probable that a smaller and more select levy of South African troops might, both from an economic and a military point of view, have been more advisable." Evidence was given that the whole of this force was in a continual state of change, the terms of service being vague, and the men frequently returning home till their money was spent. "Every six months the whole of the force was reconstituted."

Lessons of the War.

At the end of this part of their report the Commission make some general observation. They say:

"It is, no doubt, necessary that there should be a defined limit to the numbers of men trained and equipped as regular troops which the nation can rely upon at any moment; and that limit in 1899 was prescribed by the terms of Mr. Stanhope's Minute of 1888. Into the extension of the limit now proposed we do not enter here, not merely because it is still a matter of Parliamentary discussion, but because to do so would only obscure the real issue. In 1899 there were some branches of the service which were barely strong enough for the equipment of two army corps. That was the case with the Army Service Corps and the Army Medical Corps; and, as we have pointed out above, it was the case in regard to officers throughout the service. It is impossible not to condemn the system which could allow militia regiments to be sent to the front under officers who, in many cases, were wholly untrained. But the true lesson of the war in our opinion is, that no military system will be satisfactory which does not contain powers of expansion outside the limit of the regular forces of the Crown, whatever that limit may be."

Great Reserve.

"If the war teaches anything it is this, that throughout the Empire, in the United Kingdom, its colonies and dependencies, there is a reserve of military strength which, for many reasons we cannot and do not wish to convert into a vast standing army, but to which we may be glad to turn again in our hour of need as we did in 1899. In that year there was no preparation whatever for utilising these great resources. Nothing had been thought out either as to pay or organisation, as to condition of service, or even as to arms. Even here in England it was to be an experiment. The new force was not to be discouraged, but it was allowed to equip itself, and it was denied anything beyond the barest complement of trained officers.

"We regret to say that we are not satisfied that enough is being done to place matters on a better footing in the event of another emergency. We doubt changes have been introduced with regard to the training of volunteers and yeomanry, but this again is a controversial topic, which has been referred to another Commission, and one which need not be pressed in connection with the point we desire to make. It must be recognised that no amount of training which can be enforced will convert volunteers or yeomanry into regular troops. But volunteers and yeomanry proved themselves of value in the late war under an organization which was improvised for them in the face of the enemy. Where is that organisation now? So far as we can learn, nothing has been done to collect systematically the valuable experience of the officers who worked that organisation, certainly nothing to formulate that experience, to embody it in hand-books, or to create a framework which would be ready for prompt and effective action. Doubts and difficulties surround us when we attempt to imagine the British Empire as a great military power in the sense of our continental neighbors. But our enquiry inspires us with much confidence in the strength and unanimity of the loyalty of the Empire, and of the value of that loyalty if properly used within the limitations which circumstances impose."

Uncle Sam's Negroes.

Over 9,000,000 black skinned people are now living in the United States. They have about doubled in numbers since Abraham Lincoln signed the emancipation proclamation. Counting in the dark-skinned inhabitants of Uncle Sam's insular possessions, 18,500,000 colored people are living under the Stars and Stripes.

The negro population of the United States own more property than is generally supposed. Nearly four per cent. of the total assessable property of Virginia belongs to them. In Georgia alone they are assessed on $15,000,000 worth of property. Of the 1,400,000 heads of colored families in the entire country in 1900, 964,000, or nearly one-fifth of them all, own the homes and farms on which they live, where forty years ago they did not own even their own persons.

In forty years more, if they go on increasing as they have done since 1868, there will be about 20,000,000 of colored people in the United States, not counting those in the islands.

An Historic Cabinet.

Mr. C. Gripton, of 12 King street east, Toronto, the other day discovered among some second-hand printing material which he had purchased a bit of rare old printing office furniture. It was a type cabinet, dilapitated and battered, but so strongly made that it still gives promise of many years of service. The case is of oak and is put together with old-fashioned wrought iron nails. On the back of the case appears the following shipping instructions: Wm. L. Mackenzie, Toronto, Can., via Niagara Falls, R.R., and steamer from Lewiston.

The inscription and general appearance of the cabinet indicate that it was a part of the printing office which William Lyon Mackenzie operated across the border after the rebellion of 1837. The cabinet is probably seventy-five years old and has probably passed through many hands. One of its sides bears a hand-bill giving the rates paid for composition in printing offices in 1881.

Output of Mines.

The output of the metalliferous mines and works of Ontario for the six months ending June 30, 1903, was $2,866,287, a decrease of a half a million dollars from the same period of 1902. The figures are:

	Quantity.	Value.
Gold (ounces)	5,842	$ 93,232
Silver (ounces)	23,100	11,550
Iron ore (tons)	129,055	645,112
Pig iron (tons)	35,578	533,338
Nickel (tons)	3,095	1,088,671
Copper (tons)	160	168,982
Zinc ore (tons)	400	6,000

CANALS OF CANADA.

New York Tribune to the Enterprise of the Dominion.

In referring to canal construction as one of the most striking features of the commercial policy of France, Germany, Russia, Austria, Italy and Belgium, we mentioned the fact that Canada has for years been steadily following the example of Continental Europe, says The New York Tribune. There has been expended for construction alone on Canadian canals, not including work planned but still unexecuted, a total of more than $81,000,000. For the construction and enlargement of the water route from Lake Erie through the Welland Canal, Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River more than $56,000,000 has been spent, a sum which, as the Greene Commission pointed out, bears about the same ratio to the wealth of Canada that $100,000,000 would bear to the wealth of New York.

"There is no question that the people of the Dominion heartily sustain the policy which requires this heavy outlay, and that the practical results justify their contentment. During the three months of May, June and July of this year there were exported from Montreal 18,040,214 bushels of grain, and from New York 16,341,519 bushels. At other Atlantic ports observers are drawing the conclusion from this comparison that the metropolis is destined to lose its supremacy, but they may derive less pleasure from that somewhat violent deduction when they have considered that, according to the latest Government statistics, the total exports from Atlantic ports for the fiscal year 1903 show a decline of $98,000,000 from the total for 1901. Some of their loss is the gain of the Gulf ports, but no small part of it has accrued to our Northern neighbor.

"The Government's summary of commerce and finance appears a significant statement of lake commerce through the United States canal at Sault Ste. Marie, and the Canadian canal for the month and the season ending July 31, 1901, 1902 and 1903. For the month of July in the three years these are some of the figures. Bushels of wheat, east-bound through the United States canal, 3,695,791; 2,876,802; 1,634,272. Through the Canadian canal, 518,161; 1,662,434; 2,879,010. For the four months the wheat figures are: Through the United States canal, 10,722,780; 10,588,064; 10,865,627. Through the Canadian canal, 2,872,516; 9,349,820; 14,710,659. Other grain, flour and general merchandise shipments tells a similar and in some particulars, a still more striking story.

"We hear no contradiction of the general conclusion, to which an array of evidence points, that the export trade of Canada is gaining rapidly and that the development of the Canadian canals is an important factor in its growth."

Two Chronic Crazes.

One of the ways to get into swell society is to butt in through the turf or the tan bark—the race track or the horse show. A certain well known man has already spent $500,000 on the tan bark without penetrating the outer cuticle of the haut monde, and when he has spent another $500,000 he will still be butting. There are two crazes which cannot be cured—the craze for society and the craze for political office.

No Place For Cheap Charity.

"Sir," began the beggar, approaching a promenader on Bongtong square, "I am in distress"—

"Here's a nickel for you," said the promenader, proffering the coin.

"Pardon me," replied the beggar scornfully, "but I cannot accept anything less than a dime on a fashionable street like this."

Health and Wealth.

The American business man of the present day spends his health to gain wealth and then immediately starts out to spend his wealth in regaining his health. But generally he finds the first feat child's play in comparison with the second.

Is There Poison in Your Blood?

Then the Liver and Kidneys Have Failed to Perform Their Mission and You Need

DR. CHASE'S Kidney-Liver Pills.

If you are not well there must be a reason for it. Most of the common ills of life arise from poison in the system. If you would be well you must remove the cause of disease.

The work of the blood is two-fold. It supplies nourishment to the body and collects the impure and poisonous waste matter. This poisonous material is removed from the blood by the action of the liver and kidneys. When these organs fail the poison is carried back through the system in the circulation of the blood and causes disease.

Where is your weak spot? Just there you may expect to feel the effects of poison in the system. It may be stomach trouble or lung trouble, kidney disease or heart disease, but the beginning is with the inaction of the great filtering organ—the liver and kidneys.

Nine-tenths of the ills of everyday life may be cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, because they set the liver, kidneys, and bowels right, and so cleanse and invigorate the system.

Have you come to realize the importance of keeping the bowels regular and the liver and kidneys active? You will appreciate Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, not only on account of their wonderful promptness but also for their lasting effect on the system. They get at the very foundation of ill-health and by removing the cause, bring thorough cure.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, the comfort of old age, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box. 11

ON THE WAY TO AYLWIN

By M. MACLEAN HELLIWELL

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

The train stopped with a jolt, and the passengers thronged out, filling the station with bustle and confusion.

Chatterton, who was on his way to Halifax, was looking idly out of the smoker window, when suddenly there passed across his range of vision a certain well cut profile which he knew could belong to only one woman in the world. Without an instant's hesitation he picked up his hat and left the car, clearing the steps just as the train started heavily forward.

The small station was crowded with people, and Chatterton looked some time for the lady of the profile before he espied her sitting quietly in one corner of the dingy waiting room.

She had thrown open her coat and was leaning back against the wall with closed eyes, evidently prepared to wait some time. Chatterton seated himself in the opposite corner of the room and, drawing out a paper, pretended to read the while he watched her furtively.

People passed and repassed between them. The noise and confusion ebbed and flowed as train after train came in and departed.

Then all at once a lull came. Silence reigned on the platform, and Chatterton suddenly realized that he and the lady were alone in the waiting room. He rose and went out abruptly, and as he passed through the door he stopped for a moment before a time table that hung beside it, one name having caught his eye.

"Aylwin," he muttered. "Of course going home for the dear old people's anniversary dinner. How could I have forgotten it? I don't believe she ever traveled alone before, and it's a whole hour to wait in this hole. Don't I know the long, interminable dragging on of the minutes, don't I know—ah, but it did not seem long last year when we waited here together!"

He passed out on to the deserted platform and, lighting a cigar, smoked furiously while he paced up and down, revolving many things in his mind.

At last, throwing back his head with a sudden resolution, he tossed aside his cigar and re-entered the waiting room.

As the door closed behind him the girl in the corner opened her eyes, and a sudden wave of color touched her cheeks. Her cool, gray eyes regarded his steadily for a moment, then she turned her face slowly from him. But the man, lifting his hat, advanced quickly.

"Margaret," he cried as he stood before her, "I want to talk to you." Her baffling gray eyes met his with no trace of embarrassment.

"I know of nothing you can have to say to me. You were very explicit. Nothing of importance was omitted, but if something else has occurred to you you have my lawyer's address and can communicate with him."

He made no answer for a moment, then he said abruptly:

"You are going home for the anniversary dinner tomorrow. I can just see the table blazing with lights and flowers, the dear old pater beaming with pride and the little mother all soft smiles and tender happiness. Tomorrow will be the first time there has ever been an empty place at the anniversary dinner. I am afraid the little mother will not like that. She has always had perfect faith in her sons-in-law."

"It is easy to deceive old people," she interrupted, "particularly such dear, guileless, trustful old people as they. Will you kindly leave me? Under existing circumstances no gentleman should have to be reminded that he has renounced his right to inflict his company upon his—the woman"—

"His wife," he finished gently. "Why hesitate? Is the word so hateful to you? A separation is not a divorce, you know. I don't want to force myself upon you, Margaret. But I cannot get the little mother out of my mind. Do they know at home of our trouble?"

The girl was silent for a moment, then she faced him suddenly, her eyes blazing.

"No," she cried; "they don't. You are not the only one who loves them! You have been the cause of my doing much that I regret, and now you are making me do the one thing I have always loathed with all my soul. You have forced me to lie to them for the first time in my life! I have told them nothing yet of the truth. In my letters I have always added your love and such messages as you used to send. They expect you tonight. I shall tell them that just as we were starting an urgent telegram came from the Halifax branch demanding your immediate presence. Oh, I shall get through! I have had my schooling." The last words were rather faint, but she threw back her head and added almost fiercely, "And it will not be acting to show them how happy I am!"

He did not tell her that her face, her voice, her very attitude, belied her words, for something was teaching him wisdom. Instead he answered gently:

"It will be impossible to deceive the little mother. When those clear blue eyes look into yours and her soft voice asks, 'Why, Madda, where's our Teddy?' all lies will shrivel up and die. You will have to tell her everything, and that will mean that all joy will go not only out of the anniversary dinner, but out of her life. You know how she regards such things. Margaret, don't you think that for her sake and the pater's I had better go down with you just for the dinner? I can make my excuses and leave on the midnight train tomorrow. I shall not trouble you, believe me. They must not be allowed to suspect anything, but when we are alone we shall be as strangers. I shall not even talk to you if you do not wish it. There is plenty of time for you to decide. I am asking nothing for myself—I know that that is fruitless—but I am pleading for the little mother and the pater."

He turned as he finished speaking and left her alone.

It seemed scarcely five minutes before she heard his voice again. "The Aylwin train is coming," he said. "Shall I get a ticket?"

"Yes," she answered simply.

The cars were crowded, but he found a seat, and, putting her in it with the old air of proprietorship that had always been so sweet to her, he seated himself beside her in silence.

The train rattled on, and as they sat so near together, yet so very far apart, the thoughts of each turned to the last time they had traveled that road together, on their first visit home after their honeymoon.

How happy they had been then! How happy they might have been now if only that little rift within the lute—

Through the mind of each the same questions rang—had there been just and sufficient cause? A little patience, a little forbearance, a little sacrificing of pride at the beginning—

Chatterton looked down at the slight figure beside him. They would not be able to deceive the little mother after all. Happy? With the old sparkle all gone from her eyes and those pathetic little lines about her mouth! And he had sworn to love her, to cherish her and protect her through good and ill till death should part them. Instinctively his hand closed over hers as it lay listlessly on the seat beside him.

At the touch of his fingers she turned, and something shone in her eyes as she drew closer to him.

"Dear," she said softly, "I'm so lonely, so tired and so sorry. Will you"—

His firm clasp of the hand tightened as the conductor threw open the door and shouted, "Aylwin next station!"

"Hush," he whispered. "It was all my fault, little girl. I have been a brute, but all the rest of my life I shall make atonement, for we'll start all over again, and—we won't have to act a lie to the little mother, will we, Madda?"

Mother's Girl.

There exists often a very beautiful companionship between the mother and her daughter. The intimacy is frank, free and sympathetic. But some day the mother feels as if something had chilled this intimacy. The child is silent and sad, and seems to shun her mother instead of seeking her.

This change very often occurs when the young girl is crossing the border line of womanhood. She is morbid, nervous, fearful, as she enters upon this new experience.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription at such a time will do more than restore the normal balance of mind and body. It will establish the womanly function upon a basis of sound health, as well as improve the appetite, nourish the nerves, and promote the general physical health.

"Two years ago my daughter's health began to fail," writes Mrs. Dan Hall, of Brodhead, Green Co., Wis. "Everything that could be thought of was done to help her but it was of no use. When she began to complain she was quite stout; weighed 170—the picture of good health, until about the age of fourteen; then in six months she was so run down her weight was but 120. I felt I could not give her up as she was the only child I had, and I must say Doctor, that only for your 'Favorite Prescription' my daughter would have been in her grave today. When she had taken one-half bottle the natural function was established and we bought another one; making only two bottles in all, and she completely recovered. Since then she is as well as can be."

ay. I've never left anything like a pillow or a thing where money could be hidden in any lot I bought outright, although I've had to brave many a pitiful appeal for father's tobacco box and mother's sewing basket. I never let any piece of furniture go out of here again until I have been through it myself. Wife and I have pulled hair stuffing out of things and put it back again when we could have saved ourselves trouble and money by letting the stuff go out for sale without it. Find anything? Not a cent. Once I found an old book hidden in a mattress that was bought from a woman who died. I took it to a bookseller, who said it was not worth my car fare. No, sir; the only way to get money in this business, like any other, is to work for it and not expect to find it."

Corn and Codfish.

It is told of Lord Hawke's first eleven of English cricketers that, when dining at the Queen's during their visit to Toronto, some of them proceeded to eat corn on the cob. They saw the other guests ordering the vegetable, but the Englishmen attempted to eat the dainty cob and all! They announced that the method of consuming it was unpleasant, and that corn was "beastly," anyhow, says Day by Day in Toronto News. And now our good Nova Scotia codfish is being denounced by the soldiery of England. With a view to helping Canada and varying the fare of Tommy, the commissariat of the army not long ago ordered a consignment of codfish. The new viand was first served to the East Surrey Regiment, in camp at Aldershot, and The Daily Mail tells the mournful story of the effects of this attempt to consolidate the Empire. Twenty-five dried codfish were given to the cooks. "Light-brown, dirty looking things," the reporter insultingly calls them. They were boiled, curried, made into pie, but Thomas turned up his nose. He wouldn't eat them, although, as every Canadian knows, salt codfish is a mighty "good thing to eat," as the children say. Of course, the blame rests on those English army cooks. It is good betting that they didn't soak those fish in at least three waters. To try to eat salt codfish without soaking it is simply to spoil one of the Creator's good gifts. But, when soaked, the salt disappears, the flesh freshens up, and the consumer rejoices. It is the old story of the English cook boiling the first consignment of tea leaves and serving them as a kind of salad. The War Office had better import half-a-dozen Canadian cooks. Then the codfish will take a proud place on the army bill-of-fare.

Rain Brought No Orders.

Philip D. Armour one day received a very long letter from an agent in regard to conditions of trade in the country through which he was traveling. Page after page was devoted to telling his employer that the weather and uncertain crop conditions were responsible for the meager orders and not a lack of energy or perseverance on his own part. Rain was needed in that section. With the first downpour hope would enter into the despondent community, and an order commensurate with the benefits granted to a parched earth could be expected. Rain saturated the earth, lengthy letters continued to arrive, but no orders.

"How about orders?" wrote the merchant, who was weary of footing nonproductive expensive accounts and reading long letters. "Write and let me know in the fewest possible words what merchants say now that they have rain."

By return mail the famous merchant received a letter which told him in a few words the reception accorded the agent in the newly drenched territory, "Dry up, old man, dry up."

Not Friends; Just Gushers.

In a big department store a dainty, pretty little woman in the act of buying some lace caught sight of another pretty little woman who was buying some ribbon. As their eyes met both shoppers dropped the articles at which they had been looking and rushed into each other's arms.

"Old and dear friends reunited after many years," thought the clerk behind the counter.

At last the time for parting came.

"Now do come and see me real soon," said the first woman.

"Oh, I never pay calls, you know," replied the other. "You come and see me."

"Well, I don't know your address."

"It is the last house on —— street, next to Riverside drive."

"But I do not know your name since your last marriage."

It was then that the clerk woke up to the real situation.

"Just a pair of gushers," he said to himself disgustedly.—New York Press.

INDIAN SUMMER.

A soft veil dims the turquoise skies,
And half conceals from pensive eyes
The browning tokens of the Fall;
A calmness broods upon the hills,
And Summer's parting dream distills
A charm of silence over all.

The stacks of corn in brown array,
Stand waiting through the placid day,
Like tattered wigwams on the plain,
The tribes that find a shelter there
Are phantom peoples, forms of air,
And ghosts of vanished joy and pain.

At evening, when the blood-red crest
Of sunset passes through the West,
I hear the whispering host returning;
On far-off fields, by elm and oak,
I see the light, I smell the smoke—
The camp-fires of the past are burning.

Tertius and Henry Van Dyke.

The Inspiration of Canadians.

"The untempted Common my abode,
I pass a wilful stranger:
My mistress still the open road,
And the bright eyes of danger!

Come ill or well, the crown or crown,
The rainbow or the thunder,
I fling my soul and body down
For God to plough them under."
—Robert Louis Stevenson.

It is a curious fact that all Robert Louis Stevenson's writings, even those that were penned while the writer was a dying man, were impregnated with the "joy of the open road." Sunshine, rain storms, wind and thunder, all seem to pervade the work which bears his signature. There is so little in any of his fiction which suggests the interior of men's dwellings. The setting for the giants in Stevensonian fiction must be the great "over world," all else seems too small and cramped to contain the figures he depicts. Canada is blest with a climate which insists on the majority of Canadians living an open-air existence for at least six weeks or two months of the year. It matters little whether a man is a "dead game sport" or a lounger, a dreamer of dreams, content to idle away the beautiful hours of the long midsummer days and nights, the same impress of open air existence must be stamped on his soul. There are those who think that unless the strenuous life is lived in the open that the man or woman fails to imbibe the spirit of the "open road," but they are wrong.—Toronto News.

Coal-Mining Under the Sea.

Mr. J. Primrose Lindsay, of Lindsay, Gracie & Co., Newcastle-on-Tyne, was in Toronto recently. He is one of the principal owners of the Gowrie & Blockhouse Collieries, Limited, at Fort Morien, Cape Breton. The company are now driving levels to the body of their coal, about one mile and a quarter under the sea. Their output at present is limited to the coal won in projecting the levels. After the first year's development in the main body of the coal, however, the output will likely reach 250,000 to 300,000 tons per annum, which will be shipped all over the Maritime Provinces and the United States. This is not an astonishing figure in Cape Breton, but eighteen years ago, in 1885, which was considered a banner year, the output for the whole of the County of Cape Breton was only 500,000 tons. This year it will be in the neighborhood of 4,000,000 tons.

Messrs. E. M. Poussett & Co. have received the following:

Town Topics,—Considerable stress is laid on resistance shown by railroads yesterday to weakness in the industrial list and many traders have changed from the short side on theory that the railroad list will cut loose from the industrial department and will advance regardless of what the industrials may do. The buying is credited to Standard Oil interests and we look for improvements this morning to a moderate extent on shorts, covering in some quarters, but do not expect a more than moderate rally at present and on any such rally the active stocks can be sold for reasonable profits on the short side, especially LN, PA, RG, SP, UP, and BO. London was strong and higher and our opening will be influenced by advance on other side.

Liverpool opening,—Wheat, dull 1-8 lower; corn, dull, 1-4 lower.

M. & M. say: "We think the rally yesterday afternoon was largely in the nature of a forced one and on a covering movement among the shorts and we do not look for any stability until something happens of sufficient nature to restore confidence which has been and unquestionably is still the cause of curtailment of local as well as outside buying power."

Dr. Shoop's
Rheumatic Cure

Costs Nothing if it Fails.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer. For years I searched everywhere to find a specific for Rheumatism. For nearly 20 years I worked to this end. At last, in Germany, my search was rewarded. I found a costly chemical that did not disappoint me as other Rheumatic prescriptions had disappointed physicians everywhere.

I do not mean that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure can turn bony joints into flesh again. That is impossible. But it will drive from the blood the poison that causes pain and swelling, and then that is the end of Rheumatism. I know this so well that I will furnish for a full month my Rheumatic Cure on trial. I cannot cure all cases within a month. It would be unreasonable to expect that. But most cases will yield within 30 days. This trial treatment will convince you that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure is a power against Rheumatism—a potent force against disease that is irresistible.

My offer is made to convince you of my faith. My faith is not the outcome of experience—of actual knowledge. I know what it can do. And I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal card for my book on Rheumatism. I will then arrange with a druggist in your vicinity so that you can secure six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure to make the test. You may take it a full month on trial. If it succeeds the cost to you is $5.50. If it fails the loss is mine and mine alone. It will be left entirely to you. I mean that exactly. If you say the trial is not satisfactory I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs for it is dangerous to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood. My remedy does that even in the most difficult cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met, and in all of my experience, in all of my 2000 tests, I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the book. Try my remedy for a month, for it can't harm you anyway. If it fails the loss is mine.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 47, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases not chronic are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

IN MEMORIAM.

Excellent Reports Received Concerning Soldiers' Graves in South Africa.

Excellent reports have been received from the different committees in South Africa of the work accomplished in locating and caring for the Canadian soldiers' graves. The difficulties which have been encountered and overcome have been many. Owing to the great distances and the unsettled state of the country, even for a long period after peace was declared, transportation to certain districts was, until quite recently, refused to travelers. In addition, the unusual climatic conditions, the vagaries of the South African vegetation, "which at some seasons has the vitality of Jonah's gourd, and at others the apparent dryness of Aaron's rod," have all contributed to make the work of the Guild of Loyal Women of South Africa an almost impossible task. How faithfully the guild has worked is shown in a report from the secretary of the Central Committee, Cape Town, who states that no single grave that could by any reasonable possibility be reached by members of the guild has remained unvisited.

At Woodstock, Modder River, Wynberg, Bloemfontein and other places all the outlying graves, as well as those in the cemeteries, are in excellent order, and decorated with flowers at Christmas and Easter by the branches in those places. At Magersfontein and Paardeberg only a very few months have elapsed since it was possible for ladies to visit the graves. Now the work is being pushed forward as rapidly as possible, and the Toronto secretary has received very encouraging letters of the progress made from the secretaries of the branches in charge of those graves. At Paardeberg several permanent stones have been erected by relatives, through the agency of the Loyal Guild of Women.

Money has been sent from time to time by the Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire for all Canadian graves, and with special instructions that the Canadian graves at Paardeberg and Hart's River be put in order without delay at the expense of the Canadian fund. Up to date the amount sent to South Africa by the I.O.D.E. totals $850, the rest of the fund subscribed having been invested, the income therefrom to be expended annually for the care of the graves.

ENGLISH PREACHER

STIRS UP DRY BONES IN UNCONVENTIONAL STYLE IN QUEEN CITY.

His Many Witty Sayings—Style and Matter Very Unconventional, However—Numerous Hits at Society—Mark Guy Pearse's Conception of Christ—Definitions of Etiquette—Telling and Pertinent Illustrations.

Mark Guy Pearse is a name to conjure with in Methodist circles in England, and has become, indeed, familiar in every household wherever the English language is spoken. By his work in the slums of London and his published sermons and sketches he has won for himself a reputation equalled only by a few of the preachers of to-day. His appearance recently in Toronto was, therefore, naturally the occasion of considerable excitement, extreme eagerness being displayed to see and hear what manner of man he is.

Altogether he gave three addresses on the Sunday he was in the Queen City, preaching in the morning in Sherbourne street Methodist Church, delivering a lecture to men during the afternoon, and preaching again in Parkdale Methodist Church at night; and on each occasion an immense crowd gathered to hear him.

Mr. Pearse has little of the pulpit about him. There is nothing stereotyped either in his appearance or his method of preaching. He looks more like an old-fashioned English squire than a minister. Of medium height, with a broad, rubicund, clean-shaven face, eyes forever twinkling, a fringe of grey curly hair and a portly presence, he is the very picture of good-nature and jollity. His style is Beresfordian. Indeed, he may be described as the Lord Charles Beresford of the pulpit. Racey, breezy, witty and fresh, his manner of delivery and matter are like a breath from the salt sea, refreshing, stimulating and invigorating.

He is entirely unconventional. His voice has none of the pulpit tone. He stands and talks in a conventional way, as if he were speaking to a friend. At the outset he is somewhat abrupt; his utterance rapid and now and again shrill, with a slight touch of the falsetto about it; but it soon steadies down into a calm, even note, that is only changed when he gives expression to some particularly thrilling or pathetic passage. Then the whole man becomes transfigured. His face shines, his form seems to gain in dignity and power, and his every word becomes a living force, moving his audience to the deepest fibres of their being.

His favorite attitude is leaning over the desk with his hands clasped before him while he chats familiarly with his listeners. But sometimes his subject masters him, and he lifts himself erect, and moves rapidly about the platform, gesticulating freely, apparently unable to keep still, under the force stirring within him.

In the strict sense of the word he does not preach a sermon. He has neither an exordium nor peroration. He is neither a textical nor a topical preacher. Though he keeps close to his text, and announces also a subject, he makes no attempt to treat of either extensively. It is human life as he has known it; human life with its sorrow and care, its burdens and struggles, and in discussing these, he presents to his audience a series of word pictures, all of them vivid, all of them real and each bearing a message. In his hands the Bible is not a book of the dead past, but of the living present. He takes the characters he may be dealing with and clothes them with modern garb, gives them a modern setting, and makes them breathe and eat and speak like men and women of the present.

In Parkdale Methodist Church, his text was Matthew, 11:19. He made it the means of conveying to his audience his conception of Christ. Beginning with the contrast between John the Baptist and Christ, he emphasized the aloofness of the former and the brotherliness of the latter. John was a voice in the wilderness, his place of abode, his way of living, his appearance and everything connected with him, all separated him from the rest of mankind. "I don't think," said Mr. Pearse, in concluding his description of John, "that anybody would have asked him to a wedding. I know I wouldn't to mine."

On the other hand, Christ was one with all humanity. He met mankind at every point. He was intensely human, and the one all desired to have with them at the festive board. There was a wedding at Cana of Galilee, and He was the one they thought of asking first. He was the one also who was told that the wine had given out and who was expected to supply the lack.

It was a joyous Christ that Mr. Pearse portrayed—a Christ whose presence meant gladness and the dispelling of gloom; a Christ who brought happiness to the sad heart, who fed the hungry, who healed the sick and changed the house of mourning into the house of rejoicing.

With illustration after illustration Mr. Pearse drove the truth home. One of the stories he told bearing upon his theme was particularly happy. It was an experience of his own. He had a compliment once paid to him, the only one in all his life. He was calling upon an old woman, and during his visit a neighbor came to the door. On looking in the neighbor observed Mr. Pearse and turned to go, saying that since the old woman had company she wouldn't come in but would return later on. The old woman, however, would not hear of the neighbor leaving. "Come in! Come in!" she cried shrilly. "There ain't nobody here but Mr. Pearse and he ain't nobody." Christ was not "company." He was one of the family for whom no preparation required to be made when He came, and whose presence was a source of no discomfort to the persons in the home.

Mr. Pearse's sermon was full of bright sayings. The worst thing that could be said about anybody was not that he didn't pay his debts or that he got drunk, but that he was not at all particular with whom he mixed.

The advantage of a man belonging to the aristocracy was that he had a grandfather and a great grandfather.

Hitting at the aloofness of the clergy from the laity, Mr. Pearse said that the pulpit was a long way up in the days when he was a boy. There were some ministers who tried to find out God with a grammar and a dictionary. He had also, said Mr. Pearse, seen good people look so good that he never wanted to be good himself.

Quoting a certain Sister Mary, who is working in the London slums, he declared that the truest equality that we could have with another was to eat with that person.

"I suppose," said Mr. Pearse, in another passage, "you've rate collections in this country. I'm very sorry for you, but I thought you had, we have too."

"Morality's much a matter of size," remarked Mr. Pearse, during a reference to Zaccheus, "A man, 4 ft. 6 has to do a lot not expected of a man 6 ft. 4."

Mr. Pearse had something to say about fishing. Fishing was working hard and doing nothing. What a fool he was who went fishing without a bait. "Put a bait on, man! Put a bait on!" added Mr. Pearse.

Four o'clock in the morning was a time when a man felt cold—so awfully cold, and hungry—so awfully hungry, and he didn't know if he loved anybody.

When would the churches begin to give up thinking about souls? The usual question asked a man was if he were prepared to die. Did it never occur to anybody to ask if he was able to live?

It was a poor, maimed gospel that saved people's souls on Sunday night and forgot people's bodies on Monday morning. He, Mr. Pearse, had heard the other day of a lady who gave a hungry man a tract and made him swear. The proper thing to have done was to have wrapped the tract round a dinner and given him that.

Mr. Pearse's definition of etiquette was biting in its irony. "The proper thing," he said, "to do, don't you know? That's etiquette."

A PASSIONATE REPLY

CAUSED A LITTLE SENSATION

Wished Those Who Did Not Understand the Motives of the Tribunal Would Abstain From Attributing Motives Which Did Not Exist—Pleasant Things Said at Lord Mayor's Dinner.

London, Oct. 14.—The members of the counsel and the attaches of the Alaskan Boundary Tribunal were entertained by the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Marcus Samuel, at a banquet at the Mansion House last night. Attorney-General Finlay and Sir Edward Carson were notable absentees, but most of the others associated with the case were present. It was a memorable occasion, attended by all the ancient customs, loving cups, city liveries and gorgeously appareled footmen.

The Lord Mayor proposed the health of President Roosevelt, while the band played the "Star Spangled Banner." Then His Lordship proposed the toast of the "Alaskan Boundary Tribunal." He declared that the present method of the submission to a tribunal of a dangerous dispute between two great nations would be a lasting lesson of peace to the world.

Lord Chief Justice Alverstone, in replying, after referring to the death of Sir Michael Herbert, said that though the Tribunal was not an illustration of arbitration, it was "an honest and patriotic attempt to solve by mutual discussion subjects which might become serious. I have no fault to find with anything that has been said and done. We have proceeded with great unanimity, and I only wish that those who do not understand the motives of the Tribunal would abstain from attributing motives to its members which do not exist."

This open reference to Canadian criticism of Lord Alverstone's supposed pre-disposition towards the American case caused no little sensation. It was followed by Lord Alverstone somewhat passionately declaring that in a long public career he had never objected to criticism after he had taken a certain course of action, but he did bitterly resent criticism beforehand.

Secretary Root followed with a speech. Amid intense silence he depicted Sir Michael Herbert's sweet reasonableness "and the loss sustained by both nations by the Ambassador's death."

"Some thought," continued Mr. Root, "that the Americans and Canadians came to London because Alaska was a wonderland of claimants, but the greatest object lesson of the whole proceeding was that the United States had such trust in Great Britain that she was willing to meet and discuss a question vital to her, not in a neutral capital, but in a capital belonging to one party to the controversy. Nothing could more emphasize the absolute confidence of all parties in the good faith, generous hospitality and fair play of the English people."

Sir Louis Jette echoed the sentiments expressed by Mr. Root on behalf of Canada, and Senator Lodge declared that the rapidity of the proceedings was a lesson to all nations who avoided such a pacific method of settlement on the ground of prolonging procedure.

Messrs. Dickinson and Robinson responded on behalf of America and Canada respectively, and Ambassador Choate proposed the health of the Lord Mayor and Lady Samuel.

WHAT IT IS BASED ON.

Ground For Believing Lord Alverstone Will Side With Yankees.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—In the Commons yesterday, Sir Wilfrid Laurier read the following cable from Lord Alverstone, the chairman of the Alaskan Boundary Tribunal:

"Laurier, Ottawa:

"London, Oct. 13.—There is not the slightest foundation for statement attributed to me in Reuter telegram from Ottawa, dated 12th October, as to questions in House of Commons on that date. I have made no communication of any kind to any diplomatic officials or to any person respecting the case. The report is an absolute fabrication.

(Signed) "Alverstone."

In reply to Mr. Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that no cablegram had been received from Mr. Aylesworth.

Mr. Aylesworth Speaks.

London, Oct. 14.—Nothing was given out regarding the deliberations of the Alaskan Tribunal, which adjourned till to-day.

Mr. Aylesworth, the Canadian Commissioner, in relation to the question in the Dominion Parliament Monday on the subject of an interview with him, yesterday made the following statement to the Associated Press:

"Being asked a few days ago whether there was any likelihood that the decision of the Tribunal would be influenced by diplomatic considerations, Mr. Aylesworth replied, speaking for himself, that he certainly would never consent to give away a single inch of territory he believed to be British."

The Canadian story created some concern. It appears certain that neither Mr. Aylesworth nor Sir Louis Jette has the slightest intention of agreeing to the American arguments. The Americans still have no reason to diminish their feeling of hopefulness that some agreement will be reached, this feeling is largely based on the trend of Lord Alverstone's interpolations during the argument.

"800" FURTHER TIED UP.

Judgments in the Lake Superior Consolidated Company's Case.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—Judge Britton, after hearing the lengthy arguments in the matter of the several injunctions granted in the Lake Superior Consolidated Company's case, disposed of the matter in the following manner: Judgment reserved on the motion to continue the injunction granted restraining Judge Johnston from giving judgment in the action before him in the Algoma District Court; and the four injunctions obtained by James Bicknell preventing those in charge of the Soo Company from disposing of the property in any way to be continued until the trial of the action. A speedy trial of these actions is recommended, and the company is further enjoined not to receive any cash on account of any business outstanding.

Died Aged 103.

Edmonton, Oct. 14.—William McMillan, who was born in Edmonton, then a trading post of the Hudson Bay Company, one hundred and three years ago, died recently at his home in St. James.

Ballentyne For Senator.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—A deputation of western dairymen yesterday urged upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier the appointment of Thomas Ballantyne as Senator in the place of the late Dr. Landerkin.

Another War Looms Up.

Panama, Oct. 14.—There are reasons to believe that Nicaragua and Guatemala are on the eve of declaring war on Salvador and Honduras. Boundaries and land concessions are involved in the differences between the countries.

Given Life Sentence.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—Earl Ellsworth, who confessed to having murdered his father and mother and a boarder at his home in Woodstock, yesterday threw himself on the mercy of the court and was given a life sentence.

Fifteen Men Drowned.

Fayal, Azores, Oct. 14.—The American whaler, Joseph Manta, has been wrecked on the Island of Pico, one of the Azores group, and 15 on board were lost.

ROSEBERY'S ATTACK

Took Form of Ridicule of Mr. Chamberlain's Fiscal Scheme.

FREE TRADE MADE BRITAIN.

His Criticism of the Ex-Colonial Secretary Heartily Cheered—Dilated on the Evils of Protection and Quoted Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the Elements of Empire Building—Mr. Chamberlain Was Cool.

London, Oct. 14.—Lord Rosebery spoke last night at Sheffield, whither he went in order to definitely record his opposition to Mr. Chamberlain's fiscal policy. The Earl said he doubted if there had ever been any fiscal inquiry. The Ministry had probably investigated not the nation's commerce, but the constituencies. He deprecated a policy of retaliation which would land the Empire in a contest with every nation in the civilized world. He held that free trade had been a great success. The new policy instead of solidifying would tend to dislocate and probably dissolve the Empire. Protection once established could not be uprooted, and would bring in its train trusts, monopolies and probably corruption.

He ridiculed the idea that the colonies would consent not to establish new industries for the benefit of the United Kingdom. A fair and practical Imperial tariff could not be devised, and heaven protect them from the bad blood and jealousies that such an attempt would engender. What Mr. Chamberlain's friends ignored was that everything in the Empire had been strong and successful, but it was free and spontaneous. Lord Rosebery quoted Sir Wilfrid Laurier to the effect that not restricted trade but only the most absolute freedom, political and commercial, would succeed in building up the Empire.

In conclusion, His Lordship said he could not forget the long agony with which the nation had passed from the protective system, which had brought the country from the verge of famine and ruin into the better and freer conditions now prevailing. They could not risk this splendid result on a hazard of the political die.

A storm of cheers greeted the Earl's closing remarks.

Lyttelton Says They Are at One.

Colonial Secretary Lyttleton issued an election address to his constituents at Warwick and Leamington yesterday morning, in which he says he is in entire agreement with the fiscal change "which Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain together advocate." He said it should be distinctly understood that there is no proposal to impose preferential tariffs for the colonies without further reference to the electorate.

New President of the Council.

Lord Londonderry has been appointed Lord President of the Council, in succession to the Duke of Devonshire. It is understood that His Lordship will retain the portfolio of education, and his new appointment will thus make little practical difference to his position in the Cabinet.

Joseph Chamberlain Has Gout.

Joseph Chamberlain is confined to his bed at Highbury, his residence at Birmingham, by a sharp attack of his old enemy, gout. He hopes to have sufficiently recovered to keep his Newcastle engagement, Oct. 20.

DESERTED CHILD CASE.

Dr. Jolley of Port Dover and Maud Smith, the Mother, in Jail.

Hamilton, Oct. 14.—When Acting Detective Miller placed Dr. J. F. Jolley, Port Dover, under arrest last night, he created a sensation. A young girl not twenty years of age, who goes under the name of Maud Smith, occupies an adjoining cell. They are both charged with deserting the child found on the lawn of Edward Martin, K.C., last Saturday morning. The Smith girl confesses that she is the mother of the infant. She is an orphan and lives in the township of Walpole.

The unfortunate child was found half dead on Mr. Martin's lawn the next morning at 6 o'clock. It is now suffering from a severe attack of bronchitis, and may die from the result of the exposure.

Dr. Jolley is a married man about 50 years of age. He has practiced medicine in Port Dover for years, and is known all over that district.

THE ENGLISH FLOODS.

Rainfall Almost Reached Record Point For 24 Years.

London, Oct. 14.—England's tale of rain and flood shows the outlook becoming hourly more serious. There was some abatement of the downpour in London yesterday, but the total rainfall is rapidly approaching a point equal to the highest noted since the Meteorological Office was established in 1866.

The highest recorded rainfall was in 1879, when, in London, it registered 31.99 inches. At 8 o'clock Monday morning the downpour during the current year was 21.18.

Rivers are high everywhere, and in many places have broken their bounds. Railway traffic has been interfered with and great inconvenience has been caused in several towns by inundations. Acres of grain are under water in Yorkshire, and reports of general floods come from the North of England.

THE NEW COLONIAL SECRETARY

Something About Mr. Chamberlain's Successor.

The Hon. Alfred Lyttelton, K. C., M.P., has been appointed secretary for the Colonies in succession to the Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain. The name is spelled "Lyttelton" not "Littleton" as in many papers; the Littletons are quite another family, of which Lord Hatherton is the head. The new Colonial secretary's fitness for this responsible position is being adversely criticised because he is not well known as a politician. This probably, is a qualification rather than a drawback. The administration of the Colonies demands a freshness of mind, power of initiative, sympathy with the buoyant, the youthful spirit of Colonial life and its ambitious aspirations which are not to be found in a political hack.

Inexperienced he is not. He has been in close touch with colonial life from childhood. This important fact has escaped all our contemporaries. Mr. Lyttelton is a son of the late Baron Lyttelton who took a deep, active interest in the settlement of New Zealand, one principal city of which bears the family name. In his work, "Ephemora" is a most interesting lecture of New Zealand, based on personal knowledge of that Colony. He was Under-Secretary of the Colonies in 1846, and held views far ahead of his time as to the wisdom of according them rights of self-government. His speech in the House of Lords, July 5, 1850, on the Australian Government Bill, and his treatise on "The Colonial Empire of Great Britain" are masterpieces of exposition regarding colonial affairs and full of historical information. Of Canada Lord Lyttelton said, "Canada knows and feels that it has self-government, which is as good a security as any Colony can desire." Again, "The entire control of all matters relating to the Colony itself should be left to the Legislature of the Colony, while subjects bearing on the interests of the Empire at large should determined by Imperial authority." These statesmanlike views were uttered in 1849-50 and were repeated in after years. Mr. Lyttelton, the new secretary for the Colonies, was brought up in a Colonial atmosphere; as a boy he doubtless knew more about British Colonies from his father's teaching than the great bulk of the politicians of the day.

Mr. Lyttelton was selected by Mr. Chamberlain to serve as chairman of the Commission to enquire into the affairs of South Africa, he also took part in the arbitration between the Government of Newfoundland and Mr. Reid. He therefore has had far more experience in Colonial affairs than his predecessor enjoyed prior to his taking office as Colonial Secretary. In nature, strength of intellect and culture Mr. Lyttelton compares favourably with any living politician. His father was one of the most erudite classical scholars of the age, and in all other respects was an honour to the peerage and his country. One can safely predict a brilliant career for the Hon. Alfred Lyttelton.

WHEAT.

(Montreal Witness.)

We have read a story of a farmer who consoled himself for the partial failure of his crop with the fact that his neighbours' crops were just as bad. This is this season the position of the Canadian farmer, and his consolation is a very real one, amounting to ten cents a bushel on his wheat. The wheat crop is smaller than last year's crop, and averages about one grade lower, but yet will net its growers several million dollars more, because crops in other countries have suffered more, and there is a very large demand for the hard wheat that grows best in the Canadian Northwest. It is true that there is almost no No. 1 hard wheat—one miller estimates the total amount at about one per cent. of the whole crop, or perhaps half a million bushels—but the northern grades will make just as good flour, the only difference being that a larger amount of waste must be extracted. The miller quoted above believes that about a quarter of the crop will be No. 1 Northern, half No. 2 Northern, and the rest lower grades. Another equally well informed miller thinks that the graded wheat will be about equally divided between No. 1 Northern and No. 2 Northern. There is an unusually large amount of "no grade," damp or frosted wheat, but much of this, when properly dried, will be perfectly good for milling. But while the farmer is better off, in spite of his worse crop, the consumer, that is to say, every one who eats bread, is that much worse off. An increase of ten cents a bushel on wheat means an increase of about forty-five cents a barrel on flour. There has been an actual rise in the price of Manitoba flour of seventy cents in the last year, but this was largely due to unusual conditions. Many small millers, not having the facilities of the larger companies for buying and storing wheat, had not bought their supplies in the autumn, and this summer found them very short of wheat, a condition that was aggravated by the lateness of this year's crop. Their bids forced the price of old No. 1 hard wheat at one time almost to the dollar mark, while the large milling companies, having laid in their supplies at lower prices, kept the price of flour from advancing too rapidly. The present price of flour about reflects the price at which the first lots of this year's harvest sold, but as the price of wheat has declined considerably since then, it is not impossible that flour may also come down, unless wheat goes up again.

SOME HAPPENINGS IN THE NORTHERN TOWN.

Personal Mention and Other Happenings of Interest at Lakefield.

Mrs. Dr. Fraser, who has been in Montreal for the past month visiting with friends, has returned to the village.

Mr. J. H. Sherin, of the village, is we regret to say, laid up in Toronto with an attack of inflammation of the bowels. Mr. Sherin was in Toronto to see his wife, who has also been ill, when he was taken sick. Mr. Sherin, at last reports was doing as well as could be expected, and hopes are entertained for a speedy recovery.

Evangelist Russell held a meeting in the town hall on Sunday for men only, which was largely attended. Mr. Russell spoke on David and pointed out that this is the age when men could do much good by daring to stand alone, without fear of criticism.

Mrs. S. Findley, of Lindsay, is visiting Mrs. A. Northey in the village.

Mrs. McDonald of Winnipeg, is visiting Mrs. H. G. Fitzgerald, Queen street.

The Killin-Keough Concert Company gave a concert in the town hall on Tuesday evening last, under the auspices of the Epworth League. The concert was very successful, although the house was not the largest. Those who were able to attend were amply repaid by a very delightful programme.

The annual Harvest Home Festival of the Methodist church will be held in the Town Hall on Thanksgiving Day.

The many friends of Mrs. Roland Johnston, of this village, will regret to learn that she has been suffering from a slight attack of rheumatism.

The Scottish entertainers are going to hold a series of entertainments in the town hall, beginning on Friday evening, October 16th.

Mr. Stewart of Norwood, has taken Mr. Knowles' place in the Traders' Bank here.

LAKEHURST.

Mrs. W. J. Northey has been ill for some time.

Mr. George Detcher of Peterborough, who has been in Harvey for the last two months, returned home on Wednesday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnott and child of Peterborough, came up to Lakehurst on Saturday evening last to visit at Mr. Thomas Tedford's.

Mrs. Thos. Tedford, who was seriously hurt some time ago, is recovering, although very slowly.

Rev. W. E. Smith of China, returned missionary, is to occupy the pulpit of the Methodist church on next Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McGuire spent last Sunday at Deer Bay.

Miss Sharp, who has been in Harvey all summer, returned to her home in Westwood on Wednesday last.

Miss Beattie Clarkson, has been quite ill but is now much better.

Miss Maggie Richardson, who has been visiting her cousin, Miss Edna Shearer for the last three weeks, returned home on Friday last.

The farmers are busy at present picking apples and very often the girls are pressed into service. A few days ago one young lady fell from a tree and hung by her apron but fortunately her mother, who was near, released her and averted what might otherwise have proved a disatrous accident.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. BULGARIAN INSURGENTS.

Practically Annihilated in the Peristeri Mountains, Where Those Who Remain Have a Stronghold.

Monastir, Oct. 14.—This district is settling down. The insurgents have been routed and practically annihilated in the Peristeri Mountains, though their stronghold is still the meeting place of what insurrectionists remain in the region.

Chakalaroff, the insurgent leader, is still at large in the Kastoria district, but most of the peasants who accompanied him have surrendered.

The Inspector-General, Hilmi Pasha, in concert with the mixed commission, is arranging to re-build the homes which were destroyed out of Government funds.

70 Insurgents Caught.

Sofia, Oct. 14.—A band of seventy insurgents, caught near the frontier by Bulgarian troops, was sent to Sofia Monday.

The general situation is unchanged. Fear is expressed in many quarters that the Turks will oppose the application of the Austro-Hungarian reform plans.

THE BRANTFORD MURDER.

Mrs. Howe Recognizes Bag She Sold Kennedy—Prof. Ellis' Analysis.

Brantford, Oct. 14.—The preliminary hearing of Joseph Kennedy, charged with the murder of Irene Cole, was resumed yesterday morning before Police Magistrate Woodyatt.

In the afternoon several witnesses were examined touching the finding of a chicken and a bag near the spot where Irene Cole was murdered. Mrs Claasdell said Kennedy was at her house to buy a chicken. She would not sell him one, and he asked her to sell him something that would amuse a little girl. Mrs. Campbell gave similar testimony, and Mrs. Howe told of selling a chicken to the prisoner. She identified the chicken found in the swamp as the one she had sold Kennedy, and the bag as the one Kennedy used to take the chicken away in.

The report of Prof. Ellis, the provincial analyist, was not read. It is in the hands of Dr. Ashton, and it will depend on the remainder of the evidence to be put in whether it will be reserved until the trial of the prisoner in the spring. Though it is not stated what the report will say, it is generally believed that it will be a strong card of the prosecution in fixing the crime on Kennedy.

The investigation was adjourned till Friday, and it may require two more sittings to get the evidence all in.

CAVALRY WOUNDED STRIKERS.

Latter Put Pieces of Linen Across Street as Protection.

Armentieres, Department du Nord, Oct. 14.—Strikers who pillaged linen stores, have stretched pieces of linen across the streets to prevent cavalry charges. The banks have also been attacked, all the houses are closed, and the inhabitants are in a state of terror. There are some troops here, but they are insufficient to maintain order. The strikers barricaded all the corners of the streets, and set fire to a factory. The cavalry charged, along the streets, in spite of the obstructions, wounding a number of people.

LESS ALARMING IN FAR EAST.

Though Russia Is Hustling Troops Into the Far East

London, Oct. 14.—The trend of yesterday's early information regarding the Far Eastern situation is less alarming.

A St. Petersburg despatch says: Russia is now transporting 50,000 troops, nurses, physicians and hospital supplies to the Far East. The present strength of the Russian army there is reliably reported to be 283,000 men. Officers detailed for duty in the Orient have been forbidden to take their wives.

Man Died From Steam Scalds.

Toronto Junction, Oct. 14.—The body of Thomas Bryant was taken to Scruton's undertaking rooms last night, he having died on the train while being brought to the Western Hospital in Toronto from Havelock to receive attention for scalds. Bryant was working in the railway yards there, and his injuries were received through a collision between engines, causing him to be enveloped in steam. The dead man was 45 years of age and lived at Chalk River, where the body will be taken for interment.

Stock Slump at Montreal.

Montreal, Oct. 14.—The Montreal stock market was the scene of great excitement when the biggest slump of the year, in fact, of many years, occurred, wiping out many small holders. The declines ranged all the way from five to ten points, and there was heavy liquidation. All the stocks were affected by the break and there was a general decline.

HON. MR. COX'S REPLY

Senator Has Waited for Ex-Minister of Railway's Apology.

FOR 'COX CAN'T WAIT' SPEECH

A Very Unjust Attack—Mr. Hays Invited Him to Become a Provisional Director—Conservatives Repeating the Mistake of the Liberals Who Opposed the C.P.R.—Country Wants New Road.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—Hon. Geo. E. Cox made a statement last night in the Senate, in answer to the use of his name by Mr. Blair in the House of Commons during the debate on the Grand Trunk Pacific bill, and the impression which the ex-Minister of Railways sought to convey. He stated that he was at a loss to understand what Mr. Blair meant by the expression, "Cox can't wait." The implication that he had been guilty of improper conduct, or of any undue influence, or attempt at undue influence, with the Government or any member of it, was, Mr. Cox said, absolutely false, and he protested most strongly against the unjust attacks of which he had been the victim.

His Connection With Company.

Of his connection with the railway he said: "I desire to explain that the project was well under way when Mr. Chas. M. Hays, the Vice-President and General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, did me the honor of asking me to be one of the provisional directors of the Grand Trunk Pacific. I regarded it then, and I so regard it now, as a very great honor to be associated with one of the most, if not the most, important undertakings that has ever been entered upon in Canada. I do not place it second in importance to even the Canadian Pacific Railway. My compliance with the request of the Grand Trunk authorities to act as one of the directors of the company is the sum total of my offence, if such it may be called, that has brought down upon me the most unfair and untruthful criticism in and out of Parliament.

An Explicit Denial.

"Not withstanding the statement that 'Cox can't wait,' I have been patiently waiting for the simple justice that one gentleman has a right to expect from another. I have been waiting for the ex-Minister either to apologize and remove the false impression that his words have conveyed to the public, or else to do me the justice to explain to the country and myself what he meant by using my name in the way he did. In the meantime, in the absence of such apology or explanation, I desire to say to this honorable House that the implied charge of improper conduct upon my part, or of any undue influence, or any attempt at undue influence with the Government or any member of it, is absolutely and entirely false. There is no foundation whatever in fact for such a slanderous statement.

"The lamentable mistake made by some of the Liberal party of that day is being enacted by the Conservative party of to-day. It will keep them, as it kept the Liberals, eighteen years longer in the cold shades of Opposition. The petitions now being presented in opposition to this important measure remind one of the petitions and indignation meetings that used to be held in opposition to the C.P.R. The country wants and will have the second great continental highway."

Sir Mackenzie's Criticism.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, after congratulating Mr. Scott upon his recovery, proceeded to criticize the bill. The Grand Trunk, they were told, never wanted this railway, but simply a line from North Bay to the wheatfields of the Northwest. Had the scheme been simply to build from Quebec it would not have been so bad. Had he understood Mr. Scott to say on the previous day that if the railway proved to be too expensive it would not be built?

Mr. Scott—I said if it was found impracticable.

Sir Mackenzie reminded the Senate of Mr. de Cosmos' expression with regard to the line to Bute, that nothing was impossible with money and time.

RAILWAY COMMISSION BILL.

House of Commons Disposes of the Senate's Seventy Amendments.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—The House took a couple of hours yesterday to deal with the Senate amendments to the Railway Commission Bill. There were seventy of these in all. The House concurred in fifty-six of them and rejected twelve, and made amendments to two. There will be a conference between the Minister of Justice and the leaders in the Senate to endeavor to reach an understanding on the dozen amendments of the Senate in which the House refused to concur.

The first amendment rejected was that which placed railways with provincial charters under Dominion jurisdiction only as regards their crossings with other roads, and as to their through business. The Commons held that the amendment besides being practically unworkable, is of doubtful legality. All railways under the jurisdiction of the Commission, the Commons insists, shall be declared to be works for the general advantage of Canada.

The amendment which declares a member of the Commission shall forfeit his seat on the board for accepting a gift from a railway, directly or indirectly, was rejected on the ground that any corrupt act necessarily constitutes cause for removal under the bill. Mr. Fitzpatrick considered that by the Senate amendment a commissioner might be disqualified for taking a cigar.

Re. the amendment providing that appeal from the decision of the board may be taken if leave is granted by two judges, it was insisted by the Commons that in the interest of summary decisions leave to appeal should only be granted by the board itself.

Another amendment in regard to wires was accepted. It gives the municipalities absolute control in regard to ordering wires underground. Still another amendment was rejected because it limited the power of the board to compel a railway to give farm crossings.

An amendment giving municipalities absolute control over electric light and power enterprises was rejected.

The 40th amendment was rejected because it enables a person to contract himself out of his claim for damages, providing such contract be approved by the board.

There were cries of "Hear, hear," from Mr. Lancaster, and Mr. E. F. Clarke when on motion of the Minister of Justice to reject the Senate amendment in regard to cattle guards being in the interest entirely of the railways, was carried. The reason given for its rejection was that the amendment does not remedy the evil existing under the present law.

The 46th amendment was rejected on the ground that Parliament cannot limit the amount in regard to which an application be taken.

Amendments 52 and 58 to the clauses forbidding pooling and discrimination were discussed at length. Finally it was suggested to limit the proposed provision against discrimination so as to simply provide against discrimination of any kind in regard to the allotment of cars. The 60th and 70th amendments were rejected as being unnecessary.

The new civil service bill was taken up and carried to the third reading stage at the afternoon sitting of the House, several unimportant amendments being made.

The House also passed the resolutions increasing the salaries of the librarians of Parliament, and the Supreme Court.

The only change of importance made in the bill in committee was to strike out the clause which declared that the act should be deemed to have come into force on July 1 of this year.

In reply to a question from Capt. Hackett (West Prince) as to the Government's intention respecting rural mail delivery, Sir William Mulock said the matter had been pressed upon him from time to time, but up to this time the department had arrived at no conclusion. The request was constantly being made from all parts of the Dominion. It was a subject of very serious consideration.

"I think Canada is not ripe for any such movement," added Sir William. "Canada would not for a moment contribute the cost that such a step would involve. It is wholly beyond the resources of Canada to-day to attempt to establish a rural mail delivery, a system which even the continent of Europe, with four hundred millions of people, has not yet attempted to establish."

The House sat until nearly 2 o'clock this morning, debating a resolution by Mr. Borden, demanding provincial autonomy for the Northwest Territories. It was defeated by 68 to 29.

TOOK A STRAW VOTE.

Interesting Experiment in a Restaurant.

An advertising agent, representing a prominent New York magazine, while on a recent western trip, was dining one evening in a Pittsburg restaurant.

While waiting for his order he glanced over his newspaper and noticed the advertisement of a well known dyspepsia preparation, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; as he himself was a regular user of the tablets, he began speculating as to how many of the other traveling men in the dining room were also friends of the popular remedy for indigestion.

He says: I counted twenty-three men at the tables and in the hotel office I took the trouble to interview them and was surprised to learn that nine of the twenty-three made a practice of taking one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal.

One of them told me he had suffered so much from stomach trouble that at one time he had been obliged to quit the road, but since using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets had been entirely free from indigestion, but he continued their use, especially while travelling, on account of irregularity in meals and because like all travelling men he was often obliged to eat what he could get and not always what he wanted.

Another, who looked the picture of health, said he never ate a meal without taking a Stuart Tablet afterward because he could eat what he pleased and when he pleased without fear of a sleepless night or any other trouble.

Still another used them because he was subject to gas on stomach, causing pressure on heart and lungs, shortness of breath and distress in chest, which he no longer experienced since using the tablets regularly.

Another claimed that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was the only safe remedy he had ever found for sour stomach and acidity. He had formerly used common soda to relieve the tablets were much better and safer to use.

After smoking, drinking or other excesses which weaken the digestive organs, nothing restores the stomach to a healthy, wholesome condition so effectually as Stuart's Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the natural digestives, pepsin, diastase, which every weak stomach lacks, as well as nux, hydrastin and yellow parilla, and can be safely relied on as a radical cure for every form of poor digestion. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Tale of the Sea.

New York, Oct. 14.—The German steamer Verona, from China and Japan, brought fifteen mariners, taken from the Uruguayan barque Salvator Talavera, in latitude 32.57, longitude 57.44. The barque encountered a terrific hurricane Sept. 28. The crew clung to the wreck, constantly drenched by the breaking seas for ten days.

Boxing in Toronto.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—Entries for the annual fall amateur boxing championship closed yesterday with a list of 40 candidates. The preliminaries will be contested on Thanksgiving night.

People of This Place.

There are people in every town and village of this country who have been cured of itching, bleeding and protruding piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Ask your friends about this great preparation, they can tell you of its great soothing, healing and antiseptic powers. More reputable people have endorsed Dr. Chase's Ointment than any preparation you can mention.

TWO SUPERSTITIONS.

"Toad Stories"—Animals Are Said to Exist for a Long Time in the Interior of Rocks.

The unfortunate toad has from time immemorial been an object of distrust and aversion, especially among the common people. A pleasing tale runs that a gentleman, walking along a country lane, came suddenly upon a village boy, belaboring the crushed body of a toad with a heavy stick, and exclaiming at each blow, "I'll larn 'es to be a toad!" Whereat the indignant newcomer, seizing the miscreant by his collar, vigorously applied a cane to his legs, remarking, "I'll larn you to be a boy!" The popular hatred of the toad, indeed, is of such antiquity and is still so general as to seem ineradicable. That the creature is not dangerously poisonous it is hopeless to attempt to convince the ordinary rustic. Doubtless this belief has its origin in the acrid secretion which the toad has the power of emitting when disturbed or annoyed unduly, and which will cause a dog that has incautiously picked a toad up to foam at the mouth. Again, the uncouth appearance of the creature has had much to do with the feeling of repulsion with which it has always been regarded. "Squat like a toad" is the phrase by which Milton describes the evil one essaying to reach the ear of Eve.

Superstition, in truth, has laid a firm hold on the toad's misshapen figure. The belief, not only in the existence of "toad-stones," but in their efficacy as a sovereign remedy for certain ills, which is still common in parts of the country, is of very ancient date. "There is to be found in the heads of old and great toads," says Fenton, writing in 1569, "a stone they call borax or stelon, which being used as rings give forewarning of venom." In the Londesborough Collection is a silver ring, of the fifteenth century, in which one of these toad-stones is set. They were supposed always to bear on their surface a figure resembling a toad, being somewhat similar trinkets, one may imagine, to the "scarabaeus" ornament of the Egyptians. Another early writer remarks, "A toad-stone, called 'trepandis,' touching any part envenomed by the bite of a rat, wasp, spider, or other venomous beast, ceases the pain and swelling thereof." It was believed that when brought near to poison, the stone sweated and changed color, thus conveying to its wearer a timely warning of his danger.

Perhaps the most familiar superstition in regard to toads is that, still rife, which supposes them capable of existing for an indefinite period in the interior of rocks, stones, or hermetically sealed cavities. Numberless "authentic instances" of this remarkable power have been brought forward from time to time. The following example, from an old book, is typical: "In 1793, Mr. George Wilson, a mason, met with a toad, which he wantonly immured in a stone wall that he was then building. In the middle of the wall he made a close cell of lime and stone, just fit for the magnitude of the toad, and accordingly so plastered up as to shut out the admission of air. In 1800 (eleven years afterwards) it was found necessary to open a part of this wall, for a passage for water, when the poor creature was found alive in its chronghold. It seemed at first in a very torpid state, but it soon recovered animation and activity; and as if sensible of the blessing of freedom, made its way to a collection of stones, and disappeared." It is known that toads can exist for a long time without food, and it is generally believed that they live to a great age; and doubtless these two peculiarities have had much to do with the superstition in regard to their supposed penchant for a hermit's life. The fallacy, however, was completely exposed by Dean Buckland, father of Frank Buckland, the great naturalist, who went to the trouble of testing the truth of the theory by an exhaustive series of experiments. It need only to be remarked that none of his victims survived their incarceration.

In legendary, as in superstitious lore, the toad plays no small part. It may not be generally known that the fleur de lis of France was originally in shape a toad. Thus, at least, runs the tale. Clovis, King of France, bore on his banner the device of three toads, or "botes," as they were called in old French. His baptism gave great umbrage to the Arians, who rebelled and assembled a large host against him under King Candat. Clovis, while on his way to meet the heretics, was granted a vision, wherein he saw in the heavens his device of three toads miraculously changed into three lilies "or" on a banner "azure." Such a banner he caused instantly to be made, calling it his "liflambe." And even before his army came in sight of King Candat, the latter's heretic host lay dead, slain like the army of Sennacherib by a blast from the God of battles. In the quaint phraseology of Fabian's Chronicle, "It is wytnessayd of Maister Robert Gagwyne that before thyse dayes all French kynges used to bere in their armies iii Todys, but after this Clodoveus had recognised Cristes relygyon iii Fleoure de lys were sent to hym by divine power, setts in a shylde of azure, the whiche syns that been borne of all French kynges."

It might be thought that the expression "Toady," short for "toad-eater," contained a reflection upon the already much reproached creature. The opprobrious epithet, however, has a very different origin, which, though having nothing to do with the strict subject of this article, it may perhaps be of interest to give here. "Toad-eater" is a corruption from a Spanish word "mi todita" (my factotum), being the phrase used by the lazy Castillians to describe the busy servants into which they made the vanquished Moors. Hence a cringing and officious dependent, ready to perform any sort of dirty work on his patron's behalf, came to be known as a "todita," "toad-eater," or "toady."

Suez Canal Business.

The Suez Canal, cut at such tremendous cost of money and life, is proving a lucrative investment to its present owners. The net tonnage passing through the canal last year increased 424,573 tons over 1901. The transit receipts were over twenty million dollars—the highest received since the opening of the canal; 3,708 vessels passed through the canal last year, of which 2,165 flew the British flag.

Scrawny People.

People grow thin, scrawny, pale and weak when the blood is thin and watery. What is needed to round off the angles and fill out the form, is not fat but healthy muscular tissue. By enriching the blood and increasing its nourishing qualities Dr. Chase's Nerve Food adds new flesh and tissue to the body as well as new vigour and energy. You can prove this by noting your increase in weight while using this great cure.

One of the Lost Arts.

It is said that the Greeks had a cuirass made of linen or woollen fibers, which was impenetrable to the sharpest darts or spears. That, by the way is one of the discoveries that have not been rediscovered, for we do not know the secret of its manufacture.

Not a minute should be lost when a child shows symptoms of croup. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears will prevent the attack. It never fails, and is pleasant and safe to take.

AN OPEN MEETING OF ROYAL TEMPLARS.

Addresses Given and Musical Programme Rendered.

The members of Peterborough Council, Royal Templars of Temperperance, held a very pleasing at home at their hall last night, when a large number of their friends were enjoyably entertained. The programme for the evening took the form of a musical entertainment followed by refreshments served by the ladies, and proved a highly successful event.

The chairman was Mr. Jackson, the Select Councillor of the local Council, and the programme was contributed to by Mrs. McCall, who sang a solo very effectively, and to the enjoyment of all who heard her, Mrs. Rehill, who also sang, and upon the request of the chairman, favoured the audience with a second selection, both of which were fully appreciated. Other selections were, a reading by Mr. Lee, solo by Mr. Devereau, and a mandolin solo given by Mr. Peters.

Addresses were given by Rev. J. P. Wilson and Rev. J. Bastow, both of whom expressed their pleasure at being present and congratulated the Council on the success of its effort.

The Council was fortunate in having secured the presence of Mr. Mulholland of Toronto, General Organizer for the Order in Canada, for the meeting last night. Mr. Mulholland gave an address in which the objects of the Order were discussed, and also the work accomplished by it. The address was most interesting and the speaker evidenced not only a decided talent as an entertainer but a thorough knowledge of the Order he represented.

After refreshments had been served, the meeting was closed by singing "Auld Lang Syne."

THANKSGIVING DAY— HOW TO SPEND IT.

The Annual Day for Returning Thanks to be To-morrow.

Thanksgiving Day has again been fixed, to be celebrated in October, and to-morrow the annual holiday will be held. For those who wish to leave town and spend the day with outside friends, the railways have arranged single fare rates for return trip tickets. The steamer Majestic will also make a special trip to Stony Lake from Lakefield, for any who may wish to take a last trip for the season to that point.

By far, the greater number, however, will doubtless remain in town, and for those who do not wish for entertainment, a union service will be held in the George street church, at 11 o'clock, at which the preacher will be Rev. A. H. Brace, of the Park street Baptist church. The combined choirs of the town will provide the music.

Service will also be held in each of the English churches, those in St. Luke's and St. John's commencing at 10.30 o'clock, and that at All Saints' at 11. The collection at St. John will be on behalf of the Diocesan missions. Rev. E. R. James of Hastings, will preach the services at All Saints.

The great attraction in the afternoon will be the championship Rugby game at the Oval played between the Wellesleys of Toronto, and the Peterborough team. Mr. George Biggs, of Varsity, will referee the game.

In the evening there will be a Thanksgiving tea at St. Andrew's, and also at the Charlotte street church, each of which will be followed by a good programme, and will, no doubt, be attended by large numbers. The Methodist church at Lakefield will hold a tea and concert and some from town will drive out to that event.

THE FORTNIGHTLY CLUB HELD ANNUAL MEETING.

Bright Prospects for the Coming Season.

A Large Attendance—The Election of Officers—Other Business Transacted.

The annual meeting of the Fortnightly Club was held in the Y.M.C.A. parlours yesterday afternoon noon with the following attendance: Mayor Roger, Col. H. C. Rogers, Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, Mr. J. H. Burnham, Rev. C. Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. K. Eardly-Wilmot, Mrs. Macfarlane Wilson, Dr. McNulty, Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, Mr. J. Jeffries, Mrs. Boucher, Mrs. Moore, Mr. Jos. Garvin, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. MacWilliams, Sheriff Hall, Mr. Toker and Mr. W. Sailsbury.

Reports for the past year were presented by the President, Mr. J. Jeffries, and the Secretary, Alderman McWilliams. These showed fewer events than in other years, but that the membership, which numbers 150, was larger than heretofore in the history of the club. The lectures had been largely attended, eminently successful and highly appreciated.

The Treasurer, Mr. John Green, reported the revenue equal to the expenditure, thus leaving no balance on hand.

President—Rev. J. C. Davidson, M.A.
Vice-President—Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.A.
Secretary-Treasurer — Mr. Jos. Garvin.

Executive Committee—Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. K. Early-Wilmot, Mrs. Boucher, and Messrs. H. R. H. Kenner, D. Hughes-Charles, Sheriff Hall and Dr. McNulty.

In taking the chair, Rev. J. C. Davidson, the new president, expressed the honour which he felt in being selected to preside over so useful an institution as the Fortnightly Club. The thought of its mission to the community filled him with enthusiasm. Peterborough, he said, had been, and is, progressing rapidly in size, wealth and other material things, but this very progress carried with it certain dangers. There was danger of the citizens being so busily engrossed as to find but little time for the refinements and gentler influences of life and if these were not to be thrust out, combined effort, and association were necessary, and this was offered in the Fortnightly Club, a history of which the speaker here gave a brief account. Another important advantage of the Club was that the members of different political parties, religions and other walks in life here met on a common ground, genial atmosphere and among up-lifting influence. Few public institutions in town were more valuable than the Fortnightly Club and it was to be hoped that all newly elected officers and members would co-operate heartily in promoting its aims and objects during the coming season.

Prior to the close of the meeting considerable discussion ensued on the manner in which the programme for the season be drawn up. It is expected that several prominent Canadians will appear under the auspices of the Club.

ENGINEER THOMAS BRYANT WAS SCALDED TO DEATH.

Another Fatality at Havelock—The Second Within Three Days.

Belleville, Oct. 13th. — The second fatal accident in the C.P.R. yards at Havelock in three days, occurred this morning at 11 o'clock. The shunting engine backing out of a siding collided with a freight engine in charge of Engineer Thos. Bryant, of North Bay. The tender of the shunter struck the side of the other engine just where Engineer Bryant was sitting, breaking all the steam pipes and scalding him so badly about the face and hands that he cannot live. Inattention to signals on the part o fthe man in charge of the shunting engine is said to be the cause of the accident.—Globe.

Bryant, whose home is in Chalk River, died on the train on the way to Toronto, about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The body was removed to L. Scruton's undertaking rooms, Toronto Junction, and was forwarded this morning to Chalk river station. The deceased was 45 years of age, and leaves a widow and family.

THE DESIGN HAS NOW BEEN DECIDED UPON.

The 57th Regiment's New Colours—More Subscriptions Still Needed.

A meeting of the Committee of Ladies, who have undertaken to procure a new stand of colours for the 57th Regiment, met at the Y.M.C.A. Hall this morning and discussed various estimates and designs. It was decided to place the order with the well known firm, Hobson & Son, London, England. This firm have their own silk mills, and during the last half century have supplied many Imperial and Colonial regiments with colours. They make a specialty of the silk used, which is graded in texture and dyes to suit various climatic conditions of different Colonies.

It is proposed to have the presentation take place on Empire Day (May 24th,) 1904.

The subscription list is still open, and the treasurer, Miss Barlee, will be pleased to receive contributions from those who have not yet paid. Subscriptions may also be left at the Examiner office.

The following ladies were present: Mrs. Dennistoun in the chair, and Mrs. P. Campbell, Mrs. O'Sullivan, Mrs. LeBrun, Miss Barlee, Miss Lundy, Miss A. Dennistoun.

WOOLEN EMPLOYEES PETITION THE MINISTER.

Ask for Protection to the Woolen Industry.

The employees of the Auburn Woollen Mills have sent a petition to the Minister of Customs asking that some tariff relief be afforded the industry. There is at present a duty of 23 1-2 per cent. on woollens coming here from England, and 35 per cent. on woollens imported from the United States. This, it is thought by the employees is insufficient and the following petition has been sent:

To the Hon. Wm. Paterson, M. P., Minister of Customs, Ottawa:

The petition of the undersigned humbly sheweth:—That the employment of the undersigned employees of the Auburn Woollen Company, Peterborough, is being seriously curtailed, and may be suspended altogether, should the present comparatively free importation of goods, coming in direct competition with the product of the Auburn Mills, be continued.

Believing that our present position is largely, if not altogether, due to the lack of proper protection from the importation of goods which are the products of cheaper labour, we would humbly solicit the earnest consideration of yourself and your colleagues, to the position in which we are placed, in the belief that in your wisdom you will be able to find a remedy for the present state of affairs and thus assure ourselves and our families against want during the winter season now approaching. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

This petition was signed by the employees of the Auburn Mills and forwarded to Ottawa on the 10th of October, to which the following reply was received:—

Robt. Mann, Esq., Auburn Woollen Mills, Peterborough:

Dear Sir,—I am directed by the Hon. Minister of Customs to acknowledge receipt of petition, signed by yourself and other employees of the Auburn Woollen Company, with reference to the tariff as it affects the woollen industry. The Minister wishes me to say to you that the representations made in the petition will be carefully considered by him.

Yours truly,
JOHN BAIN,
Assistant Commissioner.

LAKEFIELD WEDDING.

Miss Catherine Garvey Married to Mr. Michael Allen.

A very pretty wedding took place on Tuesday morning, September 29, at St. Paul's church, Lakefield, when Miss Catharine Frances Garvey, daughter of Mr. Dennis Garvey, of Smith, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Michael Allen, son of Mr. Edmond Allen of Douro. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Phelan, at 9 o'clock. The wedding march was played by Miss Maggie Kearney, of Young's Point, the church being crowded with friends of the contracting parties. After the ceremony was over the happy couple returned to the home of the bride's parents where about thirty took dinner.

The bride was attired in a suit of white organdie trimmed with chiffon and lace and wore a black picture hat, and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations. She was attended by her sister, Mary, who was also neatly attired, while the groom was assisted by his brother, James. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold chain and locket. In the evening about 140 guests gathered at the home of the bride, where they spent the night in dancing and in other amusements. The bride received many costly presents from her many friends, which showed the high esteem in which she is held. The young couple will reside in Lakefield.—Com.

SCARCITY OF HOUSES STILL CONTINUES.

Situation as Regards Dwelling Houses Reviewed.

Promise of Future Industrial Activities Finds the Town Ill Prepared to Accomodate Large Influx of Population.

There is perhaps no town in Ontario with a population of 4,000 and upwards from which does not come the cry that a house famine is prevailing, and this cry is daily becoming more and more intense.

Nowhere is that cry heard with greater reason than in Peterborough where the increase in population, during the past year, has probably been greater relatively than in any other place in Ontario. When you come to houses such as mechanics require they are almost impossible to obtain, and their lack threatens to seriously interfere with the continued growth of the town. It is true that during the last summer a number of houses have been built, but the demand is still very much greater than the supply. A manufacturer, who is at present employing a large number of men, but who finds his business growing at such a rate that he requires more, stated to the Examiner, very recently that he could procure the men, were it not for the fact that it is almost an impossibility to secure a house to rent at a medium rental. The rents asked here are no higher, probably, than in other places of this size for the same class of houses, and tenants do not object to the amount of the rent, but there is a deplorable lack of available houses, and, as has been stated, this condition threatens to prove a very serious menace to the future progress of the town.

The natural and economical advantages which Peterborough offers to manufacturers will without a doubt be the means of making it one of the greatest manufacturing cities in Ontario, and already there are indications that the cheap power and other advantages which the town has to offer are being appreciated by capitalists who propose locating manufacturing establishments here, and the question of dwelling houses then becomes one of the utmost importance.

An endeavour to ascertain the reason for this scarcity of houses discloses the fact that it is not because local capitalists have not faith in the future of the town, and are thus afraid to place their money in this form of investment, but, there is a feeling that the present high price of building materials makes the building of dwelling houses too expensive to render the investment a profitable one, especially in view of the fact that it is the general belief that the price of building materials has reached it highest point, and that a decline will be experienced before long. When this time comes, it is probable that building operations will be carried on on a large scale, and that the present condition will be very greatly relieved.

In the meantime, however, the situation is one that requires some action being taken, and it would appear to be within the scope of the duties of the Board of Trade. This body has shown an endeavour to advance the best interests of the town, and it is thought that in no better way can this be done than by grappling with and solving the question which constitutes the subject of this article.

THE LATEST NEWS OF LOCAL SPORT.

RUGBY.

With good weather the Rugby game to-morrow should be attended by a large crowd. The Wellesleys will be here with a strong aggregation and the game is sure to be a fast one. The visiting team has a wholesome respect for the prowess of the Peterborough Rugbyites and will be counting upon a warm contest. The local team has been practising steadily and will be in the pink of condition. They may be counted upon to give a good account of themselves in the first championship O.R.F.U. game of the season.

This will be a good opportunity to see the new Burnside rules in use, as both teams have become fully conversant with the changes which the adoption of the new rules have necessitated.

* * * *

The Rugby match to-morrow afternoon will begin at 2.30 o'clock sharp in order that the Wellesleys and the large delegation which is expected to accompany them, may be able to return to Toronto by the earliest train.

* * * *

The following players will please report at the Y.M.C.A. Thursday, at 1.45 p.m., sharp. The bus will leave for the grounds at that time, as the game with the Wellesleys will be called at 2.30 sharp. Percy Biggs of Toronto will referee the game:—Craig, Crough, Lush, Shortell, Thornton, Dillon, Noble, Meagher, Morgan Lee, Burnham, Cameron, Rickey, Hurtubise, Asselestine, Crowley and Graham.

* * * *

The Wellesleys say they will send a strong team to Peterborough to play the scheduled O.R.F.U. Intermediate championship game. Well, this can be said, they will need to send a strong team.

* * * *

The Toronto Star says that in a Varsity practice MacPherson distinguished himself by dropping a goal in the middle of a hot scrimmage, quite a distance out.

* * * *

Senior series at Hamilton—Pleasure Club v. Tigers.

Intermediate Series—Wellesleys at Peterborough.

Junior series — Brockville at Limestones; R. M. C. at Gananoque; Galt at Guelph, O.A.C.; Brantford at Dundas; Ingersoll at Sarnia; Parkhill at Stratford.

GOLF.

On Thanksgiving morning a handicap medal round will be played, which will be open to all members of the club. Entries for this will be received by the secretary up to 9.30 on Thursday morning. The same handicap as the Stratton Trophy will be used. All members are requested to be present. In the afternoon driving, approaching and putting contests will be held.

HOCKEY.

Emissaries from other places have again been visiting Montreal in an attempt to lure away some of our best hockey players.

They have not come from the United States either, but visited the city in the interest of certain Canadian clubs.

Picton and Belleville, among other places, are anxious to secure some Montreal players and have not the slightest hesitation in offering salaries straight out.

The liberality of their offers will hardly secure the coveted men, however. They offer as much as ten dollars per week.

It is understood that there is a great likelihood of Charlie Liffiton going to Pittsburg again this winter. Last spring he was the great favourite there, and it will not be for lack of inducement if he does not go.

Bright, the smart young Shamrock player, may leave the boys in green, and may either play with Montreal or Victoria. — Montreal Star.

LACROSSE.

The Junior C. L. A. Championship final will be played Friday at Seaforth, Elora and Wallaceburg are the contesting clubs. This note is merely put in as it is so long since the lacrosse season should have closed that most people may have forgotten all about it.—Telegram.

SPRINTING.

An anonymous correspondent from Montreal sends a communication to the Examiner, offering to place a $3000 bet on a foot race. The correspondent has not attached his name to the letter, consequently it cannot be published in these columns.

BAND AND SOLOISTS THE WHOLE SHOW.

Captured the Hearts of the Bowmanville People.

In its report of the Bowmanville Fair, the Canadian Statesman has the following, referring to the concert given by the 57th Band, assisted by Mr. H. Morphet and Mr. Jos. Halpany:—

We are proud of our former townsman Bandmaster Rupert Gliddon and we are proud of his splendid musical organization the famous 57th Regimental Band. They gave us most excellent service and made lots of money for the Agricultural Society. They are all jolly, good fellows. It is no wonder Peterborough citizens are so proud of their band.

Mr. Herbert Morphet, tenor soloist, was splendidly received and his singing was greatly appreciated. Our people know good singing and his hearty applause and frequent recalls was abundant manifestation of the quality of his singing. He is a fine singer and won the hearts of both audiences. He will find a cordial welcome awaiting him here.

Say, but isn't Jos. Halpany a whole host at entertaining? We daren't say "he beats the band," for that would be saying that the part is greater than the whole—a paradox. But he beats everything else when he inhales to the limit of his capacity and "holds forth." He possesses the happy and rare combination of an herculean physique fine stage appearance, a full clear and powerful voice and possesses the art of using all his powers with excellent effect. As a humorous singer and entertainer he takes first place. When a man gets three or four recalls from a Bowmanville audience as he did he may properly consider himself "It." You are always welcome here, Joseph.

ON THE BANKS OF THE SASKATOON.

A touching story is told of a beautiful girl living in the Canadian Northwest who was deserted by her lover. It was her custom to resort to the Saskatoon River on moonlight evenings, and at the former trysting place watch and wait for the return of the one she still loved. She also conceived the idea that a loon which haunted that portion of the river would yet let her know something about the absent one:

On the banks of the Saskatoon,
By the light of the silvery moon,
A maiden fair
With nut-brown hair
Is listening to the loon,
To the plaintive, mystic loon,
With its weird and winsome rune,
As it floats by the edge
Of the yellow sedge,
On the banks of the Saskatoon.

Ere clouds do hide the moon?"
"Oh, will he not come soon,
The maiden cries,
With tear-filled eyes
As she waits by the Saskatoon.
Then a sound comes from the loon
Like an ancient beldam's croon,
"He is gone for aye,
Far, far away
From the banks of the Saskatoon."

On the banks of the Saskatoon,
By the dull, half-hidden moon,
A far-off cry
So wild and shy
Comes up from the lonely loon,
From the distant, timid loon,
With its awesome, mournful rune,
For the maiden fair
With the nut-brown hair
Who sleeps in the Saskatoon.

"A Frontiersman."

Mr. Roger Jocosk's stories of the Canadian West in the 'eighties, related in "A Frontiersman," are of never-failing color and vivacity. Invalided from the N.W.M.P., he became a missionary to the Indians in an inaccessible corner of British Columbia. There was much to do, he says. The heathen lived healthily in their well ventilated barns of hewn cedar; but the righteous must needs have stuffy little houses, microbe traps to cultivate the phthisis which sent them up to heaven in a hurry. They sacrificed much to dress like missionaries, gave themselves airs and graces among the heathen, and were needlessly uplifted because successive white men had been sent from the outer spaces to learn their precious language. I flatly declined to learn that wonderful dialect, because they had need of English, and I had no occasion for Gaelkshian; wore gum boots or deerskin hunting-dress in church to show that religion did not consist of ugly garments, and discouraged the endless loquacity of their prayers as tending only to self-righteousness. It did them good to be shocked, because a mission has no need to be a ranch for raising prigs, and a Christian Indian ought not to be distinguished from his fellows for unctuous rascality, vanity and gloom.

Cost of London Smoke.

It takes seven million tons of air a day to carry away the London smoke, compared with one million tons of water to carry away the sewage. This poisoned atmosphere has already proved fatal to many of the fine old trees for which the neighborhood of London, was once famous, and the destruction of the Kew arboretum "is only a question of time." Moreover, a bad fog may cost $25,000 a day for lighting alone, and Mr. J. C. Hawkshaw, an authority on the subject, thinks that $25,000,000 a year is not an excessive estimate for the total expense of smoke pollution to London.

IN A "WIND-JAMMER."

Mr. Basil Lubbock Tells How It Feels to Be Knocked Round in Navigating Waters of Cape Horn.

Cape Horn has always been the terror of sailors. Mr. Basil Lubbock, who went round the horn in a "wind-jammer" and put his experiences into a book, tells how it feels to be knocked about in the cape seas. During the gale of which he writes the decks were full of water, some big seas were coming aboard, and the men had a difficult job clewing up the mizzen upper topsail, which had come in as soon as the topgallantsails were fast. Then came the terrible business of squaring in the yards, one of the most dangerous of all jobs when a heavy sea is running. Many a ship has lost a whole watch over the side while the men were at work on the braces. Continuing, Mr. Lubbock says:

"I was about fifth on the rope with old Wilson singing out on one side of me and Higgins on the other. We had hardly taken two pulls at the brace when a huge sea broke aboard right over our heads, and both watches were swept off their feet in every direction.

"Wilson, Higgins and I received the full force of it. For one tiny moment of time I saw the great hissing mass as it reared its foaming top higher and higher above us, and then crash! it toppled its whole weight upon us.

"Knocked down and overwhelmed by the monster, I hung to the brace with all my strength. Under water, with my heels above my head, I saw dimly the round bundles washing near me which I knew were Wilson and Higgins.

"Over and over the sea rolled me, and hurled me with terrible force against the main-hatch, and three times my poor right knee came against the ring-bolt.

"I hung to the brace until the water tore it from my grasp, and away I went, first my head up, then my feet, a plaything to the whim of the water.

"It washed me round the hatch, bumped me against the fife-rail, and rolled me into the scuppers. I got entangled and disentangled with other human bundles, and never for a second could I get my head above water.

"At last the water began to run off, and I found myself sitting up with my head out. I lay to the starboard of the main-hatch. Close to me in the scuppers lay three men in a tangled mass. Mixed up in the fife-rail were two more. Another lay gasping on his back under the break of the poop.

"Above the gale I heard the mate's voice, 'Main-brace, there! Up you get.'"

"I picked myself up, dazed and half-drowned. The captain, who was on the poop, seeing the whole of his ship's crew washing about the decks, dashed down to the deck up to his waist in water, went to the head of the brace, and cheering us on and hauling to his own singing out, soon got us going again.

"No one was lost. Such is Providence! We ought to have been killed; we ought to have been washed overboard; but at sea Providence has constantly to intervene, or no sailor would live long."

WAS INCURABLE BUT IS CURED.

Joseph Boone at Work Again After Seven Years' Illness.

Cottle's Cove, New Bay, Nfld., Oct. 12. — Special. — After being for seven years a hopeless invalid, unable to work, and racked by aches and pains, Joseph Boone, of this place is back to his old work as a fisherman. It sounds like a miracle, but it is not—it was Kidney Disease that was the matter with him. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him.

"It is something worth relating what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me," says Mr. Boone, and I am glad to tell it. I had doctored with several doctors and after seven months in the hospital was sent home as incurable.

"Richard Quirk, who had been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, advised me to try them and I had. I took 21 boxes before I was able to go to work. But I can hardly believe it is myself at all, after all these years of suffering."

Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure all forms of Kidney Disease from Backache to Bright's Disease. Thousands of cured ones will tell you so.

Familiar Quotations of Pope's.

Pope and Burns are respectively the authors of more familiar phrases than anybody else but Shakespeare in modern times. Here are a few of Pope's. "Shoot folly as she flies," "Hope springs eternal in the human breast," "Man never is but always to be blessed," "Whatever is, is right," "The proper study of mankind is man," "Grows with his growth and strengthens with his strength," "Order is heaven's first law," "Worth makes the man and want of it the fellow," "Honor and shame from no condition rise; act well your part—there all the honor lies;" "An honest man's the noblest work of God," "Thou wert my guide, philosopher and friend;" "Every woman is at heart a rake," "Woman's at best a contradiction still," "Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined," "Who shall decide when doctors disagree?" "A little learning is a dangerous thing," "To err is human, to forgive divine," "Beauty draws us with a single hair," "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread," "Damn with faint praise," "The many headed monster."

A "Safety House."

A Dutch doctor at Yokohama, Japan, has built himself a novel house with a view to guarding against microbes and earthquakes. The walls of this edifice are made of blocks of glass. They are built hollow the interstices being filled up with a solution of salts of soda, which is intended to regulate the temperature of the interior. The windows are hermetically closed, and air is only admitted after passing through filters.

STRICKEN JAMAICA.

PEOPLE OF THAT ISLAND ARE MENACED BY STARVATION.

A Hurricane Devastation—Island Industries Prostrate—Property Worth Millions Destroyed—Small Death List, But Thousands Have Been Incapacitated by Accidents—Port Antonio and Port Maria Wiped Out—At Kingston.

The destitution following in the train of the recent hurricane which swept over the northern portions of the island of Jamaica can hardly be described. At Port Antonio thousands of homeless and starving people sought shelter in the old prison and the few other buildings which survived the fury of the storm. The railroad station and waiting rooms were for days crowded with women and children, while those who could not be thus accommodated cowered in the lee of ruined walls and dismantled piazzas. The great majority of the sufferers are subsisting on green bananas, cooked in old tin cans over open fires made of the debris of wrecked buildings though the local merchants are doing all they can to relieve the distress.

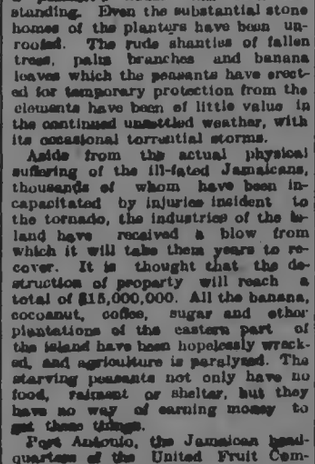
At other small seaports the situation is quite as desperate as at Port Antonio, and in the interior scarcely a peasant's house has been left standing. Even the substantial stone homes of the planters have been unroofed. The rude shanties of fallen trees, palm branches and banana leaves which the peasants have erected for temporary protection from the elements have been of little value in the continued unsettled weather, with its occasional torrential storms.

Aside from the actual physical suffering of the ill-fated Jamaicans, thousands of whom have been incapacitated by injuries incident to the tornado, the industries of the island have received a blow from which it will take them years to recover. It is thought that the destruction of property will reach a total of $15,000,000. All the banana, cocoanut, coffee, sugar and other plantations of the eastern part of the island have been hopelessly wrecked, and agriculture is paralyzed. The starving peasants not only have no food, raiment or shelter, but they have no way of earning money to get these things.

Port Antonio, the Jamaican headquarters of the United Fruit Company, had recently become a thriving port. Its wharfs were always busy, and it was nothing unusual for a half dozen of the company's steamers to be there at one time. The company's hotel at Port Antonio, the Hotel Titchfield, was one of the best in Jamaica. It was a large picturesque building, with all modern accessories, standing on an eminence overlooking the harbor. Last winter it was so crowded with tourists that word was sent to the company's offices that no more guests could be accommodated. The adjacent fruit plantations were more than prosperous. Now only ruins remain to show the traveler what Port Antonio has been. The hotel, wharfs, offices and plantations are all gone. Five of the big fruit steamers were driven ashore and partially wrecked. Six houses only were standing after the storm had passed.

Port Maria, a lively little seaport of 2,000 inhabitants, on the north coast thirty miles from Port Antonio, directly across the island from Kingston, was wiped out of existence. The city was the port of entry for the parish of St. Mary, and there were many sailing vessels in the harbor when the hurricane descended upon it. They were all wrecked.



VIEW OF PORT ANTONIO.

At Kingston, which escaped the worst of the disaster, thousands of houses were unroofed, stores were damaged, wharfs battered and several coasting schooners sunk. Rivers throughout the island burst their banks, adding to the destruction caused by the wind.

Only the edge of the tornado struck the island at first, and it was thought the worst was over when the storm suddenly veered to return and wreck vengeance on a population whose fears had been set at rest and most of whom were in bed. The great wonder is that the list of those killed outright was so small—about a hundred. Hairbreadth escapes without number have been reported. The light character of the dwellings of the poorer people seems to have been the only reason why they were not all slain.

Jamaica belongs to Great Britain and lies about ninety miles south of Cuba, 546 miles northeast of Colon and almost in a direct line from Colon to New York. The island is 144 miles long, with a greater width of forty-nine miles and a narrowest width of twenty-one and a half. It was across this narrowest strip, between Kingston and Annotto Bay, that the full force of the hurricane was felt. After crossing the island it spent its force at sea.

The abolition of slavery on the Island was proclaimed in 1834. The planters were paid about $30,000,000 for their slaves. With the freeing of the slaves the island degenerated industrially. The white element was so small that it was almost swallowed up by the negroes, but in time the education of the freed slaves bettered conditions, and when the slaves in the United States were liberated by President Lincoln without the payment of a cent to their owners the white Jamaicans decided that they had not been so badly treated after all and abandoned their attitude of sullen discontent.

Even now the white population of the island is infinitesimal compared with that of the blacks. Of a total estimated population of 770,000 but 20,000 are white.

THE KAWARTHA COUNTRY.

"Bright Waters and Happy Lands"—One of the Quiet, Enjoyable Beauty Spots of Semi-Northern Ontario.

Gardens of plenty in southern Ontario, mines and forests of wealth in western and northern Ontario, but beauty and scenic delight in the semi-north. When people in the towns and cities of the southern counties find their steady flow of prosperity making them prosaic they go north, where lakes, hills and valleys inspire such varying degrees of poetic fancy as they are capable of. The heart of Ontario is delightfully and wonderfully made, and its natural beauty is perhaps as valuable an asset to the Province as almost any of the more tangible industrial resources.

The beauty spots go in districts, of which Muskoka and the highlands are the most widely known. The western end of the St. Lawrence furnishes another district, whose importance is that of both a tourist's and a business highway. Between these two is a third district, the Kawartha Lakes, hardly less beautiful than either, and yearly approaching them in popular favor.

From Lake Huron to Lake Ontario, by a cross-country cut, is two hundred miles, and some ninety miles of this distance is the chain of the eleven Kawarth Lakes. The chain forms the main portion of the Trent Valley waterway, which has figured for some years in Federal political discussion. About twenty miles of the total two hundred will, when the route is completed, be canals, and the fact that the highest portion of this route is six hundred feet above the level of Lake Ontario involves the necessity of a series of locks, which add to the interest of a trip, while they make transportation possible. Most of these locks have drops of from three to twenty feet, but the hydraulic lock at Peterboro' will overcome a drop of sixty-six feet, the largest lock of its kind in the world. Whether, using the natural waterway of the Kawartha Lakes and the rivers at either end, the Trent Valley route will ever prove a factor in the transportation of western produce from Georgian Bay to the St. Lawrence time will tell, but the Kawartha Lakes section of the route, already canalized, at least furnishes a most delightful water trip of ninety miles, over which a large amount of local freighting is done.

Across this country, in 1615, Champlain led his party against the Iroquois of New York. It is a region itself memorial of the red-men. Many of the place names are distinctly Indian, and a charm that is not wholly sentimental hangs about the country for that, if for no other reason. There is no one Kawarth Lake, as there is a Muskoka Lake, but "Kawartha" means "Bright Waters and Happy Lands," truly applicable to the whole series. It is just such country as, long ago, would have been an Indian's choice. Even now some of it, as seen from the water, is wilderness, but back of the woods are farms and well-to-do settlements. A large lumber business is carried on along the lakes, the output of pine and cedar forests going by raft and scow to and from myriad saw-mills on nearly all the lakes. Lindsay, on the Scugog River, is an important manufacturing and shipping centre, the Hull of the Kawartha district. Cedar figures largely in the lumber output of the lakes, and grows luxuriantly everywhere. A mill-owner on Lake Chemong is prudently cutting his cedar and other wood, and reserving his pine limits for the time when the market value of pine will be still higher; and meanwhile there is abundance of cedar and hemlock.

But lumbering and farming are the only industrial pursuits of any importance; they are at least the only ones in evidence to the passer-through, whose interest lies more in scenery than in industry. There are just enough evidences of industrial prosperity to give a habitable flavor to the natural scenery, and the country is quiet without being dead. In token of the increasing activity, there is a new railway project to connect Bobcaygeon with the main C.P.R. line, construction of which commenced some weeks ago.

The things to be seen, then, buoyant waters, fairy land-shadows and heaven's clearest air, are the attractions of Kawartha. It is a summer-land. In winter there is only the coach along the mainland road, and the villagers are, most of them, dependent upon their own resources for social life; but in the summer the migratory campers-out come in hundreds, and from Coboconk to Lakefield there are tents and cottages on lake shore and diminutive islands, sheltering people who come from everywhere.

How Trouble Began.

Two young mothers met for the first time on the street after their young hopefuls had begun to get their teeth, and straightway there was a volume of baby talk.

"Did your little one cut his teeth far apart?" asked the woman in white.

"I should say not," indignantly answered the woman in blue. "They came in very evenly and close together. You can look for yourself if you don't believe me."

It took a great deal more talk to square matters, and then they separated, after saying goodby only once apiece.

LADY COLEBROOKE.

Where She Got the Crest That Was "So Full of Significance."

Here's a good story told about Lady Colebrooke, that prominent Englishwoman who visited this country last winter. Lady Colebrooke is of the well known Paget family. Lord Colebrooke's ancestors are equally aristocratic, and the Colebrooke crest is a rampant lion, three doves over the head and a wolf couchant above all. It is an elaborate affair. When Lady Colebrooke was dining out with one of the opulent hostesses of Long Island she glanced casually at the dinner service, every bit of which was duly embossed with a crest. She was accustomed to heraldic china and did not at once inspect the design minutely. Later in the evening, to her great surprise, she became aware that the Colebrooke crest was upon all of her hostesses' dinner service. "Where did you get this crest?" she exclaimed impulsively. The hostess replied unconcernedly: "Isn't it a pretty one? I picked it out when we furnished this house. It was the prettiest I could find, and those dear little doves, I think, are so full of significance." Lady Colebrooke murmured sadly, "So full of significance."

The Abbreviation of Zoological.

The tendency among English people to clip long words into short ones or even into monosyllables is notorious. Thus "cabriolet" has become cab, "omnibus" bus and so on. But the change of "zoological" into zoo, is, to any one who knows the origin of the word, the most exasperating of all, and yet we now meet with zoo in well written journals.

There is another variation, which comes simply from bad pronunciation, as when a cockney holiday maker tells you he has been to the "slogical." If "zoological" is to undergo a shortening like that which has befallen "omnibus" and "cabriolet" let it at least become zo. This would be correct as far as it went and would not be so excruciating as the detestable zoo. — Notes and Queries.

Two Kinds of Dancers.

The Rev. Reginald Campbell of the London City temple during his visit to America said a number of amusing things. One of them concerned dancing. A young girl asked Dr. Campbell if he did not consider dancing graceful.

"Professional dancing," he replied, "is, I admit, graceful enough in some cases. But what is there of grace in the dancing of amateurs? A man and a woman, close together, spin solemnly about a room. The man's long black coat tails flap. Such persons always look to me as if they had been hired to dance and were doubtful if they would get paid."

Gen. O'Neill's Revolver.

A curious relic of the Fenian raid found its way into a West King street pawnshop this week, says The Toronto World. It is a revolver inscribed "General O'Neil, Ridgeway," and is supposed to have been the property of the guerilla chieftain who led the Fenian raiders into Canada on that occasion. It is richly chased, heavily mounted in silver and bears the manufacturer's date of 1864. It was made in the States and evidently was a valuable weapon for that period. There are three of the queerest of old copper shells, which are inserted in the front of the cylinder and are exploded from the rear by a plunger.

A Rochester man exchanged the weapon for a modern revolver. He said that a relation had been given the revolver by a Toronto man who had secured it at the time. Some of the Fenian captives were tried and condemned to death here, but their sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. It was taken from one of these prisoners. The weapon is of thirty-two calibre and does not look very dangerous as an engine of war.

Is There Poison In Your Blood?

Then the Liver and Kidneys Have Failed to Perform Their Mission and You Need

DR. CHASE'S Kidney-Liver Pills.

If you are not well there must be a reason for it. Most of the common ills of life arise from poison in the system. If you would be well you must remove the cause of disease.

The work of the blood is two-fold. It supplies nourishment to the body and collects the impure and poisonous waste matter. This poisonous material is removed from the blood by the action of the liver and kidneys. When these organs fail the poison is carried back through the system in the circulation of the blood and causes disease.

Where is your weak spot? Just there you may expect to feel the effects of poison in the system. It may be stomach trouble or lung trouble, kidney disease or heart disease, but the beginning is with the inaction of the great filtering organ—the liver and kidneys.

Nine-tenths of the ills of every-day life may be cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, because they set the liver, kidneys, and bowels right, and so cleanse and invigorate the system.

Have you come to realize the importance of keeping the bowels regular and the liver and kidneys active? You will appreciate Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, not only on account of their wonderful promptness but also for their lasting effect on the system. They get at the very foundation of ill-health and by removing the cause, bring thorough cure.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, the comfort of old age, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box. 11

PEGGY OF THE PINES

By TEMPLE BAILEY

Copyright, 1903, by R. G. McClure

"John Carter!"

The name seems to come out of her dream. Peggy opens her eyes, a little dazed.

Of course there are other John Carters. Carter is a rather commonplace name after all. So is John.

"Sleepyhead!" is Catherine's scornful welcome.

Peggy smiles and trails languidly over to a low chair by the fire. She sits down and shakes a veil of soft, red brown hair over her flushed cheeks.

Edith passes her the box of chocolates and the conversation goes on.

"If the corner of the conservatory could speak I think it would whisper 'Catherine,'" says Edith.

But Peggy, looking through her veil of hair, sees that she likes it—likes to be teased about Jack; Peggy's Jack—well, not exactly hers—yet, but he has proposed to her every year since she was in pinafores, and if she hasn't said "Yes"—

"John Carter," she reads.

Oh, little Peggy, little Peggy, it is well that your face is hidden by the silken veil, for the blushes are gone.

Edith's lips are set in a rather tense line.

"What does he say?"

"Red as a rose is she."

"Rather hackneyed for a clever man," comments Edith.

"There is another box for Miss Edith," says the maid, "and one for Miss Louise."

"Not a single valentine for you, baby," says Louise to Peggy. "But the men haven't found you out yet."

She opens her box, gives one glance at the card and leans over to see Edith's.

Then the two girls laugh.

"John Carter!"

Across Catherine's smooth forehead there flickers just the shadow of a frown, but she rallies.

"How impartial. What does he say on yours, girls?"

Louise has orchids, Edith violets. Each card contains a maudlin valentine sentiment, but Peggy listens to the conventional lines with prejudiced ears. There is only one consolation—Jack isn't a Mormon! He can't marry all three of them.

But over Catherine's face there broods something of dissatisfaction, and Edith gathers up her violets and slips out of the room without a word. After awhile the other girls follow, and Peggy is left alone.

She goes and stands by the window, where, through the gray mist, she can see the blurred lights of the big city. Oh, how homesick she is! She wants to see Mammy Chloe and Aunt Sophia, and most of all she wants to hear the wind sighing through the pines.

She goes over to her trunk and from its very bottom she drags out a big box, and as the darkness comes on she muses sadly over the bits of lace paper and faded ribbons.

The girls find her thus when they come in later.

"Valentines?" says Louise. "Old ones?" She picks up a tiny lace paper affair with two red hearts and a Cupid.

Roses red and violets blue,
Sugar is sweet and so are you.

"That came when I was seven," says Peggy.

"Are they all from one man? Oh, Peggy, Peggy, I believe you have a romance."

"They are all from Jack," says Peggy without malice, and then she stands blushing, for what will they think of Mr. John Carter now?

But the name suggests nothing to the three girls.

"Some one you know in Virginia?" asks Catherine.

And Peggy knows that, after all, she has told nothing, and she resolves to hold her own.

"He has sent me one each year since I was five. We grew up together."

"Why, what a little romance," says Edith indulgently, with amused and uplifted eyebrows behind Peggy's back. "Of course he loves you."

"Of course," says Peggy with an assurance she is far from feeling.

"And you love him."

"I haven't told him so," says Peggy, and the girls look at her open eyed. They are not used to small Virginia princesses who have to be wooed long.

"A box for Miss Margaret," announces the maid.

"Margaret? Oh," says Catherine, puzzled. "Oh, Peggy, she means you."

"Yes," says Peggy and reaches out her hand.

"Do you wish a light, miss?" asks the maid.

But Peggy does not hear her, for there steals into the room a faint, wonderful fragrance, the fragrance of the pines of Virginia.

Louise steps forward and lifts the cover. Under the waxed paper in the long box are silky tassels of shining green, wet still with the moisture of the woods.

There is an envelope, half hidden under the mass of green. Peggy's hand shuts over it; she has seen the writing. No prying eyes shall read John Carter's message to—"his fourth girl," as she calls herself bitterly.

"Read it, Peggy," cries Louise.

"Go and dress!" she commands. "We shall never get ready."

"The country lover," comments Catherine, as the girls go to their rooms.

But when the girls are gone Peggy does not move for a little while. She stands very still, with a pale little face. Then suddenly she buries her face in the scented green. At last, with trembling fingers, she tears open the envelope. But no single line of wornout sentiment confronts her. Within is a sheet of closely written paper:

My Dear Peggy—I am in paradise, with the Eve left out. I am in the woods, but the spirit of the pines is away, and the old, old trees sigh and sigh and whisper with me, broken heartedly, "Where is our Peggy?"

When Mammy Chloe told me that you had joined Louise Dalton's house party the light went out of the sun. I want you here, and I had traveled all these miles that I might come to you on St. Valentine's day and ask you again—for the thirteenth time, dear—if you wouldn't.

Mammy Chloe says that you are homesick. So, dear heart, I send you a bit of home. To the other girls I have sent flowers and verses that mean nothing, but to my Peggy I send her own pine.

I shall get back to New York with this and send it up to you to let you know that I shall dine at the Daltons' tonight. I found a note from Louise and will telephone her. Come down early, and I will meet you at the foot of the stairway. And, Peggy, oh, Peggy, if you mean to say "Yes" this time wear a bit of the pine, and I will know that my Peggy is my own—at last. JACK.

An hour later a wonderful little figure in a pale green trailing gown, with a rope of pearls around the young neck and a silken bit of pine among the laces at her breast, comes out of the door and glides down the hall. As she reaches Louise's room she sees through the open door that the rest of the girls are there, but she passes by unheeding.

Down the long corridor to the stairway. The girls follow her, and look over the railing as she turns the curve below them.

"She is really beautiful," says Catherine, as the light falls on the upturned radiant face.

"Poor Virginia lover," laughs Edith; "if Peggy looks like that all the evening, he will have rivals."

Just then a man comes across the broad hall and advances to meet Peggy.

He is tall, strong and handsome.

"John Carter," breathes Catherine, and starts to descend.

But Edith holds her back.

"Look," she says.

They meet half way up the stairway—little Peggy and John Carter. He takes her hand in his. Then there is a breathless moment and the watchers slip away discreetly.

"Jack!" they say, with a light breaking in upon them.

And then they know—beautiful Catherine, and stately Edith, and gracious Louise—that it is little Peggy, after all—little Peggy of the Pines.

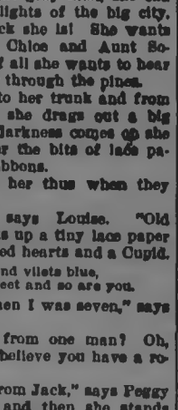
Mother's Girl.

There exists often a very beautiful companionship between the mother and her daughter. The intimacy is frank, free and sympathetic. But some day the mother feels as if something had chilled this intimacy. The child is silent and sad, and seems to shun her mother instead of seeking her.



This change very often occurs when the young girl is crossing the border line of womanhood. She is morbid, nervous, fearful, as she enters upon this new experience.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription at such a time will do more than restore the normal balance of mind and body. It will establish the womanly function upon a basis of sound health, as well as improve the appetite, nourish the nerves, and promote the general physical health.

"Two years ago my daughter's health began to fail," writes Mrs. Dan Hall, of Brodhead, Green Co., Wis. "Everything that could be thought of was done to help her but it was of no use. When she began to complain she was quite stout; weighed 170—the picture of good health, until about the age of fourteen; then in six months she was so run down her weight was but 120. I felt I could not give her up as she was the only child I had, and I must say, Doctor, that only for your 'Favorite Prescription' my daughter would have been in her grave today. When she had taken one-half bottle the natural function was established and we bought another one, making only two bottles in all, and she completely recovered. Since then she is as well as can be."

Hats and Heads.

A hatter had just finished selling a hat to an Irishman.

"The Irish," he said, "have heads of a graceful shape—long and oval and very large. The American has a head shaped very much like the Irishman's, only it is smaller and slightly rounder.

"The German has a square head, flat on top and very wide between the ears. A German's hat always looks too big for him. It looks so because it is so. In order that it may encompass the head's great breadth it must be bought a little too loose in its other dimensions. Some Germans who are particular have their hats made to order on this account.

"I sell hats all over the United States, and I find that heads run bigger in the west than anywhere else. The Chicago man has the biggest head in America. The southerner has the smallest. We easterners—Philadelphians, New Yorkers and Bostonians—all have heads about the same size. That size is, on the average, 7. The westerner's size is 7¼; the southerner's is 6¾."—Philadelphia Record.

The Next Gown.

From one extreme to another is characteristic of womankind. After a series of pads all round—pads that always seem to me to invite a thorough good and well-deserved spanking—next spring we are to be treated, according to the fashion-mongers, to "skin-tight gowns, that will have no hips." This decree is seemingly promulgated at this season in order that every woman may have ample time to remove her hips. Of course, this means only those cleverly designed, but not always deceptive panniers, which at times creakingly betray their presence and make every latitudinal protuberance to be regarded with suspicion. They will now go to join the bustle in the attic. But no one can imagine that the fair sisterhood mean to wear "skin-tight gowns" over a natural framework that has not often been moulded on the best lines of art. The dressmaker will now be put to the pains of designing a figure as well as a costume, and as a natural consequence, a dress may be two inches thick in one place, where it is only that of a sheet of paper in another. Clothes are no longer a matter of design and color combination. The "occupant" of the coming dress will have to look as if she has been poured into it. It will be with much compassion that the masculine world will look on this new development in the fashions of their sisters. It means that woman, poor woman, is to be more uncomfortable and costly than ever.—Captious One, in Toronto Sunday World.

Bagnoli and His Age.

On one occasion Bianchi, the noted teacher, went on the stage to see Brignoli, the famous singer, whom he found pacing up and down like a madman, humming over his part.

"Why, Brig, what is the matter with you? Are you nervous?" he asked.

"Yes, I am nervous," was the reply as he walked harder and faster than ever.

"But, Brig, you ought not to be nervous. I've heard you sing the part 200 times. I heard you sing it thirty years ago."

"Thirty years ago! Who are you that should know so much?"

"Who am I? You know who I am, and I know who you are."

"Very well; you know what I am, but I am sure you do not know what you are, and if you wish I will tell you. You are a fool!"

Baron Howth's Rat.

The story of the luck of the Howths is well known, and down to very recent times no member of that family would permit a rat to be put to death. It was said that about the year 1750 the twenty-sixth Baron Howth was giving a banquet to his friends when a rat rushed into the hall, followed by several dogs, and, jumping on the table, sat up before Lord Howth as if appealing for protection. He saved its life, and from that moment it never quitted him. At last he set out on a foreign tour, accompanied by his brother, who persuaded him to leave the rat behind.

Sitting in a hotel at Marseilles, the door suddenly flew open, and the rat, dripping wet, came crawling in and went straight to the fire to dry itself. Lord Howth's brother, enraged at the intrusion, seized the poker and dashed out the rat's brains. "You have murdered me!" exclaimed Lord Howth and instantly fell down and expired.—London Tit-Bits.

"Cock o' the Woods."

Another Attempt Being Made to Introduce the Capercailzie.

An effort is being made to stock Ontario forests with capercailzies, the famous game bird of northern Europe. Under the direction of Mr. Thomas Gibson, Director of Provincial Parks, 30 birds have been imported from Norway and were recently released in Algonquin Park. The greatest care was taken with the shipment, and the birds were in good shape when released.

They cost $8 each in Sweden, and the cost of transportation was no small amount. A special commissioner was sent to New York to meet them, and take them to their new home.

The capercailzie is a large, glossy, black grouse, and as it thrives in all the pine forests of Northern Europe, it is thought that it should get along in Ontario. It became extinct in Scotland and Ireland during the eighteenth century, and has been reintroduced to the Highlands by methods similar to those now adopted by the Ontario Government. The bird is familiarly known as "Cock o' the Woods."

An effort was formerly made by Mr. Gibson and three were imported. They were placed in Rondeau Park on Lake Erie and the weather turned very warm. To make them more comfortable their keeper moved them to a shady, cool place, and next morning found their throats had been cut by a weasel.

It is hoped this trial will have better luck. Mr. Gibson, who is still in Northern Ontario, saw them released, and says that most of them rose straight up and went off to the wilderness. Others were more affected by the two weeks' confinement, but after hobbling around for a few minutes they, too, took to the woods.

Lord Dundonald's Forbears.

Lord Dundonald, who commands the Canadian militia, is the proud possessor of a grandfather, who, though long dead, may yet prove the salvation of the British Empire in time of need. Somewhere at Whitehall there exists a secret of which the nation would probably want to hear more were Britain ever threatened with invasion. It is the "secret war plan" of Admiral Cochrane, tenth Earl of Dundonald, grandfather of the gallant soldier who bears the title to-day. It was declared to be an invention capable of destroying any fleet or fortress in the world. When first he made his announcement, it was referred to a secret committee consisting of the Duke of York, Lord Keith, Lord Exmouth, and the two Congreaves, who pronounced it "infallible, irresistible, but inhuman." It was on the latter ground alone that the scheme was not adopted. When the inventor entered the service of Chili, the Prince Regent extracted from him a solemn pledge that he would never betray his knowledge to any other power. He kept his promise, and though the plans were reconsidered, and their adoption advocated when the Crimean War broke out, the matter was allowed to lie in abeyance.

Forth Dollars for a Hotel.

A medical man in Nova Scotia is in a fair way to make a good thing out of a recent hotel investment. He bought a vacant hotel building and shipped it to Sydney, where he is now having it erected. This building cost $3,000. The doctor bought it for $40 and is making improvements and enlarging it to such an extent that it will be worth, when complete in Sydney, about $6,000.

The Fluctuations of the Leading Stocks —Market Letters.

The raid that was made on Canadian securities towards the close of yesterday's market was continued shortly after the opening this morning and Twin City and C.P.R. were especially singled out for bear attacks. The former stock broke to 79, while the latter came rolling down in jumps of half a point at a time and at 2 p. m. had touched 115 5-8. Sloss reached a new low level touching 72. The street is at a loss to understand the present violent slump and many stop loss orders are being caught.

Messrs. E. M. Poussett & Co., stock brokers, report as follows:

Mr. Charles, of C. Head & Co., brokers, New York, is in town and in conversation yesterday spoke pessimistically of the New York market. Something mysterious, he said, was hanging over the situation and until it was cleared out of the way it was unwise to expect any permanent advance in prices.

New York, N. Y., The calling of some of the loans of the pools by banks, as a result of the decline in iron and kindred industrials and when extra margins were sought some members failed to respond. This seems to have caused the beginning of the recent decline which was, no doubt, considerably intensified by short selling.

Town Topics,—The rally which began just before the close yesterday afternoon will be carried somewhat further to-day by traders' operations and the stronger tone of the London market will influence higher prices in our market at opening. An effort will be made to advance the railroad list regardless of movement of industrials, but we do not look for any improvement than a point or two and on such rallies we still consider the market a sale, notwithstanding assertions of what will be paid. The A.C.P. dividend will remain uncertain until the directors act to-morrow The belief that something unfavourable remains to be disclosed in the industrial parts of the market will check any bullishness on railroads and on any rally PA, US, UP, SP, BO, LN, and RI are a sale. No dividend on RG second preferred is expected to be declared to-day.

M. & M. say—Wheat, after a period of weakness, in the early part of the session yesterday changed and prices slowly hardened until an advance of 1 cent was scored when the market closed. Sentiment this morning seems more friendly to the long side. Corn,—

CUTICURA OINTMENT

The Most Wonderful Curative of All Time

For Torturing, Disfiguring Skin Humours

And Purest and Sweetest of Toilet Emollients.

Cuticura Ointment is beyond question the most successful curative for torturing, disfiguring humours of the skin and scalp, including loss of hair, ever compounded, in proof of which a single anointing preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed in the severer cases, by a dose of Cuticura Resolvent, is often sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of itching, burning and scaly humours, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure when all other remedies fail. It is especially so in the treatment of infants and children, cleansing, soothing and healing the most distressing of infantile humours, and preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, scald and hair.

Cuticura Ointment possesses, at the same time, the charm of satisfying the simple wants of the toilet, in caring for the skin, scalp, hair, hands and feet, from infancy to age, far more effectually, agreeably and economically than the most expensive of toilet emollients. Its "Instant relief for skin-tortured babies," or "Sanative, antiseptic cleansing," or "One-night treatment of the hands or feet," or "Single treatment of the hair," or "Use after athletics," cycling, golf, tennis, riding, sparring, or any sport, each in connection with the use of Cuticura Soap, is sufficient evidence of this.

Cuticura Resolvent, Liquid and in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chemical Corp., Sole Proprietors.

Send for "The Cuticura Skin Book."

A number of traders who have been bearish for some time seem to have covered their short lines on general idea that from now until the close of navigation demand for corn will be sufficient to hold the price, or at least to prevent much further decline.

Messrs. McMillan & Maguire have received the following:

New York, Oct. 14th, 1.15 p. m.—Market opened generally firmer helped by the strength shown in railroad list Tuesday and improvement in London. Demand for stocks generally and especially for industrials in load crowd was important factor. Sharp recovery in Canadian Pacific was immediate consequence of strength in London and support from there and Montreal. The street took very little notice of laying off men by railroads. Demand for stocks such as Car. and Fdy. Pressed Steel Car., Republic Steel and Smelters in loan crowd did something to support them. Steel issues opened firm and acted well. Still some scattering liquidation for middle west but rather good authorities think general liquidation for Pittsburg especially is about over. Boston was buyer of A.C.P.—F. C. Co.

Liverpool 1-4 higher, corn 1-8 higher at close.

Chicago—Wheat looks as if it would sell a little lower. Could sell it on bulges.

Banks gained $1,038 from sub-treasury since Friday.

Weakness in Twin City was due to selling of little stock by holders nervous about decline in Dominion Coal. Same interests were at one time active in both these stocks. A.C.P. showed some uncertainty. It is thought that there are some stop orders a little lower down.

Sub-treasury transferred for banks $150,000 to New Orleans.

Boston—Dominion Iron and Steel, 7 bid, 8 asked; Dominion Coal, 60 bid, 61 asked.

Kidney Diseases in October.

Catarrh of the kidneys in October is very common indeed. It is a pity that this fact is not better known to the physicians as well as the people.

People have kidney disease. They take some diuretic, hoping to get better. They never once think of catarrh. Kidney disease and catarrh are seldom associated in the minds of the physicians. Too few physicians recognize catarrh of the kidneys. They doctor for something else. They try this remedy and that remedy. The trouble may be catarrh all the time. A few bottles of Peruna would cure them.

Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O., for free literature on catarrh.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley, "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for the same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grip; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

The annual Union Thanksgiving service of the Presbyterian and Methodist congregations will be held in the Presbyterian church on Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 15th, at 11 o'clock, a.m. The Rev. Mr. C. Parker, pastor of the Methodist church will preach the Thanksgiving sermon.

The Rector and Wardens of the Church of England feel deeply gratified at the success of their annual Harvest Thanksgiving service, which was held last Friday evening. The congregation had decided to do away with their annual dinner and substitute this free will offering instead. Rev. J. McKee McLennan issued a pastoral letter to his congregation and their response to his appeal was beyond the expectations of all. The offering at present amounting to $91.00, and there are other sums promised. It is confidently expected that it will probably exceed $100.00. Rev. E. A. Langfelt, Rector of St. Luke's, Ashburnham, preached an eloquent sermon in keeping with the festival. The people enjoyed greatly his earnest address.

Rev. Mark Guy Pearce will deliver a lecture on "The Old Folks at Home" in the Methodist Church, Friday, Oct. 30th.

Mr. L. J. R. Richardson, manager of the Union Bank here was on a business trip to Bancroft last week. While there he and a friend went about half a mile out of the town to view the rock mountains. On returning they saw a white bird, and hearing it chirp, Mr. Richardson said it was a robin, but his friend thought not, and on closer inspection found it was. A bird of this species is very rare.

COURTED BY MAIL.

A Romance in Which a Girl From Napanee Figures.

Lockport, N. Y., Oct. 10.—The possibilities of the mail service are enormous nowadays. Almost any manner of business can be transacted through its medium. One can become a full-fledged physician or lawyer through it; he can purchase anything from a paper of pins to a street roller; in fact, anything can be accomplished through the use of it, even to getting a wife. John T. Kruger, of Wabash, Neb., accomplished the latter. He is a benedict to-day, though he had never seen the lady who is now addressed as Mrs. Kruger until three days ago, nor did she see him.

The courtship was most romantic. A first cousin of the bride, who was Miss Mamie Grant, of Napanee, Lennox County, Ontario, is the one at whose door Mr. and Mrs. Kruger will lay the blame if their married life is not all that is blissful.

He met Mr. Kruger in Wabash while in that town on business a year ago. A friendship sprang up between the two, and one day, believing that his new-found friend would enjoy corresponding with a young lady, jokingly gave him her address, not thinking that Kruger would write her.

A correspondence was begun between the two. It gradually changed from the commonplace nature of plain friendliness and the letters assumed a tenderer character.

Photos. were exchanged between the two, and both being favourably impressed with the countenance of the other, they pledged their troth.

In the meantime Miss Grant took up her abode with her uncle in this city, Thomas Grant of 369 Pine street. The engagement was not broken by her change of residence, however, the only inconvenience arising from her change of residence being the difference of a day or so between letters, which had by this time become food and drink for each.

They first met in the flesh at the home of Mr. Grant, on Sunday. Both were satisfied with their gamble in love, and they were married last night by Rev. G. W. Gallagher of the First Congregational Church.

FOWL SUPPER

AT KILLARNEY, IRELAND.

Viscountess Castlerosse's Pleasant Surprise in the Killarney Furniture Industry.

On crossing the threshold of either the "Killarney Furniture Industry," or the Castlerosse School, as it is called, the feeling is one of exhilarating surprise and pleasure. Here are neither pigs, nor Paddies, nor bog-oak horrors. The first-named institution—once the Killarney School of Arts and Crafts—has been put up on a thoroughly business footing, and furnished with the best models in craftsmanship from England, France and Italy. A great deal of the work executed was disposed of at the London sale of the Home Arts and Industries' Association, some little time ago, and since then the manager has in hand orders to the amount of $250, which implies admirable management, as the industry was started only about five years ago with a little class of boys taking carving lessons at Killarney House. Now it has developed into a thriving business, including ecclesiastical work, school furniture, electric fittings, and every branch of wood carving and gilding. The airily inclined visitor will hanker after the stained green card-boxes, gilt with appropriate wording, "The Bridge of Sighs," the literary will appropriate book-cases and slides, with the motto, "un livre est un ami qui ne trompe jamais," while the artistic will hardly know which most to admire, the whitewood bedstead, which bears the diploma of the Glasgow Exhibition, the colored bas-relief of poppies blowing before the wind, the true lovers' knots for electric light fittings in Kauri pine, or the dark wood carvings copied from Roman churches. Further on one passes through a modest doorway into a little school of industry quite unique in Ireland, and which would have delighted the soul of Ruskin. The latticed casements open on green pace, the white walls have a tulip frieze, and over the mantel are the lines:

There are three things, fair maiden,
With which I'd see you laden;
Your book wherein to pray,
Your purse wherewith to pay,
Your needle and your thimble,
To keep your fingers nimble.

In the various departments the girls learn sewing and various housewifely arts, such as cooking, so neglected as to be almost unheard of in the cottages, and laundry work, which is highly successful. From 25 to 30 girls can be received as boarders for a nominal sum a week. These are the industries which, owing to circumstances too long to chronicle and too melancholy to recall, were disappointed of receiving a substantial grant. It is difficult for people, although of the highest ideals and entire singleness of heart, to continue to support with undiminished faith and enthusiasm, even a beautiful and philanthropic institution at heavy personal loss. The tourist season being now in good swing, it is hoped all those who are intelligent enough to know that to leave Ireland without seeing Killarney is to remain ignorant of her supreme beauty, will not drive past these sources of interest unheeding, but will, by orders to the furniture industry and donations to Lady Castlerosse's school, second this rare and most gallant effort of a patrician Irishwoman to help her country people to help themselves. One of the very greatest pleasures when at Killarney is to stroll along the road where Lady Castlerosse's workers have their interesting emporium, and watch them through the open doorway, laboring industriously and singing cheerily over their work.

Death Roll of the Plague.

Over a million and a half people in India have died of plague since the disease first made its appearance in Bombay in 1895. In 1896 there were 1,700 deaths. The Mortality increased to 56,000 in 1897, to 118,000 in 1898, and to 135,000 in 1899. The following year there was a big drop the number of deaths going down to 93,000, but the hope that the end was in sight was quickly dashed to the ground, the year 1901 seeing no less than 274,000 deaths, while the total rose in 1902 to the terrific figure of 577,000. Since then matters have grown even worse, the first three months of the current year adding roughly another 300,000 to the list of those who have perished from the disease.

ALASKAN CASE TIP.

Morning Advertiser Reports Decision is Against Canada.

WILL CAUSE CONSTERNATION

From an Authoritative Source the London Paper Has Learned That the American Contention Will Be Upheld—All Who Have Followed Arguments Are Satisfied With Hon. Clifford Sifton's Work.

London, Oct. 16.—The Morning Advertiser announces that it regrets to learn from a source which it regards as beyond question that the decision of the Alaskan Boundary Tribunal virtually concedes the American case.

The Morning Advertiser, which appears to be thoroughly satisfied with the reliability of its statement, says the news will be received in Canada with consternation.

It gives a map and detailed explanation showing how the decision will affect Canada, and adds that those who followed the arguments have been thoroughly satisfied with Hon. Clifford Sifton's preparation and presentation of the case.

CANADA AND BRITAIN.

Hon. Clifford Sifton's Address at the Pilgrim Banquet.

London, Oct. 16.—The pilgrims banquet to the Alaska Boundary Commissioners last night was an historic occasion. Among the army of Canadians present were Lord Strathcona, Sir Louis Jette, Christopher Robinson, K.C., Hon. Clifford Sifton, Messrs. Duff, Griffiths, A. B. Aylesworth, K.C., Wade, John Howard, and the Hon. Mr. Turner.

Lord Alverstone humorously said he would disclose the secrets of the Alaska boundary sitting. Sir Louis Jette would go down to history as the champion interrupter, as he interrupted the proceedings ten times more than the others and even than Mr. Aylesworth. They were the most charming colleagues he had ever had to do with.

Hon. Mr. Sifton was much applauded and returned thanks for the courtesies shown to the Canadian Commissioners, to himself and to the Canadians connected with the case. He regarded the tribunal as a unique attempt to settle the differences between the three great English-speaking nations. It marked an epoch in international proceedings, Canada was proud to be the integral part of the Empire yet. But the existence of Canada was not the slightest cause for friction between England and the United States, and to cause trouble between them be considered would be a crime unparalleled in the annals of history. In the nature of things there would be friction from time to time, but he hoped it would be settled in a judicial way on principles of fairness and forbearance, and with a desire on the part of public men of both sides to do full justice to each other.

Mr. Aylesworth was warmly cheered. He said he was a pilgrim, a Canadian, an American and, best of all, a Britisher. He had heard the adjective, "American" used on all sides during the evening and wondered what position Canada held. The flag of Britain flew over the larger, and, as Canadians thought, the better part of the American continent. In the Dominion were hundreds of thousands of most loyal British subjects represented this evening by Sir Louis Jette and represented in the Dominion by the first statesman in the land, Sir Wilfrid Laurier. There breathed no such universal affection for and loyalty toward the British Empire as exists in Canada, but Canadians wanted the friendship, too, of their neighbors to the south. "We don't like their form of Government, but we hope the day will come when they will annex themselves to us and when the flag of united Canada will float from the North Pole to Mexico. The Americans dread a Caesar, but under a royal Caesar such as we have they would never know more beneficent sway."

Elihu Root said that the delightful association existing between Canada and England was due to the stern war for independence.

Canadians Active Resisters.

London, Oct. 16.—(C. A. P.)President Horton, of the Congregational Union, in welcoming the Empire Congregationalists, said: "The real bond between the home country and the colonies is not Imperialism, but the spirit of brotherhood between the churches. If they wanted to find the puritanism of the seventeenth century they must go to Canada. It is a most ludicrous thing to see the upper classes pat the colonies on the back. The Rev. Mr. Silcox of Winnipeg praised the work of the Nonconformists in connection with the Education Act. Canadians were not passive resisters, but active. (Cheers.) supposing any one dared introduce such a measure there."

"Old Quebec."

London, Oct. 16.—The Chronicle, reviewing Sir Gilbert Parker's "Old Quebec," published to-day, says: "After proving his story-telling abilities faithfully round the noble rock that guards our Empire in the west, he has grouped all that is best of the chivalry of Old France side by side with the valor and skill and statesmanship of Britain."

Completing the Cabinet.

London, Oct. 16.—The Earl of Hardwicke has been appointed Under Secretary of State for India and the Earl of Donoughmore has received the appointment of Under Secretary of State for War.

FATAL MINING ACCIDENT.

A Blow of Gas in Morrissey Coal Mine No 1.

Winnipeg, Oct. 16.—A blow of gas occurred in No. 1 mine at Morrissey coal mines Wednesday night, resulting in the death of four miners by asphyxiation. Their names are Alfred Harbieau, Tony Marcorn, John Rogers and a Slavonian. Only twenty men were in the mine at the time, and as rushes of gas have occurred before, they took warning by the crackling roar of the oncoming gas, and sixteen escaped.

A cave-in occurred at Coal Creek mine, near Fernie, Wednesday night. An Englishman named Fred J. Scott was covered by the coal and smothered. Deceased was one of a large party of miners who came from Durham, England, to work in the Crow's Nest mines.

CHAMBERLAIN CRITICISED.

Daily News Calls Chamberlain an Upsetter of Balance of Empire.

London, Oct. 16.—(C. A. P.)—The Daily News says: "For years Chamberlain has been occupied in upsetting the balance of the Empire. The colonies have been flattered and £45,000,000 of debt added to England to satisfy one set of colonies. In the passion of race ascendancy the colonies have been encouraged to believe that their arms alone saved the British Empire. Now the country which sacrificed £25,000,000 for South Africa is asked to levy a tax on maize and bread on behalf of Canada and New Zealand."

The Daily Mail says: "That Chamberlain's scheme is still in a plastic state is evidenced by his letter regarding an export commission of business men. There is little doubt that he will invite colonial representatives to be included on the Committee of Experts."

ITALY AND FRANCE.

King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena in Paris.

Paris, Oct. 16.—King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena of Italy, accompanied by President and Madame Loubet and suite, spent yesterday at Versailles. The city and palace were decorated and a large military force was on duty. Crowds at Versailles acclaimed their Majesties, who in the afternoon returned to Paris.

SHOT HIS SON DEAD.

Sad Hunting Accident on the St. Lawrence River.

OCCURRED NEAR BROCKVILLE

Mr. Sanford Darling of Lyn Was Loading His Gun to Shoot Ducks When the Weapon Was Discharged and the Boy Killed—Three Other Fatal Hunting Accidents in Canada.

Brockville, Oct. 16.—A sad shooting fatality occurred on the St. Lawrence River, a few miles west of here, Wednesday afternoon. Sanford Darling of McIntosh's mill and his 13-year-old son were duck hunting on the river in a skiff. The father shot at some ducks, which dived. After the shot he asked his son, who was in the bow of the skiff to watch for them to rise while he reloaded. Before he had finished loading the son exclaimed that the ducks were in sight again. In the excitement of the moment the gun was in some unaccountable manner discharged in the father's hands, the full charge passing through the boy's side, almost disemboweling him. The lad uttered an exclamation and immediately fell back dead into his father's arms. The man is heartbroken.

Shot Comrade Dead.

Bowmanville, Oct. 16.—Thanksgiving Day brought grief to the home of Bartholomew Dilling of this town. His son, Frank, a piano action maker in the Dominion Organ factory, was out shooting in company with Harry Pennington and George Richards. The latter's gun was accidentally discharged, the contents piercing the heart of young Dilling and he dropped dead just as he was in the act of taking aim at a flock of crows. The accident took place in Weldon's woods, in the 5th concession of Darlington, three-fourths of a mile from F. Hockaday's, the nearest house. Mr. Hockaday came to town with Richards to break the sad news to the family, while Pennington watched by the dead body. Dilling was in his 23rd year and was popular with his companions. Young Richards is nearly distracted over the terrible ending of a day of anticipated pleasure.

Killed by Lightning.

Coldwater, Oct. 16.—A sad drowning accident occurred in the river here about 6 o'clock last evening. Walter Rainbird was out duck shooting, and when returning home a storm came on. He is supposed to have been struck by lightning and fallen out of his canoe. His companion was a short distance behind him in another canoe, and felt the shock of the lightning. A distance ahead of him he found the canoe upset. Word was sent to Coldwater and a party went in search. They soon found the body, near where the canoe was found.

Lad Shoots Lad.

Winnipeg, Oct. 16.—A boy named Walter Williams was accidentally shot at Killarney yesterday by a boy companion named Martin, while the boys were hunting for muskrats.

A GAME OF CLUPP.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman on the Tory Policy of Protection.

London, Oct. 16.—Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, addressing a meeting at Bolton last night, said that Mr. Chamberlain's case was completely vitiated by his figures. The issue before the country was protection. Mr. Balfour had ousted the free traders from his Cabinet, but fearing to go before the country on protection had adopted retaliation as a makeshift issue which appealed to the self-instincts of individuals and the fighting instinct of the nation.

A policy of retaliation, continued the Liberal leader, could only mean the ultimate landing of the country in protection. Nothing could be more short-sighted than to sacrifice the known benefits of the most favored nation treatment for the problematic benefits of retaliatory tariffs.

Retaliation had never broken down and never would break down any tariff walls. It was pleaded that retaliation would be kept in reserve. In brief, Great Britain was to play a game of bluff with the world. Mr. Chamberlain had tried to bluff the late President Kruger and the game had cost Great Britain thousands of valuable lives and £225,000,000 in money.

The Government, concluded Sir Henry, ought to have had enough of the game of bluff. The Liberals would oppose protection, root and branch. He believed that economy in finance and reform of the educational and land systems would do more for the prosperity of the country.

FATHER DENOUNCED BY SON.

Killed Mother and Wife—Prisoner Is Said to Be Insane.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—Frank Pavlik created a dramatic scene in Judge Clifford's Court yesterday, pointing an accusing finger at his father and declaring that the latter was guilty not only of wife murder, but also of parricide.

"The murder of my mother is not the first one committed by my father," said the accuser.

"In Bohemia, where I was born, he killed his own mother. He became enraged at my grandmother and struck her a vicious blow. For three weeks she suffered and finally died. My father was never punished for that crime."

Attorneys for the defendant told the jury they would make no denials of the charge that the defendant killed his wife, but would seek to prove him insane.

INDIAN BOER ALLEGIANCE.

Dewet, Botha and Delarey to Proceed on a Mission of Persuasion.

Pretoria, Oct. 16.—While Mr. Chamberlain was still at the Colonial Office he endeavored, through Sir Arthur Lawley, to meet the views of the ex-Boer generals who are anxious to induce the remaining Boer prisoners of war remaining in India to take the oath of allegiance, and so be able to return to South Africa. These negotiations have now borne fruit. It has been arranged that Generals Christian Dewet, Louis Both and Delarey shall proceed to India on a mission of persuasion, visiting those camps where Boer prisoners are still in residence. Sir Arthur Lawley has consented to grant an interview to the ex-general's previous to their departure, and for this purpose General Delarey went from the Western Transvaal to Pretoria last evening.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS.

The following exhibits attracted more than usual attention, and were among the special features of the Fair worthy of particular mention:

THE CLOKEY BINDER.

Messrs. Geo. H. and E. C. Howson, the general agents for the County of Peterborough for the Farmers' Co-operative Harvesting Machine Company, Limited, were present on the grounds exhibiting one of the new Clokey Binders, which has been receiving so much attention from the farmers in this county during the past summer. Great interest was manifested in this binder—crowds of farmers listening to and watching the exhibition as the Messrs. Howson explained the principal workings and new features of the machine. Various tests were made on the ground, and many pleasant expressions came from the farmers as they witnessed the performance of the machine in some of its finest parts. The binder is strongly constructed, giving evidence of durability and strength. It is claimed to be lighter in draught than other binders; is well balanced and is so simple in construction that one can understand its operation very quickly.

The Farmers' Co-operative Company is under the management of capable men. Arrangements are in progress to immediately begin the manufacture of the Clokey Binder, and other machines, for next harvest. The company is conducted along co-operative lines, which is its strongest feature, as it is proposed to give farmers who are shareholders an advantage over those who are not, by allowing them a special discount on each purchase; and where they unite in buying six machines or more at any time, a still further discount will be conceded.

The Messrs. Howson, who are intelligent and reliable agents, are meeting with gratifying success in selling shares—a large number of subscribers having already been secured at the Peterborough and Norwood Fairs, in addition to their general canvass throughout the country. Any farmer can become a shareholder by investing from ten to two hundred dollars. All information can be obtained on application to Messrs. G. H Howson or E. C. Howson, Peterborough.

THE NEW TORONTO FANNING MILL.

Mr. Chas. McDonald, the industrious general agent, for the new Toronto Fanning Mill, was, as usual, on the ground, proclaiming the virtues of his pet mill. Farmers who manage their business in a practical way, know how necessary it is to clean their grain and pass properly in order to market them profitably. And to have clean grain, the seed must be clean. The testimony of hundreds of farmers in this and adjoining counties goes to prove that the "New Toronto" is the best mill they have ever had in their granary for cleaning grain. Mr. McDonald has sold many of these mills, in fact he has little trouble in selling the "New Toronto," anywhere he goes, for he says "it sells itself." The "New Toronto" is well represented by Mr. McDonald, and he delights in explaining its superior merits to the farmers in all the Fairs in the Midland District. His address is Ashburnham, near Downer's Corners.

THOROUGH-BRED CATTLE AND SHEEP.

Messrs. Frank Birdsall & Son, of Birdsall's, Otonabee, the extensive breeders of thorough-bred shorthorn and Jersey cattle, and Oxford Sheep, made a fine show at this Fair, and carried off some good prizes. Their exhibit consisted of ten head of Durham cattle, two of Jerseys, and twelve sheep. These all bore prominent marks of careful breeding and feeding. In the Durham class they were awarded 1st prize for best herd, 1st for yearling cow, 1st for bull calf, 1st for heifer and championship, 1st and 2nd for two-year-olds, and 2nd for aged cow.

In the Jersey class they won 1st prize for best female of any age. They were also very successful in sheep, taking four first prizes and four second prizes for their Oxford Downs.

FINE DISPLAY OF HAND-MADE HARNESS.

There was a very fine display of hand-made harness by Mr. Thomas Howard of the village of Hastings. This exhibit was well represented inside the north entrance to the main building, and was rewarded with a great deal of attention from interested horsemen. There was shown a splendid set of farm harness, with silver trimmings, a set of carriage harness, and a set of single harness, with nickel trimmings, and a nobby set of track harness, rubber-trimmed, for which Mr. Howard received three first prizes. It should be mentioned that no extra effort was made to prepare anything special for competition, the exhibit being taken from his regular stock and was a fair sample of what may be found at his shop any day of the week. Howard's quality and style evidently begin with a halter strap and end with a four-in-hand. Those replenishing their stables should get in on the ground floor and see Howard's hand-made harness before buying. He serves horsemen so thoroughly that he makes a friend of everyone who comes to buy. Mr. F. G. Reynolds, a practical harness man, had charge of the exhibit, and had many interested inquirers asking about prices and styles during the day.

PRIZE AYRSHIRES.

Specially deserving of honourable mention was the exhibit of thoroughbred Ayrshire cattle shown by Messrs. William Stewart & Son, the successful cattle breeders, whose stock farm is at Menie, seven miles east of Campbellford. Most of these fine animals were shown at the Toronto, London, Peterborough and other large exhibitions, where they usually brought away first prizes and won high eomiums from the judges for their careful breeding. At the Norwood Fair Mr. Stewart was awarded fifteen prizes—twelve of which were firsts, and three seconds. They also took the sweepstake prizes for best male, female and herd. Messrs. Stewart & Son have become very successful in their business of stock-raising, having pushed ahead from small beginnings to be large and prosperous stock dealers. Farmers in this district, who desire to introduce some first-class Ayrshire stock, should communicate with the Messrs. Stewart & Son, at Menie, Ont.

GRAFTON'S HIGH-GRADE CLOTHING.

Everyone was aware, before reaching the show grounds, that Messrs. Grafton & Co., clothiers, of Peterborough, were in town. Their representatives had arrived early, and placarded almost every available locality, with the handsomely designed signs and fancy posters, descriptive of their high grade clothing. Their adversing was done in a generous manner, and the quantity of "paper" which they used must have convinced the visitors to this Fair that Grafton & Co. have an abiding faith in printers and painters. Mr. Herb Conway, who so well represented the firm, pitched his tent in a commanding position at the Fair grounds, and displayed an exhibit of stylish ready-to-wear men's and boys' clothing which was very much admired. The effective dressing and arrangement of the clothing was very creditable to the artistic taste of the decorator. It was a revelation in style, of this firm's new fall and winter overcoats, suits, ulsters, reefers, etc., for men, youths and boys. The firm offered three good prizes for the best team of general purpose horses, the horses, wagons and harness to be considered in awarding the prizes. These prizes were—1st, a $10 tweed suit; 2nd, a $5 pair of trousers; 3rd, a $3 pair of trousers.

RICH WALL PAPER DISPLAY.

What was by all odds the handsomest and most artistic display on the Fair grounds was the beautiful exhibition of elegant wall papers made by Messrs. A. H. Stratton & Co., of the Peterborough Bookstore. This exhibit was made in a large cottage-roof tent, with a wide open front, which afforded good scope for the effective display of the various rich patterns of papers. These fine effects in wall, border and ceiling decorations represented the high-class goods handled by the Peterborough Bookstore, where all the smartest and most fashionable novelties are on sale soon after their origination. One fact which is worth referring to in the interests of the out-of-town buyer is that Messrs. Stratton & Co. sell more of their handsome wall papers ,window blinds and cornice poles through mail orders season after season. They have an excellent sample order system, by which those at a distance can arrange to be supplied with any pattern and the exact quantities required for each room in their house.

As a practicable display this exhibit furnished suggestions of the effective combinations possible by the judicious and harmonous blending of the designs. There were also hung round the exhibit a number of water colour subjects in appropriate gilt frames, gems of art which enhanced the beauty of the display. The crowds of admiring visitors were regaled with catchy airs from a gramaphone, while hundreds of pretty fans and fancy advertising cards were passed out to the spectators. This meritorious display was in charge of Mr. Welsey Honders, whose decorating taste was conspicuous. It was one of the best examples of treating an outside Fair exhibit—for it told it's story, and told it well.

GOUGH BROS.

The enterprising firm of Gough Bros., of Peterborough, who pride themselves in being able to clothe man and boy from head to foot without leaving their store, made a strong exhibit of their clothing in a large square tent, near the judges' stand. Tables covered with pretty chenille covers were arranged with effective displays of clothing of all kinds for the old and the young. The farmers of East Peterborough never saw Gough's enterprise to better advantage on these Fair grounds. The display was another exemplification of the advanced styles in the ready-made clothing trade. Whatever expense and trouble the firm must have been put to — and it must have been considerable — they have the proud satisfaction of knowing that it well repaid them. The exhibit included an interesting display of medium and high-class ready-to-wear suits, overcoats, and ulsters for fall and winter wear, marked in plain and convincing figures. Men's, youths' and boys' garments were shown in satisfactory variety. Light fall overcoats, heavy winter ulsters, men's round and square cut coats, youths' and boys' suits and reefers, in all the various new styles of the season. There were also seen Raglan and rain coats, overcoats, swell long overcoats which are still enjoying so much popular favour; also the "Raglanette," and standard short box coat, in all the most up-to-date styles of fabrics. The display was effectively decorated with attractively designed price tickets, and appropriately lettered show cards. The whole effect was well worked out. To Mr. W. T. Merrell belongs the credit of designing and decorating the exhibit. It was a model showing of men's, youths' and boys' ready-to-wear garments on an extensive scale.

THE "LINK-BLADE" CREAM SEPARATOR.

One of the most interesting exhibits to the farmer and dairyman, and which attracted a great many to witness its operations, was the "Simplex" Link-Blade Cream Separator, shown by Mr. W. Gillespie, of the firm of White and Gillespie, the Peterborough agents. This "Link-blade" machine has been on exhibition at nearly all the agricultural fairs this year, and has been received with confidence by many practical judges. The reason why it is claimed that the link-blades give an increased capacity, seems plain, when one considers their action on the milk in the bowl. The process in other machines is now pretty well sized up. In the link-blade machine the milk pursues a straight course from the bottom of the bowl, where it is delivered by the feed tube to the top, where it is thrown out as separated cream and milk. Each space between adjacent blades acts as an entirely independent separating chamber; all these chambers are fed uniformly at the bottom, and as the milk passes up it is gradually separated into cream and skim milk, the heavier skim milk particles following the concave sides of the blades in their upward and outward direction, and the cream particles following the convex side in their progress upward and inward to the cream outlet. Any mixing or interference with currents is avoided, and the result is increased separating capacity as well as a more thorough separation, amounting, as has been stated, to from thirty to fifty per cent over the best of other devices. Some other important improvements have been incorporated in the "Simplex" for both hand power and factory machines, such as the improved manner of discharging the skim milk from the bowl, without the use of tubes, etc. The agents, Messrs. White & Gillespie, No. 336 George street, Peterborough, are always glad to explain the full workings of this most successful machine.

THE LIGHT-RUNNING SINGER.

At the entrance to the main building, Mr. T. W. Day of Campbellford, showed one of the handy extension-leaf Singer Sewing Machines. He reports having made several good sales during the day. These machines, which have proved such a "mother's help," in so many Canadian homes, continue to be as popular as ever. The wonder is where all the Singer machines that are made go to. The enormous sales continue year after year, but when Mr. Day tells of the number of his sales, and that his record is repeated by so many energetic agents scattered all over the country, the explanation is not difficult. Mr. W. D. Little, the general agent at Peterborough, was present and assisted Mr. Day in explaining the many superior advantages of the Singer.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

The Aylesworth Interview—The Special Cable Service—Alaska Boundary Expense Item Passed.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—The alleged expressions of A. B. Aylesworth, K.C., in regard to the Alaska boundary award, were again brought under review in the House Wednesday. The subject was introduced during the discussion of the item of $140,000 for expenses of the commission. Mr. Borden asked as to the payment of counsel's expenses, the Prime Minister's reply being that each Government was paying its own counsel.

Mr. Fowler of King's, N.B., expressed surprise that Mr. Aylesworth had not seen fit to make a public denial of the statement attributed to him in the Canadian press cable despatches.

Mr. Lemieux submitted that Mr. Aylesworth's duty was to ignore such reports altogether.

Mr. Gourley made an attack upon the special Canadian cable service and Sir Wilfrid Laurier excused Mr. Aylesworth on the ground that interview were often made out of the whole cloth. He had been a victim himself.

Mr. Borden, while thoroughly appreciating the Prime Minister's remarks about public men not being called upon to deny everything incorrectly published about them, observed that this was, however, a matter of international relations and one in which the rule might properly be departed from. There was no desire to criticise either Lord Alverstone or Mr. Aylesworth. It was because these cablegrams came from an apparently reputable source.

The item of $140,000 for the expenses of the Alaska Boundary Commission was then adopted.

Customs and Subsidies.

Hon. William Paterson, in reply to Mr. David Henderson, said that the dutiable goods entered for consumption in Canada for the year ending June 30 last, amounted in value to $136,796,065. The value of free imports was $90,944,451. The duty collected was $37,110,854. Goods to the value of $37,614,505 came in under the preferential tariff, and the duty collected amounted to $7,069,692.

Mr. Fielding gave a statement of the railway subsidies granted and paid for the last 10 years. The total of the grants on the basis of $8,200 per mile was $27,640,695, and the amount paid was $15,203,500.

Hon. Mr. Paterson told Mr. Clarke that the customs revenue for the year ending June 30, 1896, was $20,219,037, and for the year ending June 30, 1903, $37,109,675.

The Prime Minister refused to give Mr. Clarke the names of officials recommended for Imperial service medals. It would, he said, be neither advisable nor constitutional.

The act respecting the pilotage district of Montreal was given a third reading, and the House took up the final reading of the Civil Service Bill.

Sir William Mulock announced a surplus in the Postoffice Department of nearly $300,000 for the year, amid Liberal cheers. The House adjourned.

TORONTO IN ENEMY'S HANDS.

Thanksgiving Attacking Force Succeeded in Taking the City.

Toronto, Oct. 16.—The military display in Toronto yesterday lacked spectacular effect. Glasses and strategy play too much weight in a modern battle for that. The attacking force succeeded in taking the city. The best part of the military program for the spectator was the review and march past of the troops at Riverdale Park.

Capital and Labor.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

TOOK A STRAW VOTE.

Interesting Experiment in a Restaurant.

An advertising agent, representing a prominent New York magazine, while on a recent western trip, was dining one evening in a Pittsburg restaurant.

While waiting for his order he glanced over his newspaper and noticed the advertisement of a well known dyspepsia preparation, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; as he himself was a regular user of the tablets, he began speculating as to how many of the other traveling men in the dining room were also friends of the popular remedy for indigestion.

He says: I counted twenty-three men at the tables and in the hotel office I took the trouble to interview them and was surprised to learn that nine of the twenty-three made a practice of taking one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal.

One of them told me he had suffered so much from stomach trouble that at one time he had been obliged to quit the road, but since using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets had been entirely free from indigestion, but he continued their use, especially while travelling, on account of irregularity in meals and because like all travelling men he was often obliged to eat what he could get and not always what he wanted.

Another, who looked the picture of health, said he never ate a meal without taking a Stuart Tablet afterward because he could eat what he pleased and when he pleased without fear of a sleepless night or any other trouble.

Still another used them because he was subject to gas on stomach, causing pressure on heart and lungs, shortness of breath and distress in chest, which he no longer experienced since using the tablets regularly.

Another claimed that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was the only safe remedy he had ever found for sour stomach and acidity. He had formerly used common soda to relieve the tablets were much better and safer to use.

After smoking, drinking or other excesses which weaken the digestive organs, nothing restores the stomach to a healthy, wholesome condition so effectually as Stuart's Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the natural digestives, pepsin, diastase, which every weak stomach lacks, as well as nux, hydrastin and yellow parilla, and can be safely relied on as a radical cure for every form of poor digestion. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Held Up a Street Car.

Toronto, Oct. 16.—William Rand and James Ross attempted to hold up street car No. 632 yesterday morning. They flourished a revolver and wounded Conductor Howard, and a nearby resident, firing a revolver, frightened them off. They were chased by constables and captured. They were behind the bars in twenty minutes after they made the attack.

Ross and Rand will be up in the police court this morning and will have other charges placed against them. The conductor's pouch, which they threw away, was found intact.

Though arising from a variety of causes, headache is almost invariably associated with stomach troubles, irritability, sleeplessness, feelings of fatigue and languor, depressed spirits and other symptoms of nervous exhaustion.

Nervous Headache

The person who has become subject to repeated attacks of nervous, sick headache may well have dark forebodings of the future lest the outcome may be nervous prostration, paralysis or insanity.

Such relief as may be obtained from the use of powders, tablets or wafers, which almost immediately stop pain, is only temporary, and the shock to the nervous system is not only harmful but positively dangerous.

As in all diseases of the nervous system, the real cause is a deficiency in the quality or quantity of the blood, and cure can come only when the richness and life-sustaining powers are restored to the blood by such a preparation as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure cures headache, just as it does other symptoms of an exhausted condition of the nervous system, by actually forming new, rich, red blood and creating new nervous force.

Though this upbuilding process is of necessity slow and natural, the results are certain and lasting.

Headaches, as well as all other aches and pains, disappear, and through the medium of the nervous system every organ in the body is quickened to new and regular action. The appetite is sharpened, digestion improves and all the weaknesses and irregularities of the vital organs which usually accompany nervous exhaustion are overcome.

MRS. LOBB.

By noting your increase in weight while using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you can prove beyond dispute that new, firm flesh and tissue is being added to the body.

Mrs. A. Lobb, 204 Rectory St., London, Ont., states:—"I was troubled to a great extent with sick headache, and in fact I was so bad that I became very nervous and unable to rest or sleep. I had not used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food long before I noticed that my sleep was better and the headaches less severe. I can say now that I am as well as I ever was, and give all the credit to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Mrs. Corkey, 272 Wellington St., Kingston, Ont., states:—"I suffered a great deal with nervous headache. At times I took weak, dizzy spells and my nervous system seemed quite undermined and exhausted. Some time ago I heard of the good results accomplished by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and began to use it. Since I have been taking this medicine a great change has come over me, the headaches have disappeared, my nerves have been strengthened, and I do not have any more of the dizzy spells. I have nothing but Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to thank for this cure."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Is sold by all dealers at the advertised price, 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, or mailed postpaid on receipt of price by Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

☛ To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author, are on every box of his remedies.

ST. ANDREW'S ANNUAL LADIES' AID DINNER

Held Last Night and was a Very Successful Event.

The St. Andrew's Ladies' Aid Thanksgiving Dinner held last night in the school hall was a greater success even than had been anticipated, the attendance being well over four hundred. Dinner was served from 5.30 to 7.30, and of such a nature to do credit to the ladies of St. Andrew's, under whose auspices the dinner was held. The tables were very tastily decorated and those who had charge of them were very attentive to the wants of the guests, who were well pleased with the dinner served.

At the conclusion of this portion of the evening's entertainment, a very enjoyable programme was given. The chair was taken by Mr. T. C. Elliott, and the numbers comprising the programme were chiefly of a musical nature. The chairman gave a short address congratulating the ladies on the success of the evening's entertainment, and, on their behalf welcomed those present. An instrumental duet by Mrs. Peter Kerr and Miss Tully was followed by a vocal duet rendered by Mr. and Mrs Johnston. A very pleasing vocal solo was given by Miss Ruth Dawson. Mr. Frowde also sang a solo, which was thoroughly enjoyed. A second vocal duet by Mr. and Mrs. Johnston closed the evening's entertainment, which as regards financial success and entertaining features surpassed that of all previous occasions. Mrs. Morrow and Mrs. P. Kerr acted as accompanists.

The Ladies' Aid wish to acknowledge the kindness of Miss Dawson and Mr. Frowde, and of Mrs. Morrow for her services as accompanist, and, also desire to thank the ladies of the congregation for their assistance.

OCTOBER WEDDING.

Miss Goldie Becomes Bride of Mr. Jas. Wolstenholm.

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, at the residence of Mr. Thos. Goldie, when his daughter, Miss Eva Lilley Goldie, was married to Mr. Jas. A. Wolstenholm, of town, in the presence of about forty guests, friends of the two families. The house was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves for the occasion, the effect being unique and pleasing. Miss Grace Goldie, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid, and Mr. Frank McCoy assisted the groom. The bride was tastily attired in white organdie, with the usual orange orange blossoms. The bridesmaid also was very prettily attired. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson, and afterwards the whole party sat down to a daintily served dejeuner, bride and groom leaving on the 9.10 G.T.R. train for a visit to the south and west, after which they will reside in town. The bride was the recipient of a large number valuable presents attenating to her popularity, and the esteem in which she is held.

ACCIDENTAL DISCHARGE OF A LOADED REVOLVER.

Results in Injuring of Mr. H. R. Jilkes, of Bolivar Street.

An accidental shooting occurred last evening, from the effects of which Mr. H. R. Jilkes, who resides at 25 Bolivar street, will be laid up for some little time. Mr. Jilkes with a young companion, was in the former's room and examining a revolver, when the charge was exploded, the bullet entering Mr. Jilkes' forehead. The young men were unaware that the weapon was loaded, which is the cause of the accident. Dr. Greer was called, and after some difficulty succeeded in extracting the bullet, and the injured man is now confined to his bed at his boarding house. He is doing as well as can be expected, and unless blood poisoning sets in, no very serious results are anticipated.

WHO IS FRANK A. WELCH?

Anybody who Knows Anything of Him Notify Chief of Police.

Yesterday Mayor Roger received the following despatch, dated Akron, Ohio, October 15th:—

Notwithstanding the energetic efforts of Chief Rossel, no link has up to the time of going to press, been discovered to prove the man's identity or connect him with any local family. However, the deceased is, in all probability, a Frank A. Walsh, whose parents live in Oakville, Ont., who is at present in Akron, the difference in name probably being the fault of the transmitter or receiver of the telegram. Walsh was for years a machine operator employed in the Review office. When in town he boarded at 238 Water street.

PETERBOROUGH LODGE A. F. & A. M. AT HOME.

Very Pleasing Event Held on Wednesday Evening.

An exceedingly pleasant evening was spent by the Masonic fraternity and ladies of Peterborough at the temple on Wednesday evening last. The function was under the auspices of Peterborough Lodge and invitations were extended to the sister Lodge and visiting brethren in town. About 350 were present. The Committee in charge were fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Geo. B. Williams, of New York, whose reputation as an entertainer is far reaching.

W. Bro. John Crane, Worshipful Master, performed the duties of chairman, and at the outset made a few remarks and gave welcome to all present. The programme was in every sense a high-class one. Mr. Williams in a programme of an hour and 45 minutes showed his ability as an entertainer of a very high order. His numbers consisted of scenes from Henry IV, two poems by Whitcombe Riley and his own setting of Howells' "The Sleeping Car," and from the more prentious Shaksperean numbers down to his own humorous efforts, his audience experienced a treat never equalled in Peterborough in this line. The musical part of the programme consisted of two excellenty rendered male quartette by Messrs. Legg, Browne, Armitage and Sheppord, and a solo by Mr. W. Stocker. After the programme refreshments were served by Bro. Hooper in the dining hall and a very pleasant evening was brought to a close. As was noted by the chairman in his opening remarks it is not often that the Masonic fraternity undertake evenings of a purely social nature, but the general opinion was expressed that such an occasion as that of Wednesday evening and the quality of entertainment furnished would be gladly welcomed by all who were premitted to attend. The Committee were forced on account of the limitations of their hall to confine the invitations to members of the fraternity and their ladies.

Peterborough Lodge is to be congratulated on the success of the evening.

THE SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. THOS. HUMPHRIES

Occurred at Norwood on Wednesday Morning.

A sudden death occurred at Norwood on Wednesday about noon, Mr. Thomas C. Humphries, of Asphodel, whose late home is about three miles from Hastings was driving into Norwood to attend the Fair, accompanied by his son and daughter. When just as the village was reached he complained of feeling unwell, and in a few minutes dropped from the seat on which he was sitting, and died almost immediately. He was taken to Dr. Pettigrew's office, where every effort was made to revive him, but without avail. The cause of Mr. Humphries' death is given as heart failure. He had, as far as could be learned, been in good health, and his death was wholly unexpected, as he had, until his death, been actively engaged with the superintendence of the affairs of his large farm.

The deceased was about 70 years of age, and leaves one son and one daughter, Mrs. Humphries having died some years ago. He was one of the most prosperous and well known farmers in the county, and his death will remove a prominent figure from the public life of the community in which he lived.

THE CONCERT WAS A GREAT SUCCESS.

Charlotte Street Ladies get $150 From Thankoffering and Concert.

It adds much to the credit of the ladies of the Charlotte street church who got up a concert last night, that the proceeds of the thankoffering and concert amounted to the sum of $150.00.

The concert was held in the church, and was presided over by Mr. J. L. Hughes, the following programme be carried out:

Choir
Clarionet solo... ....Mr. Halley
Solo, "Happy Daya"...Miss Belleghem with violin obligato by Miss R. M. Jolliffe.
Solo, "Old Brigade"... .Mr. Stocker
Solo..... ... .Miss Rush
Orchestra..... ....

Solo, "Queen of the Earth" .....Miss White
Cornet solo..... ....Mr. Rogers
Solo..... ....Mr. J. Miller

In previous years it has been the custom of the ladies to give a tea; however, on the suggestion of some, it was decided that a concert be held this year, and this proved to be a great success, the amount taken in including the thankoffering being far in excess of any previous tea.

St. John's Girls' Guild will hold "Ye Olde Time" Social on Oct, 22nd in the school room. The members of both Young Men's and Girl's Guilds will be dressed in old time costumes. A good programme will follow the refreshments. Admission 15c.

INTERESTING CEREMONY AT LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY.

Woodmen of the World Unveil Two Monuments.

Remembrance of Departed Sovereigns —Sov. McConnell's Oration.

There was a large number of persons present at the unveiling of the monuments, erected by the Canadian Woodmen of the World to the late Sovereigns Frank A. Walden, and Robert Stewart, which took place yesterday afternoon at the Little Lake Cemetery and at which about thirty members of the order were present besides Sov. D. Cinnamon, H. A. L., Lindsay; Sov. D. Watson, C. C. of Lindsay Camp; Sov. H. Muir, Clerk of Belleville Court.

Sov. Cinnamon acted in the capacity of Councilor Commander, Sov. Watson, Lieut.-Commander, while Sovs. Haskill Fanning acted as Clerk and Banker.

The first monument unveiled was that to Sov. Frank Walden, which bore the following inscription:

In Memoriam
FRANK A. WALDEN
Died March 31st, 1903.
"Faithful unto Death."
Erected by the Canadian Woodmen of the World.

The ceremony began with a hymn, "Nearer My God, to Thee," which was followed by a prayer by Rev. Mr. Bastow.

The Councillor Commander, Sov. D. Cinnamon, next approached the stone and, tapping it three times, said:

"Love, Honour, Remembrance By the token of salt and emblem preservative, I dedicate this monument to the memory of Sov. Frank A. Walden as a tribute to his worth. Erected by the Canadian Order of the Woodmen of the World. He speaks though he be silent."

The Advisory Lieutenant, approaching the stone, dipping his axe in oil and tapping the stone three times, said:

"Thou anointed, we anoint thy monument. Our promises we fulfil. I dedicate this monument to Frank A. Walden, as a tribute to his faithfulness to his vows. Erected by the Canadian Order of the Woodmen of the World. He speaks though he be silent." The same thing was done by the Banker and the Clerk, after which the monument, to the late Sov. Robert Stewart was similarly dedicated, on this occasion, however, Rev. J. P. Wilson praying.

After this stone, which bore the following inscription:

In Memoriam
ROBERT STEWART
Died October 2nd, 1903
Aged 43 years

Had been dedicated, Sov. McConnell gave the oration, which was as follows:

"Friends, Fellow Citizens and Sovereigns,—We desire to thank you for coming out this afternoon to assemble with us in this silent city of the dead to pay our last instalment on the covenant which those two sovereigns made with our order only a short time ago. We have not come to-day to make any outward demonstration or parade of our order, purely to be seen or heard, but solely and with bowed heads do we enter this last resting place of those who have departed. They live though they be dead. They have served their purpose here below and have gone to their reward. As we are assembled here around their tombs we are reminded that all must die. The uncertainty of life can be more fully exemplified by a look around the silent city. As we walk around its monuments and read its epitaphs we are also reminded that the cold messenger, Death, has no respect for persons. From the ranks of the young as well as of the aged are chosen to populate this sacred resting place of all that is mortal. Its inhabitants are dumb. No communication can be held with them, for the tongue that once uttered kind words and the ear that was attentive to the wants of others is still and silent in the grave. Those limbs which were ever swift to convey glad messages, to assist suffering humanity are paralized in death and those hands that were always ready to hand out gifts, to alleviate the sufferings of our fellow mortals have performed their last functions. They now sleep the long sleep of death and although we mourn their loss and sympathize with their bereaved ones during the sad hours of their grief, yet we mark well their memory by placing over their graves these monuments which shall ever mark the spot where lie those who, while in life forgot not not their duty to their God, family and friends, but made the necessary preparation for these when the time should come when they are now no more."

The speaker concluded by stating the aims of the order saying: "The Woodmen of the World, as an order, is in infant in years, but a giant in influence, and its growth is due solely to the purity of its fundamental truths, attractions of its social life and the faithfulness with which it performs its duties. Those are the forces which have impelled it onward. Attached to its ranks are men of good repute and humane impulses and it has become the fraternity of the people. Its principle is equity. Its doors are opened no sooner to admit a king than a peasant, for a millionaire that a peasant. Its passport is not rank, but virtue, not money but manhood, not power, but character, and around this stump are gathered men of different grades, wealth, social standing and varied opinions and beliefs. We are taught that co-operation is the grand remedy for social evils."

REPORT IN MORNING PAPERS NOT CORRECT.

No Warrant for Saying Decision in the Alaskan Boundry Case has Been Reached.

(Special to the Examiner.)

London, Oct. 16.—There is the highest authority for saying that the announcement made by the London Morning Advertiser to-day that the decision of the Alaskan Boundry Commission virtually concedes the American case, is entirely untrue. The Commission thus far has reached no decision and no vote has been taken even in the private session which would indicate Chief Justice Alverstone's position. It is quite true that the general trend of opinion among those connected with the tribunal, aside from the commissioners, is that the ultimate decision will be in favour of the United States, but there is as yet not the slightest warrant for saying it has been reached.

Spend Monday evening, October 19th, with the George street Guild at their Fowl Supper served in the Sunday school 6 to 8 o'clock. Good programme after. Tickets 25c.

I know a good thing when I see it. The Snowshoe Tobacco Tags are worth money, and as I want to get a valuable present for them, I will allow you in trade 50 cents per hundred for all you have, can get, or buy. Alive Charles LeGros.

ANNUAL SUPPER OF LAKEFIELD METHODISTS.

Thanksgiving Entertainment was Highly Successful.

Largest Attendance in the History of the Church—Entertaining Programme was Rendered.

The annual fowl supper and concert of the Methodist church, at Lakefield, was held last night, and, successful as these affairs have been in the past, that held yesterday evening eclipsed all former efforts. The supper was held on the first floor of the Town Hall, the concert being given in the assembly room above. Shortly after five o'clock, the hour at which the supper was advertised to commence, the tables were filled, and that was their condition from that hour until after eight o'clock. The ladies are highly pleased with the success of their portion of the evening's programme. It has for about twenty years been the custom of the Lakefield Methodist church to hold their supper on Thanksgiving Day, and year by year these events grow in interest.

After the supper a very pleasing programme was rendered. Rev. T. W. Leggott, the pastor of the church, occupied the chair, and called upon the choir for an anthem, which was rendered in a very musicianly manner. The anthem given was one appropriate to the occasion, "Praise to God," a duet being taken by Miss Montgomery and Mr. Dodge. This was followed by an orchestra selection, those comprising the orchestra being Miss Montgomery and Miss Girven, and Messrs. T. Crawford, J. Shadgett, E. Brown and Horton. This number was well received, and they responded with an encore. A solo by Miss Leggott, a little daughter of Rev. Mr. Leggott, was the succeeding number, and it was highly enjoyable. Rev. Mr. Quarington, the pastor of the Lakefield Baptist Church, gave an address in which he congratulated the members of the Methodist church on the success of their entertainment, and counselled feeling of fraternal friendship between the different churches. Following Mr. Quarrington's address a tableau entitled "Nearer My God to Thee," taken part in by the Misses Fitzgerald, Miss Gervin, Miss Dodge, Miss Stubbs and Miss Downs. This number was very beautifully arranged, and elicited hearty applause. The choir rendered a second anthem in which a duet was well sung by Miss Dodge and Miss Montgomery. A boat song, by a number of little girls was an especially enjoyable number. The entertainment closed with an orchestral selection, and the singing of the National Anthem bringing to a finish the most successful Thanksgiving entertainment in the history of the Lakefield Methodist church.

NORWOOD FAIR BEST IN HISTORY.

East Peterborough Agricultural Society's Exhibition.

7,000 PERSONS ON GROUNDS

Larger Number of Entries Than in Previous Years—Exhibits Good and all Classes Well Represented.

The East Peterborough Industrial Fair held at Norwood on Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 13th and 14th, was, in point of attendance and number of exhibits superior to any held in the history of the Association. The fair weather, with which the majority of exhibitions this year have been favoured, was again in evidence on Wednesday, which was the principal day of the Fair, and, from almost all sections of Peterborough County spectators had gathered until the spacious grounds were the scene of the rendezvous of at least 7,000 persons, all bent upon seeing the far famed Norwood Fair.

The gate receipts amounted to about $1500, which is an increase over last year of some $500, and establishes a record gate receipts in the history of this Fair.

The exhibits, which this year numbered over 2,000 separate entries, were thoroughly representative, and, in addition to their comprehensiveness they were of an unusually good quality. This is particularly true of the fruit and grain exhibits. A large portion of the building devoted to the inside exhibits was filled with the product of orchard, field and garden.

It was distinctively a farmers' and producers' exhibition throughout, and that the agriculturists of the county appreciated the efforts of the Directors to make this year's Fair one especially helpful to that section of the county, was evidenced not only by the large attendance, but by the fact that the departments devoted to agricultural exhibits were well filled. And it has been amply demonstrated that it is not necessary to degenerate into a circus to hold a successful exhibition.

Perhaps the class in which the best showing was made was that of horses, and of these the roadster class was the one in which the largest number of entries were made. A feature of this class was the exhibit of mounted infantry and cavalry horses. Carriage horses were also well represented as were the Agricultural and General Purpose classes. The cattle, for which this part of the country, is justly noted, were in evidence, and all classes were filled.

The live stock as a whole, was the best ever shown in Norwood, and the success of this department of the Fair was the source of considerable satisfaction to the directors.

A special feature introduced this year for the first time was the presence of expert Government judges in the live stock classes. These judges were: Mr. Alex McLean, of Carleton Place, for horses; R. S. Stevenson, Ancaster, sheep; Garnet Thompson, Blenheim, cattle and swine. The work of these expert judges was very satisfactory, and it proved to be a popular move on the part of the Directors in securing them. In speaking of the live stock afterwards, the judges expressed themselves as being surprised at the excellent showing in the different classes, and said that the quality and quantity compared very favourably with Fairs making much greater pretentions.

The showing of fancy work in the main building attracted considerable attention and with good cause, because the excellence of the work in this department was well worthy of a more than cursory inspection. It is doubtful if any County Fair can make a better showing in this department than that made at Norwood.

An exhibit of special merit in the building was one made by the pupils of S. S. No. 12, Asphodel, of which Miss Florence White is the teacher. It was a collection of weeds, injurious to to farming operations, and all who saw it remarked upon the excellence of the exhibit.

In the matter of special amusement features nothing was attempted by the Fair management, but the midway was in evidence and the attractions there were of a sufficiently varied nature to satisfy the most exacting. They were all well patronized, an evidence that those who attended the Fair were prosperous, and were also bent upon enjoying to the full the annual holiday. The Havelock Brass Band furnished music on the grounds during the day.

THE RACES

There was a good card of horse races and some exciting finishes were seen in the different events. In the second heat of the open trot an accident occurred to Blucher, M. Connors' horse. The horse became frightened at some loose papers flying around the track, and the sulky upset, throwing the horse and driver, D. Johnston, fortunately, however, no one was hurt, and the horse was uninjured.

The following is a summary of the races:—

Open Trot.

The officials were:—Starter, Geo. Whitty, of Sterling; Judges, Rev. Father Conway, of Norwood, and Wm. Croft, of Peterborough.

THE MUSICAL APPENDIX.

The special attraction for the evening was a concert given in the rink by the 57th Band of Peterborough, under the direction of Mr. Rupert Gliddon, and assisted by Mr. Herbert Morphet. The rink was well filled and the audience was apparently well satisfied with the programme rendered. Every number was encored, and Mr. Gliddon was generous with his recall selections. The programme combined in a pleasing way the classical with the lighter and more popular, and the whole entertainment was highly enjoyable. Mr Morphet made a decided hit by his singing, which was accompanied by the band. His first selection, "The Holy City" was heartily applauded, and he responded, singing, "Always." The Euphonium solo, by Mr. Cronk proved to be one of the most popular numbers on the programme, and he also was called upon for a second selection.

The visiting press representatives were shown numerous courtesies by Mr. J. G. Keefer, of the Norwood Register.

MURRAY STREET MISSION CIRCLE

Held Annual Thankoffering Service on Tuesday.

The annual Thankoffering service of the Women's Mission Circle of the Murray street Baptist church was held on Tuesday evening. Mrs. (Dr.) Scott, the president, occupied the chair, and after a few remarks, introduced Miss Robinson, a former member of the church, and missionary elect to India. She is a graduate of the Collegiate Institute, and for the past four years has been engaged in educational work in the North-west. She sails on the 24th of this month to engage in mission work in India.

Her address was on educational and religious work in the North-west, and was both instructive and interesting.

At the close of her address, Mrs. Bastow, on behalf of the Women's circle, presented her with a purse which was gracefully acknowledged.

A solo by Mrs. (Dr.) Hunter was much appreciated. Light refreshments were served and a pleasant social season was spent.

People of This Place.

There are people in every town and village of this country who have been cured of itching, bleeding and protruding piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Ask your friends about this great preparation, they can tell you of its great soothing, healing and antiseptic powers. More reputable people have endorsed Dr. Chase's Ointment than any preparation you can mention.

VIGILANCE NEEDED

To Remove Danger of Loss of Life or Limb.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir, — I would like to ask the Mayor, through the columns of your paper, whose duty it is to see that the streets are properly lighted when excavations are being made for either water, gas or sewers. On Wednesday evening there were two openings, one on the east and one on the west side of George street, south of London street, with only one red lantern, and in driving up the street the driver would run into a pile of earth on the opposite side of the street, where there was no danger signal.

On coming down street I observed two or three vehicles that might have met with serious accidents, but fortunately the fates were with them and no damage was done.

Someone should be responsible for seeing that the proper danger signals are placed as required. Such criminal neglect of duty by the proper officer should be severely reprimanded, as innocent persons might readily meet with serious accident, if not death, by such gross carelessness.

Yours truly,
PRO BONO PUBLICO.

THE NAVAL POLICE.

Obscure, But Found on Every Battleship of the British Navy.

Probably the most obscure police force in existence is that known as the Naval Police, members of which are to be found on every battleship in the British Navy. Although British sailors have their own policemen to look after them, it must not be inferred that this state of things is necessitated by the bad conduct of the men. As a matter of fact, it is not often that the naval constable has to use his powers afloat, but when in port he is always busy in the interests of Jack.

The naval constables on every ship are under the control of the master-at-arms, the highest position in this police force, to which a salary of £2 2s. a week is attached. Their duties consist in maintaining order throughout the vessel and guarding the ship's stores. When a ship is in port it is not an unknown occurrence for thieves to slip aboard unobserved, and the constable on patrol has, of course, to prevent this.

As soon as a ship enters port it is usual for seamen of good behaviour to obtain leave to go ashore, and very often Jack is so lost in the enjoyment of his little holiday that he fails to return to his vessel at the appointed time. The naval constables then row ashore, and, having apprehend the deserter, take him back to his ship, when he receives a light sentence from the master-at-arms for his thoughtlessness.

But withal the naval police are always popular with the men, who know well enough that they never make trouble unless there is just cause for it. On the other hand, they sometimes rescue Jack, after a tough fight, from the haunts of landsharks to which he has been lured, as often as not displaying the most remarkable courage on his behalf.

Another reason for the popularity of these police is that they are really sailors themselves, and have served on the lower deck for three years as ordinary seamen before being promoted to corporal of police. Furthermore, they must have a clean conduct sheet and be indefatigable workers, while to distinguish them they are allowed to wear the letters "N. P." on their sleeves.

A Walled Town in Britain.

In the old days when might was right the city that was walled about was common enough, but there are very few towns in Britain which preserve their walls at the present day. Of those few, undoubtedly the most unique is Berwick-upon-Tweed, the old Border town, which has occupied many a page of the past history of the United Kingdom, and which to this very day enjoys the distinction of special mention as a place apart from the United Kingdom in every Royal proclamation issued. Here the old battlements built in the time of Queen Elizabeth remain intact, with all but one of the ancient gateways, and even in some cases the very ponderous gates themselves on their old rusty hinges. In reality there are too walls, the outside and older one, of which now only some fragments remain standing, dating back to the far-off times of Edward the First, who in the great hall of Berwick Castle—only a small part of which now remains—decreed that Baliol should be King of Scotland, a decree which, as every schoolboy knows, was soon set at defiance by the Bruce and his hardy warriors. On this outer line of the ramparts still stands the tower in which the warning notes of the war bell were rung to denote the approach of an enemy, an object naturally of great interest to all visitors to the town.

A VOLUME OF PAGES

SHREWSBURY HOLDS A MOST UNIQUE PLACE IN ENGLISH HISTORY.

Battle of That Name Fought 500 Years Ago Celebrated on July 21, 1903—Contributor to Historic Festivities in Shakespeare—Swift and Fiery March of Hotspur—Lessons of Shrewsbury.

Shrewsbury, in common with most of the heroines in modern comedy, has a past. But what is not, 'tis to be feared, always the case with the ladies mentioned, it is not a past to be ashamed of. It is a page, almost, indeed, a volume of pages, in English history, and Shrewsbury did not mean that Englishmen at home, or the world abroad, should remain forgetful of this. It does not happen that the picturesque town on the Welsh border has any very famous local name upon her annals which could be commemorated. But she had something more considerable; she had a great and terrible battle to remember which turned aside the whole current of the kingdom's story and formed the beginning of a fresh chapter in the chronicles of the throne. Five hundred years ago, upon the verdant plain which, three miles north of the ancient town, is bathed by the Silver Severn, was fought that desperate conflict, wherein Hotspur fell, with more than 2,000 of the best-bred gentlemen in the realm, the issue of the day being to confirm the Crown to the Duke of Lancaster as Henry IV. Last Tuesday, July 21, was the actual day to be celebrated, that being the date of the famous battle of Shrewsbury. The army of King Henry IV. met that of young Percy in Shrewsbury's green meadows, when, out of a force not exceeding 12,000 on either side, those rivals left nearly a third of the total number dead in the clover and the corn, or limping, wounded, from the dreadful contest into the market place. All these things have been called into life again by the little border town.

Shrewsbury, however, had already a magnificent contributor to her historic festivities in Shakespeare, and with much good sense she made a Shakespearean week out of the show. Appropriate structures had been raised; Mr. Benson's company had been engaged, and the program promised every day, besides lectures, sermons, discourses, and excursions pertaining to the events to be revived, included one or more plays of the immortal dramatist. These, of course, comprised "Henry IV.," "Richard II." and "Henry V.," from the historical plays; nor could any better way be found for bringing back to all minds that blood-stained and tumultuous epoch. Most of us, if truth were told, get our English history from the Bard of Avon; and even those who go deeper into records never really shake off the profound impressions left by his majestic genius. Wherever and whenever we study those plays—and most of all if studied or seen on the stage within eyesight of the battlefield—it is as if we lived in those fierce times. Read "Henry IV.," and you want no grander guide—nay, you will hardly accept any other guide. The pages of any prose history seem dull and barren in contrast with the superb power and piercing insight of Shakespeare. We see, as if they lived, the armies draw nigh to Shrewsbury, Hotspur marching swift and fiery, hoping to meet Owen Glendower's levies hastening from Snowdon and Plynlimmon; while Henry of Lancaster, with his equal force of 12,000 men, presses on from Coventry to interrupt the junction, if that may be.

At noon the armies come together in that fair spot beyond the town which still bears the name of battlefield. From noon till evening they fight with such ferocity that long before sunset 6,000 or 7,000 are killed or wounded. And this slaughter, be it remembered, was all wrought with sword and spear on one side, and with bows and arrows upon the other. King Henry IV. owned, indeed, a big gun, with which, afterward, he terribly frightened the Scotchmen at Berwick, and Falstaff in the play talks about having his fat body filled up with lead. But the carnage at Shrewsbury was mainly done by the deadly cloth-yard shaft, which has perhaps been too lightly abandoned as a weapon of war. Prince Harry himself, for whom this field was the first of his warlike experiences received a wound in the face from an arrow, and Hotspur was slain by an arrow which pierced his eye. When that dauntless leader broke by an early charge the ranks of the King's army, the Royalists closed up behind him, and then for two sanguinary hours "by Shrewsbury clock" showered their steel-pointed shafts into the clubbed and huddled rebels. There must be plenty of those fatal weapons, winged "with the gray goose feather," even now lying under the grass and the market gardens by the side of the Severn.

Shakespeare seems to have known almost all that was to be known of the hot battle. He lets us learn the exact counsels of the leaders, the characteristics of each great nobleman and chieftain on the field, and how the King attired several of his captains in garments of the fashion worn by himself in order to lessen his own personal danger. One by one the magic of his invention shows us the proud and selfish Northumberland, his brilliant son, the young Percy, the gloomy and astute Worcester, the foremost of all Prince Harry. Owen Glendower, the Welsh Prince, has not kept his promise of bringing his mountaineers in time to Shrewsbury. The people of the borders believe him to be half-wizard and half-King, and many among them attribute to his witchcraft the evil weather and heavy floods of the season. King Henry, with his son, the young Prince, who will be hereafter the hero of many a victory, has thrust forward by well-judged marches, and is eager to strike before the Welsh leader can join Hotspur. That bradiong soldier burns to keep the glory of that day to himself, and the battle is joined with alacrity on both sides. Never were more splendid pictures of war; one forgets the savagery of court and camp in reading such lines as these, where Hotspur inquires about the Prince, asking:

> Where is his son,
> The nimble-footed madcap Prince of Wales,
> And his comrades, that dar'd the world aside,
> And bid it pass?

And Sir Richard Vernon replies:

> All furnished, all in arms,
> All plumed like ostriches that wing the wind,
> Baited like eagles having lately bathed,
> Glittering in golden coats, like images;
> As full of spirit as the month of May,
> And gorgeous as the sun at Midsummer;
> Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.
> I saw young Harry, with his beaver on,
> His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly armed,
> Rise from the ground like feathered Mercury,
> And vaulted with such ease into his seat
> As if an angel dropped down from the clouds,
> To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
> And witch the world, with noble horsemanship.

Throughout the crimson terrors and merciless hatreds of the conflict the great poet intermingles those patches of irresistible comedy which make his plays all the more closely resemble the blending of tears and laughter in human life. For here, side by side with the magnificent pictures of wrath and ruin, and the slow making of England in blood and travail, we read such keen wit and subtle satire as where Sir John Falstaff meditates upon "honor" or slowly and nervously rises from his pretended death couch to comment upon the promise which Prince Henry has made to see him disembowelled.

As everybody knows, the battle was won by the King's army and secured the Crown and the throne of the Red Rose of Lancaster for thirteen years—stormy but successful. The power of the great Barons was broken upon that blood-stained field, and Shrewsbury had good reason to remind us all of the share which she bore in our chronicles. Shrewsbury will teach us, with Shakespeare's aid, how then, as now, the noble and ignoble, the lofty and the base, the rightful and the unrighteous, were interwoven in our annals, and while we laugh at the ragged recruits with whom that pleasant rogue Falstaff refused to march through Coventry, and who, by the way, were so "pepp ered" in the battle, we can see that even to Feeble, the woman's tailor, and to Peter Bulcalf the kingdom owes something, however little, of her proud and powerful upgrowth.—Sir Edwin Arnold, in London Telegraph, July 25.

WHAT'S THE PARTITION?

During the summer of 1900 my doctor treated me for liver complaint, but instead of getting better I was gradually getting worse.

"My appetite was very irregular and I would bloat very much after eating. I also had palpitation of the heart, and sometimes I could not sleep at all at night on account of my heart beating so hard.

"I was hardly able to get around when I commenced using Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. After using half a box I felt much better. Continuing their use I was soon entirely well and have had good health ever since."

This statement is made by Mr. A. D. Miller, of Pusey, Haliburton Co., Ont. It needs no comment. It tells run down, worn out people to get their stomachs put in working order by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets, and they will feel like new men and women.

STORIES OF RUSKIN.

Some Things the Great Man Regretted—Would Have Liked to Wield a Pickaxe—His Candid Ways.

One gets the impression from reading of Ruskin's early years that he missed many of the privileges of healthy boyhood. When he was a man, he and a companion were out one day upon the mountainside. They passed a group of men, says a writer in the Strand Magazine, who were engaged in rough work with pickaxes.

"How I wish," said Ruskin, "I could do what those men are doing! I was never allowed to do any work which would have strengthened my back. I wasn't allowed to ride, for fear of being thrown off; nor to row, for fear of being drowned; nor to box, because it was vulgar. I was allowed to fence, because that was genteel."

Sometimes, when he was living with his parents at Denmark Hill, he would enjoy a surreptitious row on the river. "I used to be told," says the same companion, "not to let his father and mother know where he had gone." Ruskin was then in the forties.

It is easy to read here a woman's fears and prejudice and domination. Ruskin was always, quite properly, under his mother's control; but it is possible that if he had had the outlet of reasonable athletics his destructive moods would have been less marked. It was during his residence at Denmark Hill that he was anathematizing something or somebody most unreasonably.

"John," said his mother, "you talk too much and you talk nonsense."

"Yes, mother," Ruskin replied, as humble as a little boy, and changed the subject.

Ruskin was not afraid to admit to others besides his mother that he was wrong. In a lecture at Oxford when he was Slade professor, Sir William Richmond defended the fame which the world had accorded to Michelangelo and Rafael. Formerly Ruskin had denounced Michelangelo, and was not very well pleased with Sir William for presenting the other side. When Ruskin recovered from the illness which had caused him to give up the Slade professorship, Sir William retired, that he might fill it again. Touching by this, Ruskin sent, asking if he might come down and dine with his former pupil, who was delighted to have him. At the close of a pleasant evening, Ruskin said:

"Willy, why did you make that violent attack upon me about Michelangelo?"

"Mr. Ruskin, because you talked nonsense," replied Sir William.

Meanwhile Mr. Ruskin rose to go. "You are quite right, Willy," he said, in his candid way. "It was nonsense."

Whistler's Queer Marriage.

Mr. Labouchere, of Truth, is a daring man. He recently confessed to having acted as match-maker between the late gifted and eccentric artist, James McNeil Whistler, and the lady who became his wife, but who was at the time a charming little widow of artistic tastes, happy-go-lucky ways and sunny disposition.

The two were known to be strongly attracted toward each other, and to have already talked in a vague, far-off, Elysian way of possible matrimony; but it was perfectly plain that Whistler would never do anything so practical and common-place as definitely to propose and be accepted, get a license, go to church and be married unless some kind friend took him in hand. Besides, it was touch and go with his temper and his tongue how he might treat any kind friend who should attempt the risk. vice. Mr. Labouchere took the risk. He was dining with them one evening, and decided to bring things to the point at once.

"Jemmy," he said, "will you marry Mrs. Godwin?"

"Certainly," answered Whistler.

"Certainly," responded the lady.

"When?" persisted the practical Labouchere.

"Oh, some day," said Whistler.

"That won't do," said Labouchere. "We must have a date."

"So they both agreed," he narrates, "that I should choose the day, tell them what church to come to for the ceremony, provide a clergyman and give the bride away.

"I fixed an early date, and got them the chaplain of the House of Commons to perform the ceremony. It took place a few days later. After the ceremony was over we adjourned to Whistler's studio, where he had prepared a banquet. The banquet was on the table, but there were no chairs, so we sat on packing cases. The happy pair when I left had not quite decided whether they would go that evening to Paris or remain in the studio.

"How unpractical they were was shown when I happened to meet the bride the day before the marriage in the street. 'Don't forget to-morrow,' I said.

"'No,' she replied. 'I am just going to buy my trousseau.'

"'A little late for that, is it not?' I asked.

"'No,' she answered, 'for I am only going to buy a tooth-brush and a new sponge.'

"However, there never was a more successful marriage. They adored each other and lived most happily together, and when she died he was broken-hearted indeed. He never recovered from the loss."

"DIME" NOVELS.

Mr. Scott, of Regina, Leads a War Against Them in the House—Machine Literary Methods.

There would now appear to be a prospect that the "dime novel" which sells at five cents, and which has so long flourished even as the green bay tree, is to be an institution unknown to the coming generation. At Ottawa recently Mr. Scott of Regina placed several questions on the order paper of the House that bore a very apparent menace to the "Jesse James," "Diamond Dick" and other literature of that ilk.

Mr. Scott, hailing as he does from the "wild and woolly west" has probably had the experience out there of coming across runaway youngsters from the east, whose imaginations were fired by the perusal of the exploits of Diamond Dick, to the point of a burning desire to emulate him and who left their homes with the idea of bossing the prairie and cleaning up all the redskins in sight. Possibly this explains why the first gun in a legislative warfare against the idols of juvenile fancy should be fired by a member who does not claim the effete east as his place of living.

"Pernicious literature placed in the hands of the young" has long been a ripe theme for pulpit oratory, along with gambling and the baleful cigarette. It is to be feared, however, that the "back to the Sunday school" injunction in so far as his literature goes has been a wasted one on the small boy, who has gone on revelling in "Sombrero Sam," or the "Outlaws of the Foothills," while "Jasper's Sacrifice, or the Triumph of Doing Right," has been allowed to accumulate dust on the shelf of the Sunday school library. Tons of thousands of dime novels have been confiscated by wrathy parents and put in the fire, but sphinx-like, there have arisen from the ashes fresh ones, and the injured small boy has consoled his feelings with the next weekly number of his favorite library, seeking solitary and secluded enjoyment in the exploits of his heroes.

It is an inexpensive pastime, too, and therefore suited to the limited resources of the average youngster. Let him purchase one copy and he is sure of reading from three or four to a dozen other different numbers, just as his circle of acquaintances extends. There is a swapping system in vogue among boys that might be styled a community of interest, whereby each is the gainer and the good of each the good of all.

Chicago has no great reputation for moral vigilance. The Windy City is something of a byword, in fact. Yet the police authorities there have just got busy and taken 29 booksellers into custody for selling dime novels. The action was taken at the instigation of the Citizens' Mutual Alliance and warrant was found for the step in a statute prohibiting any person "exhibiting or selling on the highway or at a place of business, books, pamphlets, magazines, or printed papers containing accounts and stories of criminal deeds, pictures, and deeds of bloodshed and crime."

The preacher and the detective strike hands on the question of the evil influence of the blood and thunder literature. The former sees in such reading spiritual danger, the latter sees common sense knocked out of the youth, with the dime novel mania, and in spirit fired to reckless emulation, good and bad. The detective force in New York is being continually troubled by would-be sleuths, who have stored their craniums with Old Cap Collier lore and think they see in themselves the subtle gift of the human bloodhound.

The detective creation of the dime novel has a capacity for disguise of voice and appearance that would make his fortune as a vaudevillian. All nationalities look alike to him and he is never phased when called upon to make a lightning change in the pursuit of the unfortunate villain. This is his great asset and he needs no other beyond the nerve of a Kitchener and the capacity for saying "precisely" and "just so" in the right places.

There is a terse style about the dime novel writer that makes itself felt. It is clear cut and incisive. Here is a specimen:

"The night was dark.

Diamond Dick, mounted on his mustang, rode briskly.

"Save me!" rang out upon the air. The cry was a woman's.

He recognized the voice.

"No one can ever say I refused aid to a woman," he muttered as he set spurs to his mustang.

Zip!

A bullet whizzed past his ear."

And so on and so on. If you read further you would be thrilled by his shout, "Surrender, Black Mike! The game's up." Every sentence is its own paragraph, and the author gives you "local color" and heaps of it.

The Spanish-American war brought out its crop of dime novel literature.

It is a good sign that the "detective" fiction is being supplanted by the adventures at home and abroad of this style of hero. The "sleuths," young and old, "Old King Brady" and "Nick Carter" and the wildly contrived exploits of the James Boys are no longer the boys' best favorites. Still, the cheap, guady and often illiterate style of the five cent novel are not best calculated to improve the aims and ideals of the rising generation or cultivate in him a love for good reading. The novels are the products of writers who turn them out by machine methods and for a weekly salary. They do credit to the fertility of their imagination, but little else. But he is on no worse plane than the writer of cheap melodramas, the portrayal of which on the stage with life and realism create a deeper and more lasting impression with the boys in the gods than do the alluring colored-covered misnamed "dime" novels.

While local newsdealers say there is quite a demand for this class of literature, yet the public libraries are doing a lot to wean the boys from their taste for the cheap New York output.

Humor in Artists' Models.

In my early days I once tried to engage as a model a big negro who made a living out of chewing glass in sundry barrooms for the entertainment of those gathered there, writes Tom Browne, a well-known English comic artist, in Bookl overs' Magazine.

"I want to paint you," I said, when he had taken round the hat after his performance.

"What cullah, boss?" he asked, suspiciously.

"Why, natural color, of course," I replied. "I want to paint your face, you know."

"Yah, I'se not taking any, boss," he said, firmly. "The cullah I'se got is good enough for this chile."

I once nearly got hammered for making a colored sketch from life of a very respectable golf-caddy in an attitude of ease, subsequently adding a street corner as a background and sending it to an exhibition under the title of "A Loafer." The man came round to me in a violent rage, said he was a bloomin', respectable, 'igh-clarse golf-caddy, and no loafer, and if I didn't alter the title of that dashed picture, he'd either put his solicitor on to me or jolly well bash me.

Oh, yes, there's a lot of humor about, if you only look for it in places where you don't expect to find it.

SHEN HO

By FRED WHISHAW

Copyright, 1903, by S. C. McClure.

When Bernard Appleby determined to devote his life to evangelical missionary work in China he was as full of sanguine enthusiasm as any young fellow in the service. "You are exactly the kind of man we want," they told him at the depot in Shanghai, "and we shall expect to see you do wonders in the great cause."

"It won't be for lack of enthusiasm if I fail," said Bernard. "I am ignorant and shall be useless for awhile, but I hope to work into it by degrees."

"You'll have plenty of time to learn the language down at Fuchow," said a member of the board, who, catching the eye of another member, smiled a little. A third member sighed, but stifled the sigh and pretended he had yawned.

Bernard scraped acquaintance at the mission house presently with a young girl and walked through the town with her. She was a devotee, like himself, who had been in the service a year and knew something of it. He would be dull in Fuchow, she said; but, please God, he would be a successful missionary; he looked like a man. The youth and the girl looked steadily in one another's eyes at parting.

"I hope we shall meet again," he said. As for her, she smiled back, but when he had gone she allowed her eyes to become dimmed.

Enthusiasm dies hard in people of Bernard Appleby's stamp. For a year he worked at his Chinese. He was the only European in the place, excepting for an hour or two in each week when the clumsy, noisy steamer would come thundering up or down the yellow river bound for Wuchang or Yutze, as it happened to be traveling up or down stream.

At the end of two years Bernard could stand his solitary life no longer. He went up to Shanghai and bashfully inquired of the chairman for news of the young lady whom he had seen at the depot on his arrival. The chairman smiled paternally. "She is still unmarried," he said, replying to Appleby's thoughts. "You are finding it dull and would marry. Is it so?"

Bernard blushingly confessed that so it was.

"Well," said the chairman, "we like our people to intermarry. Miss Tate is at Hankow at this moment. You might see her on your way back."

Appleby adopted his advice. He found Christie Tate at the missionary station at Hankow, and the two were not long in fixing up matters. Within a month Bernard carried off a wife to Fuchow.

The following year the arrival of a daughter added new happiness. The baby girl, who was called Dulcie, grew and prospered. She was a pretty, curly headed, fascinating little person, a thing of wonder and amusement to many of the natives of the place, an object of adoration and love to one, Shen Ho, the son of a former "convert" of Appleby's, who had long since relapsed to the religion of his fathers.

"Shen Ho," Appleby would sometimes say, smiling somewhat plaintively, "is the only real convert we have ever had, Christie, and he is Dulcie's, not ours."

This was perfectly true. From Dulcie alone had proceeded the personal magnetism which had been the foundation of Shen Ho's Christian aspirations. Shen Ho lived in the house as servant and was as honest and diligent in business as he was devout in his Christianity.

Dulcie taught Shen Ho cricket. Shen Ho thought the game a foolish one, but would have played it gladly all day and all night to please his friend. Nothing would induce him, however, to bowl in such a manner that the ball reached the wicket otherwise than dead slow for fear of hurting Miss Dulcie. When Appleby was playing and bowled a fast ball at his daughter Shen Ho would groan aloud and hide his eyes with his hand.

In every way Shen Ho was Dulcie's devoted slave and servant as well as playmate. He also acted as her escort and protector and her champion if occasion offered.

The people of Fuchow were not too well disposed toward the English missionary and his wife. Appleby had never been attacked, but he was never secure from mocking laughter and jeers when passing through the crowds in the streets.

So matters would doubtless have remained till this day but that when Dulcie was about nine years old and Shen Ho fourteen or fifteen and a Christian of five years' standing the country began to be convulsed by the Boxer rising in Peking and the troubles that accompanied the popular upheaval against foreign residents throughout the land. Rumors of trouble soon reached Fuchow.

It was but a week after this that a party of half a dozen Boxers came into the town. They inquired first whether the place contained any "foreign devils" and were informed of the Appleby family.

"We want neither the foreign devils nor their gods," said the Boxer, and he went forthwith to spy upon the Englishman's compound.

Huan Li, the gardener, happened to be coming out of the place, going home for his midday rest.

"What are you doing in the house of the foreign devils?" he was asked.

"Getting his money from him by doing a very little work for good pay," said Huan Li, with a grin.

"Well, the people must learn that there is to be no hobnobbing with foreign devils," said the fellow, and a moment later poor Huan Li's head was rolling in the filth in the gutter.

Several of those who saw and heard this were not ill affected toward the Applebys. Bernard and his wife had visited the sick and fed the hungry.

When the Boxer had turned his back and was on his way to consult with his companions two or three good souls crept cautiously round by another way to warn the missionary of his danger.

Appleby was in a fix. This was Tuesday. There would be no steamer until Thursday. Even if there were he would not probably be allowed to board it. What was to be done?

Shen came running in excitedly.

"Boxer man coming!" he exclaimed. "Killee Miss Dulcie, killee all! Come away quick! Shen show way! Comee, missy! No stop, not one minute!"

Shen quickly explained that he knew of a path through the woods to Tsotse, a village on the river ten miles nearer Hankow. Here he had an uncle, Shen Li, a boatman and fisherman, who would take the party down the river to Hankow.

Appleby snatched up food and a bottle of water and a blanket or two, and the party made for the nearest point at which the open country could be reached. "Go quickly," they cried; "the Boxers run fast!"

"These people will give us away," muttered Bernard as he ran, having Dulcie on his shoulder and his wife panting at his side. "There 'll be no secret as to the way we have taken!"

But fortunately the Boxers delayed their attack for nearly half an hour, employing that period doubtless in screwing up their courage or their ferocity to the necessary point. But the ground was soft here and there, and it would not be difficult to follow by tracking. This fact gave Bernard anxiety and lent him wings and breath and his wife also.

Suddenly came the fatal sounds of pursuit—shouts and occasionally a shot fired by way of intimidation. The pursuers were a mile behind, but probably traveling much faster than the English party. Then Shen Ho spoke:

"Me go back, tell Boxer man you gone rightee to Woohen, you go leftee to Tsotse; no waitee for Shen Ho; me find you mission house, Hankow; goodby, master, missis; goodby loves Missee Dulcie!" Shen Ho suddenly went down upon his little nose and kissed Dulcie's tiny foot; then, before he could be questioned or prevented, he dashed backward in the way they had come.

In a few minutes he met the pursuers. The Boxer leader, hot with the chase, looked by this time, as did each of his followers, an incarnate fiend of savagery. They ran sweating and swearing, brandishing pitchforks and swords.

"Have you seen the foreign devils?" shouted the leader. "Speak quickly or the vultures shall sicken over your carcass tonight."

"Come; you shall show us which way they went, and if I find that you have lied"—

"Come, then," said Shen Ho firmly. "They were running toward Woohen, tell you, where there are three other foreign devils who will protect them."

Shen Ho led his men three miles out of their way before the savage brutes made up their minds he had deceived them and thrust their swords through his faithful heart and left him. But the time thus gained sufficed for Appleby to bring his wife and Dulcie in safety to Tsotse and to engage a boat hence down river to Hankow.

Appleby has declared many times that if ever he returns to his mission house at Fuchow he will adopt "that little brick Shen Ho" for his smartness on the evening of their escape.

He does not know and probably he never will how big a thing the lad did for him and his that day.

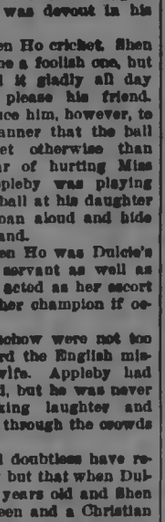
THE AX of toughest steel becomes dulled by constant use and must have a new edge if it is to do good work. Constant work dulls a man as it does an ax, makes him sluggish of body and dull of mind. He needs a tonic, something that will restore the keenness of mind and activity of body.



Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery puts new life into weak, worn-out, run-down men and women. It strengthens the weak stomach, purifies the blood, and effectively stimulates the liver. The whole body is built up with sound, solid flesh by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery."

"I was confined to my bed for four months from January 1st, 1899, and commenced to take your medicine January 25th, 1899," writes Mrs. Hallie L. Sheppard, of Poplarbluff, Mo. "I took eight bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, four of 'Favorite Prescription,' two vials of 'Pleasant Pellets,' and one bottle of Doctor Pierce's Compound Extract of Smartweed, as a liniment. Indigestion, obstinate constipation, and hardening of the liver was my trouble. I am at this time able to do almost any kind of house work. Your medicine saved me from my grave. Thanks to you for the benefit. My case was hopeless when I began taking your medicine."

Don't be fooled into trading a substance for a shadow. Any substitute offered as "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery," is a shadow of that medicine. There are cures behind every claim made for the "Discovery," which no "just as good" medicine can show.

LENDRUM'S

KEY TO THE EMPIRE.

Canada Said to Be So by Prominent English Journal.

The Saturday Review, London, recently had an article under the caption of "Canada, the Key to the Empire," of which Public Opinion published the following condensation: "Canada presents all the difficulties of the Imperial problem, and all the aids to the solution, in an acute form. It is the only self-governing colony in which the interest of a foreign country has reached, under our happy-go-lucky system, enormous dimensions. . . . The growth of Canada in recent years is not due so much to British as to United States enterprise, and it must be obvious to all who study the problem that if we fail now (to consolidate the Empire) nothing can stop the separation of Canada from the United Kingdom and its ultimate absorption by the United States. If Canada goes, other colonies must follow, and the disintegration of the British Empire will be the distinguishing feature of the nineteenth century history. If we succeed, we shall not only solve the Canadian problem; the consolidation of the Empire presents no greater problem than that. It is not a time in which we can adopt the free trade text, 'Let us eat and drink free food, for tomorrow we die.' . . . An Imperial policy is based upon the fact that it is the interest of the Empire that it should be adopted; that the United Kingdom will secure a fresh lease of life for those economic energies which otherwise in no very distant future must decay; and that the colonies will achieve a more rapid development than is possible in isolation. English people, at any rate those who reject the free trade nostrums, should be the first to admit that the present arrangement with Canada, if made permanent, and unaccompanied with a change on our part, must be unsatisfactory from the Canadian point of view and incompatible with local aspirations. If we reciprocate by stimulating the wheat production of Canada, their manufacturers will find ample scope for all their energies in the increased economic activity which the influx of population and its demand for all kinds of commodities will insure, while at the same time there will be an ever-widening market for the more highly specialized industries of the United Kingdom. In this movement there can be no question of the surrender of their independence and freedom of action by any of the colonies. We are not going to revive the mercantile system. Nothing more is required at any stage of Imperial consolidation than an Imperial Council to aid and advise in the adjustment of the commercial relations of the Empire."

Lord Coleridge on the Bench.

Lord Coleridge, Lord Chief Justice of England from 1880 until 1894, has been described as England's greatest criminal judge. A writer in the Pall Mall Magazine says that in appearance he has the very embodiment of judicial dignity. He was ever courteous and considerate, and never tried to win cheap applause at the expense of an inexperienced barrister or overwrought witness.

He had a curious habit, on the bench, of leaning back in his chair and closing his eyes, and this sometimes led the unwary to conclude that he was asleep.

On one occasion, during the trial of a prisoner for setting fire to a dwelling-house, the counsel for the defence was much upset through his ignorance of the chief's habit. Throughout the day he had been trying to get before the jury the fact that a man other than the prisoner had openly threatened to burn down the particular house.

Each attempt to introduce testimony which the rules of evidence would not admit, was checked by a prompt objection, sustained by the court. But when the speech for the defence was begun Lord Coleridge went off into his usual doze, and the counsel saw his opportunity.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said he, "let me come to another and more serious point. We have heard from the witnesses that a certain Bill Smith had, prior to the fire, been dismissed by the prosecutor from his service. Now, gentlemen, I can tell you something—"

"But not about Mr. William Smith, I'm afraid," came from the bench, in gentle tones which conveyed no sense of irritation or annoyance.

BRITISH COLONIES.

Remarkable Increase of the White Population Within Their Borders.

The population of the principal British colonies is just now a matter of special interest. The figures given with regard to it by writers and speakers differ widely. This is not surprising, as most of the statements are based upon official returns published from two to twelve years ago. Perhaps a cautious estimate of the numbers of the white population at the present moment may be of a little service. I have been at some pains to make one, and I believe that the figures given below will be found pretty close to the mark. In the case of Africa, south of Zambesi, it is impossible to hope for exactness, and I have therefore given a figure slightly below what seems to me probably correct. The total—11,075,000—will doubtless appear low to many colonists, but I must remind these that to arrive at my result not only aborigines but Asiatics resident in the colonies have been deducted.

White population in July, 1903:

Canada	5,525,000
Australia	3,360,000
South Africa	975,000
New Zealand	815,000
Total	11,075,000

An eminent American has lately stated in a London newspaper, "Your colonies do not grow." It may interest any one who may have been impressed by this broad assertion to be told that for some time past the average increase of whites in our colonies has been at the rate of about twenty thousand per month.—W. F. Reeves, in London Times.

Conan Doyle as a Detective.

A friend of Sir Conan Doyle once asked the great author of so many detective stories why he did not establish a detective agency and employ Sherlock Holmes' methods in solving his clients' mysteries and conducting his business.

"Well," said Sir Conan, "I have a very good reason. You see that all the knots of the Sherlock Holmes type were of my own tying, and, naturally, for me to untie them was simple. If I undertook to unravel the entanglements of other people I believe I should fail. On one occasion, however, I solved what might have been a puzzle to some. I was in a tailor's shop while a rather unattractive man was selecting a pair of trousers. He flatly objected to striped material, and I got the idea that he was an ex-convict. To satisfy myself I visited a number of prisons, and sure enough I found that man's picture in the rogues' gallery. Doubtless he had had enough of striped wearing apparel."

SALISBURY STORIES.

The London Daily Graphic, in its issue of August 25, has the following in its long biographical sketch of the late Lord Salisbury: Closely connected with his retiring disposition was a curious mental aloofness—to borrow Mr. T. P. O'Connor's apt phrase—which often caused Lord Salisbury to make remarkable mistakes of identity. The Manchester Guardian is responsible for the story that Lord Salisbury, the Bishop of London, and many others, happened to be in a room with the King. The King told the Bishop—who, by the way, had been one of Lord Salisbury's own appointments—that Lord Salisbury had asked in reference to him, "Who is that young-looking cleric?" And then, to save embarrassment of the Bishop, His Majesty added, pleasantly: "But you need not mind that. I just showed him the latest photograph of myself, and after looking at it some moments in silence, he said, sympathetically, 'Poor old fellow!'"

Another story of the same character refers to an incident at a garden party at Hatfield the summer before last, while the South African war was still in progress. A certain Baronet, who had recently returned from a visit to South Africa, was among the guests. In the course of the afternoon Lord Salisbury took him by the arm, saying, "I want a quiet word with you," and proceeded to inquire about his views on the military situation. The Baronet, astonished and delighted by this mark of honor, freely offered long and detailed criticisms on the war and everything connected with it, to all of which Lord Salisbury listened with profound attention. Later his nephew asked: "What did you find to talk about so long a time with Sir So-and-So?" "I don't know what you mean," was the reply; "I never spoke to him in my life. I have just been having a long and important talk with Lord Roberts, and I certainly found him thoroughly outspoken."

Money Lender Lewis' Estate.

The estate of Mr. Samuel Lewis, the famous London money-lender, who lived at Grosvenor square and Cork street, Burlington Gardens, and died on Jan. 18, 1901, was valued, when probate of his will was granted on Jan 21, 1901, at £1,000,000, so far as then could be ascertained. The estate has since been re-valued at £2,572,658 17s., and it seems probable, therefore, that the two-thirds of his residuary estate which he bequeathed in reversion for charitable and other public uses will amount to about £1,500,000. It was also stated that shortly before his death Mr. Lewis had put the amount of his fortune at two and a half millions, a figure now proved to be remarkably correct. The immediate bequests to charities made in the will amounted to £5,500, and his relatives, solicitor, clerks and servants all received legacies of sums ranging from £15,000 to £100. The two-thirds of the residuary estate are to be divided between 40 institutions on Mrs Lewis' death. Among the chief of these bequests are £400,000 for establishing dwellings for the poor, £250,000 for the Prince of Wales' Hospital Fund, £100,000 for the relief of the Jewish poor, and the following amounts to various hospitals: London £30,000, Maidenhead £10,000, Hyslops £5,000, Paddington-green £5,000, and £10,000 each to Guy's, Charing Cross, St. George's, St. Bartholomew's, St. Thomas', and University College. Another thoughtful bequest was that of £200 to the poor boxes at all the London Police Courts.

PETERBOROUGHS TRIM WELLESLEYS

First O. R. F. U. Game won by Home Team.

TEAMS EVENLY MATCHED.

Some Excellent Work by Home Players —An Exciting Finish Puts Peterborough in the Lead.

The rugby season in Peterborough as far as championship O.F.R.U. games are concerned, opened very auspiciously yesterday afternoon with a game between the fast Wellesleys of Toronto, and the Peterborough team in an intermediate series game. The attendance was not as large as had been looked for, about three hundred persons being on the grounds. This comparatively small attendance may be accounted for by the fact that were counter attractions in town, and a great many were out of town spending the holiday.

The game itself was not as exciting as some of the City League games that have been played here this season, but it was, nevertheless, a good exhibition of rugby, being clean and at times very fast.

The home team won by the score of 9—8, but the result was in doubt until the timekeeper's whistle blew. The teams are very evenly matched, the balance of weight being slightly in favour of the Peterborough team, but the difference is very small, and had no appreciable effect on the playing of the teams. Both teams have a fairly good knowledge of the new rules under which the game was played and few infractions were noticed. The home team suffered rather more than the visitors from off-side plays. Some surprising talent was displayed by the home players in the game yesterday. Crowley, at centre half proved himself to be a very valuable man at that position. He was a most difficult man to tackle and his sprinting ability made him a most valuable acquisition to the team. Graham, at quarter back made some good plays, his tackling being the best seen on the field. To Meagher, perhaps belongs the honour of having practically cinched the game for the locals, and on other occasions he also gave ample evidence of his value on the gridiron. Crough, who replaced Cameron when the latter was injured, played a brilliant game, making a most effective tackler, and his punting was also good. Lee at full back made a number of splendid kicks, and his rushes into the opponent's territory usually resulted in advancing his team.

The play was not as open as is is usually the case since the adoption of the new rules, and, at times it resembled the old game. This had a tendancy to make the game uninteresting to the spectators, but when they did break away, and the ball kept in sight, the enthusiasm increased, and when the spectators have become accustomed to the new game, it is easily seen that Rugby will become more popular with the public.

The game during the first half was decidedly in favour of the visitors, chiefly because of the fact that they were with the wind, and not because they showed any better playing than the home team. The first half ended with the score 7—2 for the Wellesleys. During the second period, with the wind, which by this time, however, had become a very doubtful element, because of the fact that it had decreased in velocity until it had almost subsided, the home team gradually evened up the score, and by some exceedingly clever work, secured a lead of one point by a try. The Wellesleys tied shortly afterwards, and just before time was called the locals added a rouge, making them one point to the good.

As the teams faced each other they lined up as follows:

THE GAME.

Peterborough got the kick off, but lost the ball; they gradually worked play to Wellesleys end however, and got a rouge on May. Asselestine and Painter were each ruled off for five minutes. The second point also went to the Peterborough team, on a rouge. By some hard work and with the timely aid of the wind, the visitors secured two rouges in quick succession, a touch in goal and followed with a try, which, however, they failed to convert, ended the scoring for the first half. In this half Graham made a spectacular run and a successful tackle saving the home team from an almost certain try. This play was about the best seen in the game. Just before time was called Cameron was injured, and had to retire, his place being taken by Crough.

In the second half much the better playing was seen, and at the finish became very exciting. Morgan replaced Lee at full back during this period. Peterborough started the scoring, making two rouges in short order. Crowley then made one of his famous runs playing a combination with Meagher, who took the ball by a succession of kicks, to the goal line and securing a try, making the score 8—7. By this time the interest of the spectators had been aroused, as had also the spirits of the players and the play from now on was characterised by much faster work than in the earlier parts of the game. The home team, on the whole, though, had the better of the argument and forced the play to the Wellesleys' end continually. The visitors by some very strenuous playing added a rouge, and tied the score, but their hopes of success were quickly dashed to the ground, as the Peterborough team got a rouge on May giving them again a lead of one point which they maintained to the end of the game, making the final score 9—8.

SPRINTING.

The matched 100 yards foot race between D. Belland of Peterborough, and Knox of Orillia, took place yesterday at the Driving Park, before about three hundred persons. The race was run in one heat and was a disappointment to the many supporters of the local runner. Knox won by about 4 yards, the official time being given as 11 1-4 seconds. Because of having made a false start Belland was put back one yard by the Orillia starter.

RUGBY.

The game in the City League tomorrow will be played between the All Saints and the Britannias, completing the first round in the schedule of games. This is the first meeting of these two teams, and will doubtless be a very interesting game. It will be played at the Oval and will commence at 3 o'clock.

The clubs now in Group 5 are: Peterborough Thistles, Peterborough Granites, Lindsay, Oshawa, Kingston, Port Hope, Cobourg, Whitby, Bobcaygeon; play at Peterborough. J. W. Corcoran, umpire.

PEDESTRIAN INJURED AT NORWOOD STATION.

Mr. Wm. Fitzgerald of Indian River had Narrow Escape.

An accident which, it was feared would terminate very seriously, if not fatally, occurred at Norwood on Wednesday. The scene of the accident was near the C.P.R. station. Mr. William Fitzgerald, of Indian River, along with about two hundred others, alighted from the noon express, and, was walking to the village when, on stepping into the road he was run into by a horse and buggy, in which were two Peterborough men, Messrs. Kearns and Hill. It is said that the horse becoming frightened by the outgoing train was unmanagable. Mr. Fitzgerald was struck by the horse's shoulder, and knocked down, but fortunately the buggy did not pass over his body. Mr. Fitzgerald, by his fall became unconscious, and it was not until he had been in Dr. Petterson's surgery, where he had been taken after the accident, about thirty minutes that he regained consciousness. A consultation was held between Drs. Patterson and Pettigrew and it was thought that no serious internal injuries had been received. The injured man was taken to Miss Down's residence, and, in a short time will, it is thought, be fully recovered.

If you are suffering from pain and torture of piles and want to be cured spend 50 cents at the druggists for one package of Pyramid Pile Cure, and convince yourself beyond a doubt that it can be done. There is no earthly doubt that this remedy will cure you just as it has cured thousands and thousands of others, if you follow the directions and give it a fair trial.

You may have tried so many remedies that you may feel that yours is a hopeless case. You may have become discouraged and suffered so long that it is almost second nature to you. It makes no difference how serious your case is, or how long you may have had it, you will be cured just the same

Pyramid Pile Cure is in the form of suppositories, and reaching the seat of the trouble gives instant relief. It does away with the torture of the knife and the humiliation of an examination and operation by the physician. It is administered by the sufferer himself in the privacy of the home. There is no record of it ever failing to cure the most severe, aggravated and long standing cases.

Mrs. R. T. C. Poylan, Marshall, Mississippi, writes: "I suffered awful torture for years from piles. I used Pyramid Pile Cure and was well in three days."

Amos Crocker, of Worcester, writes, "After going through a frightful surgical operation and after trying any number of salves and ointments, one 50 cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure gave speedy relief, and it quickly cured me."

James Kenton, Memphis, Tenn., says: "I suffered the tortures of itching piles for years, and not even mercurial ointment would relieve me. One 50 cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure cured me entirely."

Pyramid Pile Cure is for sale by all druggists, or will be sent upon receipt of price, 50 cts. a package, by Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich.

Scrawny People.

People grow thin, scrawny, pale and weak when the blood is thin and watery. What is needed to round off the angles and fill out the form, is not fat but healthy muscular tissue. By enriching the blood and increasing its nourishing qualities Dr. Chase's Nerve Food adds new flesh and tissue to the body as well as new vigour and energy. You can prove this by noting your increase in weight while using this great cure.

Hunting Season.

The Grand Trunk Railway has issued a very handsome illustrated pamphlet, entitled "Haunts of Fish and Game," giving information regarding season for shooting deer, moose, reindeer, caribou, etc., in the "Highlands of Ontario," and at other points along the line of the Grand Trunk. Copies of the same will be furnished on application at Grand Trunk ticket offices or to J. D. McDonald, District Passenger Agent, Toronto. d66

PROGRAMME OF THE SCIENCE MEN'S TRIP.

Students of Practical Science School Will Visit Engineering and Industrial Works.

Final arrangements for the School of Practical Science excursion to Peterborough on Saturday, October 24th inst., have just been completed. A special G. T. R. five coach vestibuled train, will leave the union station, Toronto, at seven o'clock, arriving here at ten, and the party, which will probably exceed three hundred, will consist of the faculty and students in Engineering of Toronto University.

On their arrival here parties will be formed, and the various engineering works and industrial concerns in town and vicinity visited. The hydraulic lift lock, the Canadian General Electric Works and the W. Hamilton Foundry, will of course receive first attention, and, if time permit, other plants of more recent location will prove points of interest. Subsidiary excursions will be run to the Cement Works at Lakefield, and the Cordova mines, near Havelock.

Luncheon will be served at 12.30, and dinner at 6.30, at the Oriental. Returning the special will leave Peterborough at 9 p.m., arriving in Toronto at midnight. It is expected that President Loudon, of the University of Toronto, will accompany the excursion.

The arrangements of the details has been left to Professors Wright, Rosebrugh and Bain of the staff, and a committee of the undergraduates, who report their treatment at the hands of Peterborough manufacturers and engineers as extremely kind and courteous.

Messrs. Gillespie and Sisson, two former residents of Peterborough, now in their second year at the School, were in town to-day completing arrangements for the excursion.

A GOOD ROUND UP OF YOUNG THIEVES.

Appropriators of Tobacco and Whiskey Caught and Remanded.

At the police court this morning, Ed. Scully, Ed. Sheppard, Wm. Connors, Fremis LaPlante and Thomas Jones, pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing merchandise from C. P. R. cars during the past three months, the last offense being committed on October 4th, on which occasion the seal of a car was broken and tobacco and whiskey stolen. It is estimated that during the summer goods to the value of $200 have been appropriated, presumably by the gang who pleaded guilty this morning.

The ringleader has not yet been arrested. His name is known, as is that of several others connected with the robbery, and it is believed that others will find their way to the gaol before very long. The prisoners, all young men, were remanded for one week. The matter has been in the hands of Mr. Samuel Wright of the C.P.R., and the local police, to whom credit is due for the lucky "round up."

I know a good thing when I see it. The Snowshoe Tobacco Tags are worth money, and as I want to get a valuable present for them, I will allow you in trade 50 cents per hundred for all you have, can get, or buy. Alive Charles LeGros.

IN A NEW POSITION.

Lord Devonshire is President of Free Food League.

HE ATTACHED CONDITIONS.

Makes Some Reservations Regarding the Policy of the Government—His Lordship Cannot Promise to Take an Active Part on the Fiscal Campaign—Adverse to That Policy.

London, Oct. 17.—The Duke of Devonshire, late Lord President of the Council, has conditionally accepted the presidency of the Free Food League, which is organizing a campaign against the fiscal policy of Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Balfour.

This important move in the fiscal contest developed last night at the meeting of the Parliamentary Committee of the league, when a letter from the Duke of Devonshire to Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Mr. Ritchie's predecessor as Chancellor of the Exchequer, accepting the proffered presidency of the league upon certain conditions was read. The committee passed a resolution unanimously accepting the conditions and this action was communicated immediately to the Duke of Devonshire. The substance of the Duke's letter follows:

His Position Stated.

"You informed me when we last met, that the wish had been expressed that I join the league and take a leading part in its operations. I understand that the principal object of the league is to oppose the new departure in the fiscal policy, which now has been definitely announced, and which includes the taxation of food imports from foreign countries and preferential treatment for the colonies, as well as a general tariff on imported manufactured goods. I understand that these objects do not involve opposition to the policy of the Government in so far as that policy is limited to reserving to the Government the right of proposing to Parliament a tariff legislation for the purpose of negotiating commercial treaties and the mitigation of hostile tariffs."

Continuing the Duke of Devonshire refers to the desirability of restraining "the strongly protectionist tendencies manifested at the recent conference at Sheffield," and says the duty of combating before the country the doctrines of the tariff reform league should not be left entirely to radicals and members of the Cobden Club.

Some Conditions.

The Duke says he cannot reject the invitation of the Free Food League to become its president, although he must accept the office conditionally.

"I understood the body I am asked to join," he continued, "although bearing the name of the league is substantially a Parliamentary committee. I anticipate that you will seek to broaden its constitution with the object of extending its operations. If this is done and I am invited to accept the presidency I must ask to be consulted as to the nature of such extension, that I may have the opportunity of determining how far I feel myself in unison with the new constitution. I also ask that it be made clear that the views I have above expressed as to its attitude towards the Government are fully shared by the league. It must be also understood that such services as I could render can only be limited in character.

Not an Active Combatant.

"It is 17 years since I took an active part in the campaign against home rule. It is not in my power to take the same active part now that I took then. I must be regarded rather as adverse than a combatant. It is with some reluctance that I consent to take even a limited part in the controversy, but I feel that many Unionist members of Parliament whose ideas I believe agree with mine are making great sacrifices in order to maintain their opinions, and I am unwilling that they should regard me as indifferent to their political interests."

Mr. Ritchie, the late Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Lord George Hamilton, late Secretary of State for India, also have joined the league.

A Reorganization Proposed.

The Edinburgh Review, which is edited by the Hon. Arthur Elliott, yesterday makes a strong appeal for a reorganized Liberal Unionist party, under the leadership of the Duke of Devonshire and to include men of all parties devoted to free trade, like Mr. Ritchie and John Burns. It invites the assistance of the Independent Labor party also.

In the Middle of Road.

London, Oct. 17.—(C. A. P.)—The Times observes: "The Duke of Devonshire's speech places him in an intermediate position between Mr. Balfour and the free importers, and he only regrets that he cannot see his way to go a little further with the application of principle he accepts, for the removal of the mischief he clearly recognizes. He is not going to use the question in such a way as to wreck the Unionist Government."

Lord Aberdeen Is Against.

London, Oct. 17.—(C. A. P.)—Lord Aberdeen told the Liberal meeting at Skipton that Chamberlain's scheme would seriously impair the fraternity and friendliness of the colonies. He would rather remove the embargo against Canadian cattle, which really was a kind of protection.

England Must Change Policy.

London, Oct. 17.—(C. A. P.)—The Mail publishes a talk with Hon. Mr. Reid of Australia. He says: "England has done enough for the colonies without our demanding a price for our aid when the day of her necessity arrives. England can only maintain her trade by the same artificial, preferential, business tariffs of other nations which are around her, but they are in the very last ditch, and will be defeated and driven back by this nation when she attempts to defend herself against her conquering foes. England gained her supreme commercial position by superior technical skill and business enterprise."

English Company to Handle Food.

London, Oct. 17.—(C.A.P.)—A syndicate has been formed with a registered capital of half a million pounds to facilitate the distribution of food products throughout all parts of the Empire. Sir Gilbert Parker writes: "The possibilities of the scheme are enormous, and whatever benefits the company may reap, the Empire will reap them in greater proportion."

Would Cringe Abroad.

London, Oct. 17.—The St. James' Gazette, referring to Campbell Bannerman's speech, says he would foster the hostility of class and class at home and preserve peace by cringing abroad. He would fling back in their faces the overtures made by the colonial Premiers.

Getting Over His Gout.

London, Oct. 17.—Mr. Chamberlain is recovering from his attack of gout, and was able to leave his bedroom Thursday. Lord Milner has arrived at Birmingham, and will be his guest for a few days.

Stern in Jail.

Washington, Oct. 17.—Leopold J. Stern, the Baltimore contractor, recently indicted in connection with a postal contract, appeared in the Police Court yesterday. Judge Scott denied the request of Stern's counsel for an immediate hearing. Bail was fixed at $5,500, and Stern was committed to jail.

Watch at Jolley's Bed.

Hamilton, Oct. 17.—Tuesday is the day that has been set for Dr. Jolley to face the charge of child desertion. His name was down in the roster for today, but the police will ask for a remand. He is still in the City Hospital, but the authorities are taking no chances. At his bedside, in the private ward of the hospital, where he is being nursed by his daughter, he is guarded night and day by a policeman, whose duty it is to see that he does not make a second attempt at self-destruction or any effort to escape.

Killed by Live Wire.

St. Catharines, Oct. 17.—Albert Markle, superintendent of the Lincoln Electric Light Company, while doing repairs on St. Paul street yesterday morning, came in contact with live wires, and was almost instantly killed.

Evidence All In.

Cincinnati, Oct. 17.—The evidence was concluded and arguments were begun yesterday in the trial of Millar and Johns for alleged conspiracy to extort a bribe.

Won't Pay the Insurance.

Buffalo, Oct. 17.—The insurance companies declare that J. Fred Pennell deliberately killed his wife and himself, and won't pay the insurance.

LINDSAY WEDDING.

Mr. Louis Thexton Best Formerly of Peterborough, Married.

On Wednesday, at 2.30, at the residence of Dr. Vrooman, M.P., of Lindsay, his ward, Miss Nevada Webster, was married to Mr. Louis Thexton Best, of Sarnia. Rev. G. W. Henderson, of Cambridge street Methodist church, officiating. The maid of honour was Miss Magwood, of Toronto, who wore white silk, with transparent yoke and bertha of accordion plaited chiffon. The bridesmaid was Miss Michaelis, of Meriden, Conn., who wore white crepe de chine, trimmed with medallions and carried bouquets of golden chrysanthemum. The groomsman was Mr. Elmer Best, of Peterborough, brother of the groom. The little flower girl, Alice McFarlane, niece of the groom, accompanied by her brother, Gordon, of Peterborough, looked charming in an accordian plaited India silk, and carried a basket of yellow carnations.

The bride was beautifully gowned in cream silk organdie over white taffeta, trimmed with medallions and bertha of duchess lace. A tulle veil was prettily draped with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of roses and lillies of the valley. The bride received many beautiful presents, that of the groom being a cabinet of silver. The dainty refreshments, which came from McConkey's, Toronto, were served by two girls, friends of the bride, Miss Muriel Koyl and Miss Roberta Henderson. The house was prettily decorated with smilax, chrysanthemum and palms. The bride's going away gown was tailor made of brown broadcloth, the coat opening over a blouse of white brocaded satin and cluny lace. A brown beaver hat and ostrich feather stole completed a perfect costume.

Mr. and Mrs. Best left on the evening train for a honeymoon trip to Western points. The Post and their many friends will join in wishing the happy couple many years of happiness and prosperity."—Lindsay Post.

Those from Peterborough who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. John Best, parents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. C. D. MacFarlane and two children, and Miss Effie Best, the groom's sister. The groom is well known here, having lived in town until about a year ago, when he went to Sarnia. His many friends here extend their best wishes to him and his bride.

THANKSGIVING SERVICES.

Hearty Services at St. John's, St. Luke's and All Saints.'

Thanksgiving services were held in the different English Churches in town on Thanksgiving morning. At St. John's, the Rector, Rev. J. C. Davidson preached a helpful and appropriate Thanksgiving sermon, the whole service being on the subject of giving thanks. The choir rendered special music suitable to the occasion.

At All Saint's, the usual service was conducted, the preacher being the Rector, Rev. W. L. Armitage. The music here was also of a special nature and much enjoyed.

KEEPING GAMEY AWAY FROM THE SOO.

If He Goes There, Party Row may Ensue—Where has the Money Gone?

(London Advertiser.)

Toronto, Oct. 10.—"We must send Gamey to Muskoka, and Sault Ste. Marie," said a member of the Whitney organization committee in a down-town resort last evening. "Not on your life," came the reply from a dozen voices. "It would have paid the party much better to have had nothing to do with Gamey and his advisers. We could accomplish much good work now if we had all the money the party collected for that Gamey affair. These funds followed the protest funds, and the party suffers, while a few make big profits for no valuable service."

It was thus the discussion went on, until somebody asked. "What does Miscampbell say about Gamey going to the Sault?" "Miscampbell has not got the say," remarked a listener. "His chief supporters at the Sault will turn him down if he takes Gamey into the riding; they are not so much opposed to Gamey as they are to the "Toronto bunch," who used him to collect a handsome fund to be expended among a select few. These select fellows advised Gamey to flee to Buffalo, and thus put the blame of his failure on himself and not on them. Gamey is much better than those who advised him, and if he goes to the Sault, something will be said about those who have been handling the hundreds of thousands of dollars collected by the Opposition to turn the Grits out. Mark my words on this," said the speaker, as he became more emphatic, and as a parting shot he remarked: "The best thing for the party is to keep Gamey out of the bye-elections, for if he goes into the fight there will be more to discuss than Gamey."

It is an open secret that the influential men in the Opposition have grown weary of Gamey and his advisers. For some time it was nothing but "Gamey, Gamey," and to such an extent was this the case, that leader Whitney has had to rush frequently to Toronto to be interviewed so as to keep himself before the public if possible, for Gamey was his rival, and has not the chairman of Mr. Whitney's organization committee, Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, proclaimed, "I stand by Gamey!" This was the first indication that there was a split in the party over the Gamey episode. This outburst of loyalty to a comrade was occasioned by the fact that those who got the money were placing the blame for failure to prove the Gamey charges upon Gamey's trip to Buffalo, but the heroic words (with an occasional picnic,) "I stand by Gamey," made the man from Mentcolin assert himself. It now remains to be seen what will happen when he swoops into Sault Ste. Marie as the man who holds chief place in the minds of the mass of Conservatives in the Province of Ontario. This will give Mr. Whitney other opportunities to have himself interviewed, for Mr. Whitney must stand by Gamey and those who handled the funds to no purpose except to enrich themselves. The leading Conservative workers in the ridings are asking themselves, "Have the protest and Gamey funds made you rich?"

WESTERN CATTLE TRADE IS UNSATISFACTORY.

Some Lessons That are Being Learned by Stock Breeders.

Mr. F. W. Hodson, Dominion Live Stock Commissioner, says that at present the trade in stockers between the older provinces and the North-west Territories is in a very unsatisfactory condition and many of those who have been shipping young cattle to the North West this season have been very much disappointed in the prices realized.

Under date of September 22nd, Mr. Chas. W. Peterson, Secretary of the Territorial Live Stock Associations writes:—"Within the past week from four hundred to six hundred stockers have reached Calgary alone, and the demand here is absolutely nil. These people must either take their stock elsewhere or lose heavily."

There are several reasons for this condition of affairs. Finished cattle have been selling at unprecedentedly low prices. It is stated on good authority that the entire output of one of the largest ranches in Southern Alberta was sold at $33.50 per head, for three year old and four year old cattle. Naturally therefore, mean that paid $22.00 per head for yearlings two years ago and have sold them this season as three year olds for prices in the neighbourhood of $32.00, are not anxious to buy stockers this fall at anything like the prices prevailing for the last two or three years.

Again, winter feed is scarcer than usual on the ranches this fall; and as a consequence many of the cattlemen that usually purchase a number of stockers at this season of the year have scarcely hay enough to carry their breeding stock through the winter.

Another reason for the present unsatisfactory condition of the stocker trade not only in the Northwest but also in the older provinces, is the poor quality of a large number of the young cattle that have been placed on the market during the last few years. Many of these were as far from the right kind of raw material from which to make finished beef, as they well could be. During a period of high prices markets are not so discriminating in the quality of the goods offered, but when prices are low, markets are more sensaitive; they are more easily overstocked; buyers are more careful in making their selections, and it becomes a case of the survival of the fittest only. A high class product of any kind will always command a fair price; but on a depressed market inferior stuff may be sacrificed at prices far belwo the cost of production.

The ranchers have also discovered that they must be more careful in the selection of their bulls than heretofore, and Ontario breeders will do well to make a note of this. During recent years every bull calf that was eligible for registration was saved with a view to selling him at some sort of price for the ranches; but the ranchers have discovered that they must pay more attention to quality and breeding, and that first class bulls are cheaper at a good price than registered scrubs as a gift. It is safe to predict that in a very short time it will not be possible to sell inferior bulls to the ranchers at any price.

Slightest Symptom of Kidney Disease Should be Banished Without Delay.

Kidney-Wort Tablets

Cure Quickly and Permanently.

Lives are being sacrificed around us every day through some form of kidney disease. Notwithstanding these terrible warnings, men and women who know of the presence of brick dust deposits in the urine, and who experience pain in the small of the back, growing weakness and feelings of lassitude, go on from day to day neglecting these perilous symptoms.

Dr. Pettingill's Kidney-Wort Tablets quickly banish the warning symptoms of kidney disease, and restore the organs to health and activity. Kidney-Wort Tablets are now widely recommended by the medical profession, who value a medicine that is non-alcoholic. These tablets have effected marvellous cures for sufferers who were pronounced incurable. Try one bottle and you will be convinced of their virtues. All druggists. Price 50 cents, or six bottles for $2.50.

CHAMBERLAIN'S PREFERENCE PROPOSALS.

He Speaks at Length of the Tax on Food Imports

And Discusses the Attitude of the Colonies.

The following extracts from Mr. Chamberlain's great speech at Glasgow, on October 6th, will be read with interest;

"Now I have told you what you are to gain by preference. What will it cost you? What do the colonies ask? They ask a preference on their particular products. You cannot give them, at least it would be futile to offer them, a preference on manufactured goods, because at the present time the export manufacture of the colonies is entirely insignificant. You cannot in my opinion, give them a preference on raw material. It has been said that I should propose such a tax; but I repeat now, in the most explicit terms, that I do not propose a tax on raw materials, which are a necessity of our manufacturing trade. What remains? Food. Therefore, if you wish to have a preference, if you desire to gain this increase, if you wish to prevent separation, you must put a tax on food. Nothing that I propose, however, will add one farthing to the cost of living of the workingman, or of any family in this country. (Cheers.) Well, how is that to be achieved? I have been asked for a plan. I recognize that you have a right to call upon me for the broad outlines of my plan, and those I will give you if you will bear with me. You have heard it said that I propose to put a duty of 5s. or 10s. a quarter on wheat. I propose to put a low duty on foreign corn, and no duty at all on corn coming from the British possessions.

But I propose to put a low duty on foreign corn, not exceeding 2s a quarter. I propose to put no tax whatever on maize, partly because maize is a food of some of the very poorest of people, and also partly because it is a raw material for the farmers, who feed their pigs on it. I propose that the corresponding tax, which will have to be put on flour, should give a substantial preference to the miller. I do that in order to re-establish one of our most ancient industries in this country—(cheers)—believing that if that is done not only will more work be found in agricultural districts, with some tendency, perhaps, resulting against the constant migration from the country into the town—(cheers)—and also because by re-establishing the milling industry in this country, the offals, as they are called, the refuse of the wheat, will remain in the country, and will give to the farmers, or the agricultural population, a food for their stock and their pigs, at very much lower rates. I propose to put a small tax of about 5 per cent. on foreign meat and dairy produce. I propose to exclude bacon, because once more bacon is a popular food with some of the poorest of the population. It forms the staple food for many of the poorest of the population. And lastly, I propose to give a substantial preference to our colonies upon colonial wines, and perhaps upon colonial fruits. (Cheers.) Well, those are the taxes, new taxes, or alteration of taxes, which I propose as additions to your present burden.

But I propose also some great remissions. I propose to take off three-fourths of the duty on tea and half of the whole duty on sugar, with a corresponding reduction on cocoa and coffee.

Mr. Chamberlain, in the closing part of his speech, argued that if the foreigner sending his products into England and the consumer each paid half the duty there would be an actual decrease of two pence per week in the case of the labourer and 21-2 pence in the case of the artisan.

ATTITUDE OF COLONIES

Another reference was made to the attitude of the Colonies in the following words:—

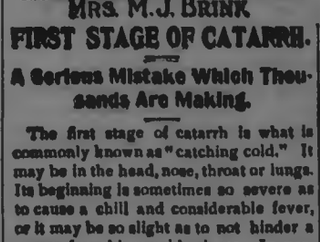
There will be, according to this plan, as I have said, no addition to the cost of living, but only a transfer of taxation from one item to another. It remains to ask what will the Colonies say? I hear it said sometimes by people who, I think, have never visited the Colonies and do not know much about them, that they receive this offer with contempt that they will spurn it, or that if they will accept it they will give nothing in return. Well, I differ from the critics. Do not do this injustice to the patriotism or the good sense of the Colonies. When the Prime Ministers, representing all the several states of the empire, were here, this was the matter of most interesting discussion. Then it was that they pressed upon the Government the consideration of this question. They did not press — It is wrong, it is wicked to say that they pressed it in any spirit of selfishness. They had no idea of exclusive benefit for themselves. No; they, with Mr. Rhodes' ideal in their minds, asked for it as a tie, a practical tie, which would prevent separation, and I do not believe that they will treat ungenerously any offer that we may now be able to make to them. (Cheers.) They have no such idea, for they have offered you a preference already. Canada has given you a preference of 33 1-3 per cent., South Africa has given you a preference of 25 per cent., New Zealand has offered a preference of 10 per cent. The Premier of Australia has promised to bring before Parliament a similar proposal. They have done all this in confidence, in faith which I am certain will not be disappointed—in faith that you will not be ungrateful, that you will not be unmindful of the influences which have weighed with them, that you will share their loyalty and devotion to an empire which is theirs as well as ours, and which they have also done something to maintain. (Cheers.)

CONSUMER PAYS THE DUTY.

Some folks appear to be surprised that Canadians have to pay the surtax that we imposed upon German goods imported. These people probably thought the German people in the goodness of their hearts would take on themselves the extra burden. In practice we can exclude goods by a duty, but the consequence is that we give the makers of the substitute goods a chance to charge us more. But if we import the German goods we pay the duties. The notion that one nation can tax another through its tariff on imports is a pleasing fallacy.—Hamilton Times.

HEALTHY WOMEN

Praise Pe-ru-na as a Cure for Colds and a Preventive of Catarrh.



MRS. M. J. BRINK

FIRST STAGE OF CATARRH.

A Serious Mistake Which Thousands Are Making.

The first stage of catarrh is what is commonly known as "catching cold." It may be in the head, nose, throat or lungs. Its beginning is sometimes so severe as to cause a chill and considerable fever, or it may be so slight as to not hinder a person from his usual business. In perhaps a majority of cases little or no attention is paid to the first stage of catarrh, and hence it is that nearly one-half of the people have chronic catarrh in some form.

To neglect a cold is to invite chronic catarrh. As soon as any one discovers the first symptoms of catching cold he should at once begin the use of Peruna according to directions on the bottle, and the cold is sure to pass away without leaving any bad effects.

Unless this is done the cold is almost sure to end in the second stage of catarrh, which is making so many lives miserable. If Peruna was taken every time one has a cold or cough, chronic catarrh would be practically an unknown disease.

Miss Elizabeth Uber, No. [illegible] street, Albany, N. Y., writes:

"I have always dreaded unsettled weather because of my extreme liability to catch cold, when a catarrhal trouble would quickly develop through my entire system, which it would take weeks to drive away. I am thankful to say that since I have taken PERUNA I do not have any reason to dread this anymore. If I have been at all exposed to the damp, wet or cold weather, I take a dose or two of PERUNA, and it throws out any hint of sickness from my system."—Miss Elizabeth Uber.

Mrs. M. J. Brink, No. 230 Michigan avenue, St. Joseph, Mich., writes:

"This past winter during the wet and cold weather I caught a sudden and severe cold, which developed a catarrhal condition through my entire system, and so affected my general health that I was completely broken down, and became nervous and hysterical and unfit to supervise my home. My physician prescribed for me, but somehow his medicine did me no good. Reading of PERUNA I decided to try it. After I had taken but three bottles I found myself in fine health."—Mrs. M. J. Brink.

Sibyl A. Hadley, 29 Main street, Huntington, Ind., writes: "Last winter after getting my feet wet I began to cough, which gradually grew worse until my throat was sore and raw. Ordinary remedies did not help me and cough remedies nauseated me. Reading an advertisement of what PERUNA could do, I decided to try a bottle, and you can imagine how glad I felt when it began to relieve me in a very short time. In less than two weeks I was completely cured."—Sibyl A. Hadley.

MISS SARA McGAHAN.

Miss Sara McGahan, No. [illegible] street, Albany, N. Y., writes:

"A few months ago I suffered with a severe attack of influenza, which nothing seemed to relieve. My hearing became bad, my eyes became irritated and feverish. Nothing seemed right and nothing I ate tasted good. I took PERUNA and within two weeks I was perfectly well."—Sara McGahan.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be glad to give you his valuable advice gratis.

(Liquozone was formerly known in Canada as Powley's Liquified Ozone.)

We Paid $100,000

For Liquozone—Yet We Give You a 50c. Bottle Free.

This company, after testing Liquozone for two years in the most difficult germ diseases, paid $100,000 for the American rights. That is by far the highest price ever paid for similar rights on any scientific discovery.

We publish this fact to show you the value of Liquozone. The most worthless product may have great claims made about it; but men don't pay a price like that save for a discovery of remarkable worth to humanity.

Kills Inside Germs.

Liquozone alone kills germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. It is so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. Liquozone destroys at once and forever the cause of any germ disease.

And there is no other way to do it. Any drug that kills germs is a poison to you, and it cannot be taken internally. Liquozone alone can attack a trouble that is caused by inside germs; and it cures diseases which medicine never cured.

Liquid Oxygen.

Liquozone is simply liquid oxygen—no drugs, no alcohol in it. It is the discovery of Paull, the great German chemist, who spent 20 years on it. His object was to get such an excess of oxygen in staple form into the blood that no germ could live in any membrane or tissue.

Liquozone does that. Oxygen is Nature's greatest tonic—the very source of vitality. Its effects are exhilarating—purifying, vitalizing. Nothing else in the world is so good for you. But germs are vegetables; and this excess of oxygen—the very life of an animal—is deadly to vegetable matter.

We spend 14 days in making each bottle of Liquozone; but the result is liquid oxygen—a product which will cure diseases which no medical skill can cure without it. It is now employed in every great hospital, and indorsed by every medical authority, the world over.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone kills the germs wherever they are, and the results are inevitable. By destroying the cause of the trouble, it invariably ends the disease, and forever.

ALLEGED MURDERER REMANDED.

New Evidence Connecting Him With Crime of The Willows.

Brantford, Oct. 17.—The hearing of Joseph Kennedy, charged with murdering Irene Cole, was continued yesterday and again adjourned till Tuesday.

Some new evidence concerning the bag and chicken was presented. The first witness to be called was Mr. Dutton, a market gardner, who said that he was in "The Willow" Tuesday a week ago, and saw a bag in some bushes some 60 rods from where the body was found and took it home. When he read the newspapers and saw that the police were looking for a bag he brought it to them.

The next witness was Mrs. Kittridge, who claimed to have seen a chicken in "The Willows" on the Thursday after the murder. The witness identified the chicken as being the one the police found.

Mr. Hobson, Colborne street, was then called. He saw a man like Kennedy on the morning of the murder. The man carried a bag and went into Mickle Dyment's lumberyard and came out and went west up Colborne street.

A Mr. Johnston, who was talking to Hobson at the time Kennedy passed, said he noticed the bag and remarked to Hobson that it contained a chicken for he heard it.

Mr. Page, who lives three doors from Potter's, stated that on the day of the murder, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, a man by the name of Fowler passed along the dyke, and that it was common to see men on the dyke.

Chief Vaughan was also on the stand, and his evidence was similar to that of the inquest at this period. The Crown asked for an adjournment till Tuesday.

BABY'S FIRST TOOTH.

Every mother knows how much baby suffers while cutting teeth. Swollen, tender gums cause a feverish, fretful condition, sometimes seriously affecting baby's health. This can be overcome, and the teething process made easy by the use of Baby's Own Tablets. Proof of this is given by Mrs. J. Peckover, of New Liskeard, Ont., who says, "I am the mother of six children, and I can truthfully say that Baby's Own Tablets are better than any other medicine I have ever used for the ills of little ones. I can especially recommend them for teething children, and would advise all mothers to use them."

The Tablets cure all the minor ills from which infants and young children suffer, and are guaranteed to contain no opiate or harmful drug. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box, by writing direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Broke Open Till.

Galt, Oct. 17.—Skipton's bookstore was robbed early yesterday morning by some expert thieves, who left no trace of how they got into or out of the premises. A skeleton key was probably used, for the windows were all closed and locked. Money was taken from the till amounting to $9.60, comprised of $2 bill, $5 in silver and 60 cents in coppers. Nothing else was taken.

Runaway at Kendall.

Kendall, Oct. 17.—George Langstaff and his nephew, aged 4, were out driving yesterday afternoon, when the horse ran away, throwing out George. His nephew, Clarence Oland, retained his place in the buggy for some distance, but was at last thrown out. His head struck the wheel. He received a bad scalp wound. The horse can't be found.

Burned to Death.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 17.—A despatch from Port Renfrew, on the Vancouver Island coast, says: Edward Hunter, a settler, has been burned to death in a fire which destroyed his cabin. Settlers found the cabin in ruins and the charred body of the occupant among the debris.

Man Found Dead.

Orillia, Oct. 17.—The body of Hiram Haight of Victoria road was found in sight feet of water alongside the town wharf yesterday morning, where it had apparently lain for five or ten days. The investigation was adjourned till Monday to permit of a post-mortem examination.

Adjourned Till To-Day.

London, Oct. 17.—The Alaskan Boundary Commission adjourned yesterday until to-day without making any announcement.

BRITISH WARSHIPS.

Cruiser and Battleship Sent to Chinese Waters.

CZAR'S WARLIKE MESSAGE.

Russian Prestige to Be Maintained by Force of Arms If Necessary—The Negotiations at Tokio, Though Critical, Are Now Reported to Be Proceeding Peacefully—Russian Squadron Moves.

London, Oct. 17.—Great Britain is sending two additional warships to China. The first-class cruiser Europa has been ordered into commission at Portsmouth, for despatch to the Chinese station, and a battleship will be sent there from the Mediterranean squadron.

Fear an Attack.

Yokohama, Oct. 17.—The Russian squadron has returned to Port Arthur. Correspondents there report that preparations have been made against an apprehended attack on the ninety-three war vessels in port. The entrance is protected by a boom of heavy logs. The negotiations at Tokio, though critical, are proceeding peacefully. America and Europe are cautioned by the officials against alarmist reports.

By Force of Arms If Necessary.

London, Oct. 17.—The Berlin correspondent of The Times says the Czar is reported to have sent the following telegram to Admiral Alexieff, the Russian Viceroy in the Far East, at Port Arthur: "I give you full power to maintain, if necessary, Russia's prestige by force of arms."

It is, however, says the correspondent, understood that neither Russia nor Japan considers her military preparations complete.

The correspondent says attempts are being made in Berlin to represent the attitude of the Japanese Government, and British public opinion, as directed by a wholesome appreciation of Russia's military and naval strength in the Far East.

FIREBUGS AT ROSSLAND, B. C.

Four Empty Buildings Fired Within Five Hours.

Rossland, B.C., Oct. 17.—An atrocious attempt was made here last night by unknown incendiaries to destroy the city. No fewer than four empty buildings were fired within five hours. The Fire Department was on hand in all cases and the fires were confined to the buildings in which they originally started. Great excitement was caused and the incendiaries will receive short shrift if they are every caught. The entire force of eight police officers is employed on the case, but the fire fiends have covered their tracks well.

$2,700 EASILY GOT.

Package of Money Snatched From the Postmaster's Hand.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 17.—The boldest highway robbery known in eastern Canada was committed on Wednesday night, when, without striking a blow or using any violence, a man snatched from the hands of the postmaster of Port Greville, N. S., a seaport town on the Bay of Fundy, a parcel containing $2,700. There is no clue to the thief.

Another Hunting Fatality.

Exeter, Oct. 17.—A sad shooting fatality occurred near Sodam, about four miles from Exeter. Silas Stanlake, jr., and others were out rabbit hunting. Mr. Stanlake had shot a rabbit and was going to start for home. He cocked both barrels to take out the remaining cartridge. One of the locks was defective. The hammer went down and the gun was discharged. The contents went into the abdomen of John H. Smith, son of John Smith of Sodam, who died almost instantly. Mr. Stanlake did not see the boy, he having come through a thicket unobserved. He is heart-broken over the accident.

RAILWAYS AND CANALS.

About $8,000,000 Voted in the House—Date of Prorogation.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—Another solid day in supply leaves the only supplementary estimates to be disposed of a few scattering items in the 80-page blue book. The committee passed yesterday no less than $3,107,177, chiefly for railways and canals, the largest vote being $1,834,344 for the Intercolonial, and $577,000 for the Prince Edward Island Railway. Yesterday's rapid progress reduces the visible business for the House considerably, and a week from to-day is spoken of in official circles as the date of prorogation.

Rights of Municipalities.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—A private conference took place yesterday morning between representatives of the cities of Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa, and of the Canadian Union of Municipalities and the Prime Minister. The interview had reference to certain amendments made to the Railway Act by the Senate, which the House of Commons has refused to accept. One of these guards against the federalization of branch and provincial railways, including electric street railways and tramways, except in respect of crossings, or connections and through traffic. Another amendment prevents railways that go into the transmission of light, heat and power from erecting poles, wires and conduits, except with the consent of the municipality affected.

The First Carnegie Library.

Windsor, Oct. 17.—The new Carnegie library was formally opened last evening. Windsor was the first city in the Dominion to receive the gift of a library from Andrew Carnegie, his offer having been received on Feb. 15, 1901. The building was erected at a cost of $27,000. It is in classic style of architecture, finished in shades of brick. It possesses an auditorium which has a seating capacity of 300. Among those who addressed the audience besides the Hon. Richard Harcourt, who was the speaker of the evening, were Senator Casgrain, Mr. R. F. Sutherland, M.P., Dr. Beaume, M.P.P., and Mayor Drake.

To Those Not Well

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

On 30 Days' Trial.

For a full month you can use my Restorative,
I to take the entire risk.
Not a free gift. Neither is it philanthropy.
Not Something for nothing.
Just this—

I have found a way to cure even deep-seated, difficult or peculiar diseases. Dr. Shoop's Restorative cures by a new method. It goes direct to the cause of disease—the inside nerves. I am the only physician that treats this way—through these nerves.

It is my discovery, my prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—that does this so surely, is so certain, that I am able to say to the sick one, use it a month and see for yourself. That would prove my confidence. You see, I know what it can do. I take less risk though, than you would believe.

My past records show that I failed in only one case out of each forty. Just think of that, 39 paid, and paid gladly, and the fortieth had no expense. That is a record I am proud of.

How to Secure Trial Treatment.

Write me and simply ask for the book you need. A postal will do, or sign the coupon.

Then I will arrange with a druggist near you, so that you can secure six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Restorative to make the test. Send me no money. You go to your druggist, remember.

Use the Restorative a full month—then decide. If it succeeds the cost to you is $5.50, if it fails I will have the druggist bill the cost to me. Could anything be more fair?

To delay means to forget. Write now, while you have it in mind. This is important.

CAUSTIC GENERAL HUTTON.

Rebukes Critics Who Say Drill and Discipline Are Unnecessary.

Melbourne, Oct. 16.—After inspecting the local troops at Rockhampton, Major-General Sir Edward Hutton administered a rebuke to those irresponsible persons who have been expressing the opinion that drill and discipline were unnecessary for the fighting man. The general said that some foolish persons had come from South Africa and thought that because they had there galloped about in an aimless sort of way and at times closed with the Boers and done excellent service under highly experienced officers—the best officers the Imperial army could produce—they were justified in saying that drill and discipline could be done without. These persons who said so were ignorant people.

Ran a Nail Through His Hand.

While opening a box, J. C. Mount, of Three Mile Bay, N.Y., ran a ten penny nail through the fleshy part of his hand. "I thought at once of all the pain and soreness this would cause me," he says, "and immediately applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm and occasionally afterwards. To my surprise it removed all pain and soreness and the injured parts were soon healed. For sale by all druggists.

Four Deaths by Fire.

Tacoma, Wn., Oct. 17.—A destructive fire raged yesterday at Aberdeen. A special to The News says that the blaze started in the Dix block, and that the three principal business blocks had been totally destroyed, including the opera house, hotel, two banks, and one hundred business houses. Four fatalities have been reported. The total loss is placed at $1,000,000.

Says It Is Untrue.

London, Oct. 17.—The Associated Press has the highest authority for saying that the announcement made by The London Morning Advertiser yesterday, that the decision of the Alaskan Boundary Commission virtually concedes the American case, is entirely untrue.

Miner Was Poisoned.

Dawson, Oct. 17.—F. W. Hodenkirck, who is suffering from strychnine poisoning, is doing well, according to the latest reports, and will probably recover. Hubert Weisner is under arrest on suspicion of having administered the poison.

Talking to Pussy About DIAMOND DYES.

"Mamma and I have just dyed two faded dresses and a jacket with Diamond Dyes, and they look as good as new. Mamma says the Diamond Dyes are always reliable and true."

FROM ATLANTIC TO PACIFIC.

Mackenzie & Mann Will Complete Their Railway Line.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 17.—Mr. D. D. Mann of Mackenzie & Munn, who has been looking into his firm's enterprises in Nova Scotia, left yesterday for Toronto. Speaking to your correspondent, he said: "There is no truth in the report that we have decided to abandon our project of a transcontinental road. It is our intention to have a line from the Atlantic to the Pacific. I cannot say just when we will be able to carry out this project to a finish, but it has always been our object to connect the east with the west. We hope to connect our Nova Scotia system with that of the west. The charter which was granted us by the Government last winter was secured with that end in view. We have not definitely decided on a route. We will first send out an exploring party. Country Harbor is spoken of as the Atlantic terminus."

WORRIED OVER THREATS.

Officials Fear Destruction of Property by Unpaid Men.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 17.—The officials of the Michigan Lake Superior Power Company are more worried than they will admit over threats which have recently been uttered openly by the former employes of the company. These men, who number about 120, are better educated than those who caused the disturbances on the other side of the river. Every night men are seen around the power house and head gates, and some of them when stopped by the watchmen have not hesitated to say that, unless they are paid soon they will do damage which will be irretrievable to the company. In consequence of this the officials of the company have strengthened the guards at the power house head gates and along the canal, and every precaution is being taken to prevent any disaster.

Davey Accidentally Drowned.

Lindsay, Oct. 17.—The coroner's inquest into the death of Albert Davey, the hermit of Emily Creek, who was drowned in Sturgeon Lake on Monday last, returned a finding of accidentally drowned. Mrs. Walker, a store-keeper at Sturgeon Point, said that Davey had about $200 in bills on his person when he left for home, and that they were not found on the body. Members of the Rathbun Camp, near Fenelon Falls, said that they heard him singing for a long time after he had left the camp.

Scrawny People,

People grow thin, scrawny, pale and weak when the blood is thin and watery. What is needed to round off the angles and fill out the form, is not fat but healthy muscular tissue. By enriching the blood and increasing its nourishing qualities Dr. Chase's Nerve Food adds new flesh and tissue to the body as well as new vigour and energy. You can prove this by noting your increase in weight while using this great cure.

Found Dead in Quarry.

Guelph, Oct. 17.—The body of a man named John Stein, a resident on Waterloo avenue, was found yesterday morning about 7 o'clock in Kennedy's quarry. It is evident that the deceased, while returning from a friend's about 10.30 on Thursday night, fell over the precipice into the quarry, a distance of 25 feet. His back was broken and the skull badly injured. Mr. Stein was about 70 years of age, and a shoemaker by trade. He had lived here for about 12 years.

Miss Horace Smith.

Of Miss Horace Smith, who died recently at Brighton, England, The London Athenaeum says: "Her grandfather had hunted with Louis XV.; her uncle had shot Dr. Johnson, and she herself was probably the last person living who remembered Keats, having seen, as a child, the poet in her father's garden at Fulham. Among her early memories was that of being taken into the Princess Charlotte's carriage. Although she steadfastly declined to be interviewed or to put her recollections into print, she was famous among her friends for her store of anecdote and animated flow of conversation. To her father, of 'Rejected Addresses' fame, she owed her youthful acquaintance with many of the celebrities of the time, and she inherited his warm friendship with Thackeray, with whose daughter, Mrs. Ritchie, she was intimate to the last. To him she is said to have suggested the plot of 'Pendennis.'"

ANNIVERSARY OF GEORGE STREET GUILD

To be Held To-morrow and on Monday.

About one year ago the Young Men's Guild of George street church was organized with twelve members, and the first year of its existence has been a most successful one. The membership has grown until it is now well on to fifty. The meetings have been well attended, and the young men have evidenced an increasing interest in the work of the Guild. To-morrow the first anniversary services will be held. The service in the evening will be one especially for young men. The pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson will preach a sermon to young men, and the musical service will be rendered by a male choir under the direction of Mr. G. W. Mulligan.

The anniversary services will be continued on Monday when a fowl supper will be held in the Sunday School room. This supper is under the sole charge of the young men, who will do the serving, and all arrangements in connection with the supper will be carried out by them.

Following the supper a programme will be given in the church, when a musical and literary entertainment will be given, also by the young men of this and other churches.

Rev. J. P. Wilson will give a short address on the work of the Young Men's Guild.

THE MATTHEWS COMPANY BUYS BRANTFORD PLANT.

The Geo. Matthews Company, of Peterborough have just effected an important purchase in Brantford. They have bought the plant of the Farmers' Co-operative Packing Company, and will at once fit the plant up and operate it. This is a comparatively new concern, and is in good condition, having only been in operation a few months. As the name of the Company indicates, it was a joint stock company composed of farmers. The project did not prove to be a very successful one, however, and for some little time it has been closed down. It will now be re-opened immediately and under the management of the Matthews Company there is every reason to believe that it will be more fortunate than under that which previously characterized it. This property has been held for some time by one of the banks of the city.

A QUIET WEDDING.

Mr. W. G. McClellan Married to Miss McAlpine at Wellington.

A very quiet wedding took place on Thursday at the Hotel Wellman, Wellington, when Miss Mabel Leonore McAlpine, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. McAlpine, of Lindsay, was married to Mr. W. G. McClellan. The wedding was to have taken place yesterday at Lindsay, and would have been a large and fashionable affair, but owing to the sudden and serious illness of Mr. McClellan, who was attacked with pneumonia last Friday, the date was immediately postponed. As Mr. McClellan was not so well yesterday, he desired the marriage to take place immediately, and in the presence of the parents of the couple it was solemnized, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McClellan, of Peterborough, being there. The bride and groom have the sympathy of their many friends, and their prayers and good wishes for a speedy recovery and much future happiness.—Globe.

LITERARY EVENING OF T. A. S. LADIES' SOCIETY.

First Entertainment of Season Last Night in Lecture Hall.

Last night the opening meeting of the Ladies' Literary Association of St. Peter's T.A.S. was held in the Lecture Hall of the Society, and if the subsequent meetings of the Association are as successful as was the first, the season will be a most profitable one. The President of the Association, Miss Cahill, presided over the meeting at which there was a very good attendance. The president in opening the meeting briefly outlined the aims and objects of the Association, which are, the mental and social development of its members and the inculcation of the principles of temperance into the lives of all with whom they may associate. The plan of work to be adopted during the coming season was outlined, and it promises to be one of especial merit. The programme for the evening was then taken up, and was as follows:—

Piano solo ... ...Miss Nora Coughlin
Vocal solo ... ...Miss Annie Simons
Instrumental duet—Piano, Miss Alma Picard; Violin, Miss Albina Picard.

The next fortinghtly literary meeting of the Association will be held on Friday, Oct. 30th, when a paper will be read by Miss M. A. O'Connell, on "Daniel O'Connell," and the indications are that the evening's programme will be one of especial interest.

Mr. J. H. Hendry of Carleton Place to Remove to Peterborough.

The Carleton Place Herald, is the authority for the statement that Mr. J. H. Hendry of that town, is to be given charge of the Auburn Mills here. The following is the paragraph referring to it:

"Mr. J. H. Hendry, who has been manager of the Canada Woollen Mills here for some time, left on Saturday night for Peterborough, to take charge of the Auburn mills. The Gillies mill here is running still, but it is expected to close in a few days. The water power is not sufficient to run the mills on account of the flume giving out, and the management claim that the present condition of the woollen market does not warrant the expenditure necessary to restore the decayed framework."

THANKSGIVING CONCERT.

A Successful Affair at the Stewart Hall.

A Thanksgiving entertainment was given on Thursday at Stewart Hall, Otonabee, when Miss Kerr, the president of the Young People's Society, presided, while Rev. J. A. Wilson and Rev. J. G. Potter, gave addresses along Thanksgiving lines. The programme was purely a literary and musical one, while the concert was a complete success, there being a large attendance.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURE.

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Kindly allow me space to say to the public, that although the Brethren of the Gospel meeting placed the notice of their meetings over the card for the Christian Science lecture, and hid it from public view on Thanksgiving Day; and though said lecture card has since been torn down, our lecture will be delivered as announced in your columns.

Respectfully yours,
R. J. TODD.

Mr. Langfeldt at Orillia.

Rev. E. A. Langfeldt preached at Orillia last Sunday, and that his sermons were appreciated is evident from the following item taken from the Orillia Packet: "Rev. E. A. Langfeldt of Peterborough, preached in St James church on Sunday, both morning and evening. His sermons were of quite unusual power. His morning exposition on "The Doctrine of Individual Responsibility," was masterly in the fullest and highest sense of the word. It was based on the text, "Every man must bear his own burden," and set forth evangelical truth with exceptional depth of thought and force of logic. His evening discourse also was characterized by eloquence that comes from a thorough knowledge and careful observances of the niceties of the English language."

ANOTHER ACCIDENT BY GUN DISCHARGE.

Son of Mr. Geo. H. Giroux the Victim This Time.

Another accident has been added to the already long list of those caused by the accidental discharge of firearms. The victim of this accident is the second son of Mr. George H. Giroux, Stewart street. Yesterday afternoon, he with a son of Mr. Fred Haskill were together on the street, carrying a rifle. He was sportively poking his companion about the body and legs, and the weapon discharged, the ball entering Giroux's leg, and passing completely through it. The services of Dr. Bradd were at once secured and the wound thoroughly cleansed and dressed. The boy is to-day resting easily, and it is not anticipated that any serious results will accrue from the accident.

This is but another evidence of the folly of allowing firearms to be in the possession of young persons.

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Katherine Hume, 63 Union street, Laurence, Mass., when her second eldest daughter, Helen, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert J. Lang.

Miss Alida L. Hume, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Mr. Ernest R. Pringle, was the best man.

UNION SERVICE OF THANKSGIVING

Held in George Street Church on Thursday Morning.

The Union Thanksgiving Service, held in the George street church, on Thursday forenoon, was well attended, and the service was a most appropriate one. Rev. J. P Wilson, the pastor, had charge of the service, and seated on the platform with him were: Rev. Dr. Torrance, Rev. J. A. Wilson, Rev. J. G. Lewis, Rev. J. Bastow and Rev. A. H. Brace.

The service was opened by the pastor of the church, and after singing a hymn, Rev. J. A. Wilson offered the opening prayer. The Scripture lesson was read by Rev. J. Bastow, Rev. Dr. Torrance announcing the second hymn. The sermon was delivered by Rev. A. H. Brace, of the Park street Baptist church, and the subject was one appropriate to the occasion. The speaker dealt with the different phases of the reasons for Thanksgiving, reviewing the matter from a national, social and personal standpoint. The nation had great cause for thankfulness, because there had just been gathered in the most bountiful harvest in the history of the country, and there was a universal feeling of satisfaction at the prosperous condition of the nation. Looking at it from a social standpoint there was again abundant cause of gratitude. The social condition of our country was far superior to that of many other less favoured countries. The different sections are working in peace and harmony and the great social strife which is noticeable in some nations is entirely unknown here. Then from the personal view-point, our lives had been spared, and many individual blessings had been bestowed upon us, for all of which a deep sense of thankfulness should be felt.

Rev. J. G. Lewis announced the closing hymn. The offering was in aid of the operations of the Charity Board, and was a liberal one. During the service Mr. G. W. Mulligan sang a solo. The choir of the church was assisted by members of the different choirs in town.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

SOME ARRANGEMENT should be made for sweeping our walks. The ladies can't be depended upon to continue the services in this direction that they have in the past rendered and still render. Dame fashion has set her heart on short skirts and the ladies will all wear them.

• • •

THE SAD FREQUENCY of accidents from fire arms suggests the necessity of public opinion arousing itself in united protest. There is no doubt that in these cases, as in the case of the majority of so-called accidents, carelessness is the immediate cause, though the frequency of fire-arms allowed in the hands of inexpert and criminally careless persons is the primary cause. Three fatal gun accidents reported in the papers in one day, and another in our very midst indicates the necessity of strong sentiment being aroused on the subject. We have too many firearms scattered about within reach of the young and in the hands of viciously careless persons — far more than are needed. It is claimed by many that fire-arms are a necessity for personal protection and protection of homes, yet if the fatalities and accidents occurring every year were tabulated we should find that many more—ten or perhaps fifty—persons are killed by accident or carelessness or the operations of the didn't-know-it-was-loaded fool, to one case of a fire-arm being used for purposes of protection of person or property. Our law forbidding the carrying of deadly weapons should be more vigourously enforced and extended. It should be made a criminal offence for any person to leave firearms about accessible to children, and lads should be restrained in the use of guns.

• • •

ANY HOLIDAY almost we may see scores of young lads with gun on shoulder sallying forth to the woods and shooting on the way any live thing they can hit, even our beautiful song and insectivorous birds. Thus the birds that make our groves tuneful and that destroy the insects that prey upon the pests of the field and garden are destroyed and the fight against insect pests rendered more difficult. Even on Sundays the pop of firearms may be heard in Jackson Park and complaints of residents in the vicinity of narrow escapes from stray bullets, are frequent. Cannot something be done by the authorities to lessen this evil? "O, let the boys have their fun!" It will take an infinite amount of "fun" to compensate for the loss of a human life, or both of the great destruction of bird life.

• • •

ANOTHER WARNING. In our news columns is recorded another shooting accident. A boy, contrary to the statute, had a small loaded rifle which had not scarce to use, and was fooling with it, thrusting the muzzle of it, knowing it was loaded, against the person of a companion—sometimes against the body opposite vital parts and then in the legs. Finally the charge exploded, and the lad was shot through the leg. It was only a mercy that prevented explosion where the results would have been fatal. Haven't parents had enough warning to justify them in keeping the deadly gun out of their boys' hands? Haven't the authorities had enough warning to justify action? Within a week or two the house where the wounded lad resides has had several windows—heavy plate glass—broken by stray bullets, and there are similar cases in other parts of the town. Will the police wake up and punish every infraction of the law against carrying the easy possibility of accidental murder—loaded firearms—? Two such accidents in two days should give us pause. Half the men that carry guns haven't sense enough to use them properly and what can be expected of boys?

• • •

ANOTHER THING that needs to be looked after is the neglect to properly protect the public by providing red lamps at street openings for sewer and other purposes. A letter yesterday referring to this, was called forth by the near happening of a most serious accident. The contractor should see that his employees provide red lights, but that is not enough—the police or the town should see that the contractor does his duty, for in case of accident, loss of life, or painful injury, the town is ultimately responsible. But there should be no responsibility incurred, in addition to the responsibility of seeing that lights are provided for street excavations and other dangerous places.

• • •

THE SUBJECT of the town's relations to contractors, in respect of lights, suggests that the town deals altogether too leniently with contractors, or drafts contracts too loosely. We spend large sums to improve streets, and then some contractor breaks them up, and his contract requires that he leave the street on the completion of his work "in the same condition he found it." Is this ever done? Never! A line of sewer is left covered with a sinuous stretch of rough mounds, covered with large stones, making the street in the middle impassable, until in the course of a year or so, the council spends a big sum of our hard-earned taxes to do what the contractor has already been paid to do. This is quite wrong. The specifications should be carried out. In tendering for sewers or other works, the contractor figures on the cost of leaving the street in good shape, and tenders accordingly. If he is allowed to scamp that part of the work his profits are increased at the expense of the ratepayers, and and the public service. Either leave such a stipulation out of the contract and get a cheaper rate, or insist on the conditions being complied with. If a statement were prepared showing the amount spent by the town in doing work the contractors have been paid to do, it would mount up into the thousands.

• • •

ANOTHER CONTRIBUTION to the musical discussion is represented by the letter in another column. The discussion is timely for it seems that there is at present a lack of what should predominate in choirs in both a musical and organization sense—harmony. The discussion that has taken place in these columns is general. It has no specific reference, for the writers of the different letters write from the standpoint of association with different church choirs. It will do good if it sets choirs and church officials to thinking, which may lead to a more earnest effort to place all our church choirs upon a sound basis to the end of thir serving the purpose for which they should exist—"Singing with the spirit and understanding also."

MAGNIFICENT COLOURS FOR 57TH REGIMENT

The Ladies are Again Successful and Will Present New Colours to the Volunteers.

The 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, are to have a truly magnificent stand of colours, to replace the old set, which have now succumbed to the effects of the battle and the breeze.

At a meeting of the ladies of the town, called, on the request of some of the weaker sex, by Mayor Roger, officers were elected, and a movement set on foot to attempt to undertake to present the local volunteers with new colours. A fund for voluntary subscriptions was opened and in the columns of the Examiner from time to time the names of the subscribers were published. It was resolved that the order be placed with an English firm, which was done, the design having been chosen on Wednesday, at a meeting of the executive.

There will be two flags, one a Union Jack, with regimental device worked in the centre, while the other, a blue Ensign, with a beaver on each corner, saving, of course, where the Union Jack is worked, and the device motto in the centre.

The device is a beaver, under which are the numerals "LVII," encircled by a scroll or garter clasped by a buckle, and bearing the designation "Peterborough Rangers." The whole is surmounted by a wreath of maple leaves, entwined with the Rose, Thistle and Shamrock, and surmounted with the Imperial crown. Underneath the motto is "Quis Separabit."

Animals' Eyes Act Independently.

The eyes of an animal can only work together when they can be brought to bear upon an object at the same time, so that as a rule the eyes of a fish must work more or less independently. This is sometimes also the case when the eyes can co-operate, as any one who watches a plaice or other flat fish in an aquarium will soon discover.

This is true, too, of the curious bulging optics of a chameleon, which roll round swivelwise in a somewhat aimless manner. When they do converge it is bad for the insect upon which they fix themselves.

Many animals possess more than three eyes, which do not all act together. A leech, for example, has ten eyes on the top of its head, which do not work in concert, and a kind of marine worm has two eyes on the head and a row down each side of the body. Some lizards have an extra eye on the top of the head, which does not act with the other two. A bee or wasp has two large compound eyes, which possibly help each other and are used for near vision, and also three little simple eyes on the top of the head, which are employed for seeing things a long way off.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. BLAIR.

The "Cox Can't Wait" Expression From Ex-Minister's Point of View.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—Hon. A. G. Blair was asked Wednesday what he had to say in respect to Senator Cox's remark that he was awaiting an apology or explanation for the sentence used by Mr. Blair, "Cox can't wait."

The ex-Minister thought a minute and then replied: "No, I have no apology to make nor explanation to offer. If Senator Cox says he wasn't pressing the Government in connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific matter, if he can truthfully affirm that he didn't urge the construction of the road, then he might claim very fairly that I ought not to have made use of his name in my remarks in the House of Commons when the bill was under consideration.

"But," and Mr. Blair paused for a minute, "I don't apprehend that the Senator will deny anything of the kind. I reiterate that I do not see that there is anything for me to explain or apologize for. A similar remark might truthfully be applied to almost everyone who is urging the Government to aid the scheme; and I do not see just why it should be regarded as a reflection upon his integrity to say he could not wait. Promoters are not often willing to wait if they can help it."

CAMPAIGN OPENS.

Prominent Liberals Hold Initial Meeting at the Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Oct. 16.—The first meeting of the bye-election campaign in the Soo was held last night with C. N. Smith, the Liberal candidate; James Conmee and W. J. Hill, ex-member for West York, the speakers. The opera house, in which it was held, was nearly filled.

A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM.

Rheumatism is caused by acid in the blood. That is an undisputed medical truth. Liniments, outward applications and alleged electric treatment can never cure what is rooted in the blood. A blood disease like rheumatism must be cured through the blood. That is why rheumatism always yields like magic to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—they actually make new, rich, red blood. This new blood conquers the painful poison, sweeps out the aching acid, soothes the nerves, loosens the muscles and banishes rheumatism from the system. Proof of this is found in the case of Mr. Charles Leatherdale, a popular young druggist's assistant of Tilbury, Ont. He says: "I know from personal experience that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure rheumatism, because they cured me of a severe attack that for months caused me many sleepless nights and painful days. I had tried a number of other medicines, but they failed. Then I decided to give the pills a trial. Before I had finished the second box the pains began to leave me, and by the time I had taken two more boxes the pains were all gone, and I felt like a new man. That is more than six months ago and I have not had a twinge of rheumatism since. It is my belief that a fair course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will drive the most stubborn case of rheumatism out of the system, and as a result of my own experience I cheerfully recommend them for this trouble."

The pills cure all blood and nerve troubles such as rheumatism, sciatica, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, anaemia, neuralgia, indigestion, headaches, backaches, kidney troubles, and the ailments that make the lives of so many women a source of almost constant misery. Imitations and substitutes are sometimes offered, and the buyer should see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is printed on the wrapper around every box. If in doubt send direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be mailed at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

AUSTRALIA'S FORCES.

Their Unification Proceeding Under Gen. Hutton's Plan Into Federal Army.

The Melbourne correspondent of The Chronicle writes regarding the unification of the Australian military forces that what General Hutton has obtained the Government's assent to is practically this: The complete organization of (1) a mobile field force capable of being sent anywhere in Australia at short notice, and (2) a garrison force designed to defend the vulnerable spots in each State. Both these forces are composed of volunteers or militia acting under the instructions of some 1,500 professional soldiers who form the nucleus of artillery and garrisons required for fixed defences, the technical direction of forts and mines and a military tuition staff. The Australian field force will consist on a peace footing of 18,911 men and sixty guns, capable of expansion in time of war to 26,533 men and eighty-four guns. The garrison force will be composed of 11,896 men and twenty-six guns, exclusive of the rifle clubs, which now total over 30,000 men. Taking the two forces and the rifle clubs together it will be possible for Australia to put in the field or at her forts in time of war at least 68,000 trained men, made up, approximately, as follows:

Field force	26,500
Garrison force	11,900
Rifle clubs	30,000
	68,400

With a physically fit manhood population of 700,000 to draw upon, the 68,400 trained men would become the backbone of an army of half a million should invasion actually occur.

For the purposes of broad generalization the Federal army now stands divided into eighteen regiments of Australian Light Horse, thirteen batteries of Australian artillery, three field companies of Australian Engineers, and twelve regiments (three brigades) of Australian Infantry. Each arm is given an excess of officers in proportion to the peace establishment of privates. Peace cadres, with their full complement of trained officers and non-commissioned officers can therefore on mobilization in time of national emergency be expended to war requirements without any danger of crisis through lack of efficient leaders.

New Governor of Australia.

Lord Northcote, G.C.I.E., C.B., at present Governor of Bombay, who has been appointed to succeed Lord Tennyson on his relinquishing the appointment of Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia in December next, was born in 1826, and has had a varied political and diplomatic career. The second son of the first Earl of Iddesleigh, he was educated at Eton and Merton College, Oxford, taking his B.A. degree in 1869, and M.A. in 1873. At the age of 22 he became a clerk in the Foreign Office, and in 1871 was attached to Lord Ripon's special mission to arrange the Alabama treaty. In that and the next year he was secretary to Queen Victoria's Claim Commission under the treaty of Washington. He was private secretary to Lord Salisbury on his embassy to Constantinople in 1876-77, being appointed third secretary in the diplomatic service in the former year. From 1877-80 he was private secretary to the Chancellor of the Exchequer; from June, 1885-86, Financial Secretary to the War Office; Surveyor-General of Ordnance from July, 1886, until the abolition of that office in the following year, and a charity commissioner (unpaid) 1891-92. For nineteen years onwards from 1880 he sat as M.P. for Exeter in the Conservative interest, and was appointed to the post he now vacates in 1900. Lord Northcote, who was created a Baronet in the year of Queen Victoria's first Jubilee, was elevated to the Peerage on taking up his duties in Bombay. He married, in 1873, the adopted daughter of Lord Mountstephen.

Wordsworth's Ways.

The worthies of Wordsworth's village in the lake country of England had their own ideas of his value as a man and a poet. When questioned after his death as to his personality, they readily admitted that he was kind to those who were in sickness or need. They could count on him on a pinch. But he did not hob-nob with his neighbors.

"He did not notice them much," said an old man, in answer to questions asked by the author of "Lake Country Sketches."

"A Jem Crow and an auld blue cloak was his rig," continued the old man. "And as for his habits, he had noan. Niver knew him with a pot i' his hand or a pipe i' his mouth."

After deep probing the author brought out:

"Yes, Wordsworth was fond of a good dinner at times, if you could get him to it; that was t' job."

Then the poet's aloofness was again touched upon.

"He was forever pacing the roads and his own garden walks, and always composing poetry. He was ter'ble throng in visitors and folks ye mun ken at times, but if he could get awa fra them a spell, he was out upon his walk.

"And then he would set his head a bit forrad, and put his hands behint his back. And then he would start a bumming, and then it was bum, bum, bum, and go on bumming for long enough, right down and back again. I suppose, ye ken, the bumming helped him out a bit."

The Wolcott Adventist.

George Stuart, the well-known Wolcott Adventist, is dead. Mr. Stuart several times predicted the end of the world and each time had so much confidence in his prediction that he climbed a tall poplar tree near his home and there awaited the final smash-up. In spite of such a succession of alarms, Mr. Stuart seems to have looked forward to the end of things with equanimity. At least he had reached the ripe old age of 92 before death finally overtook him.

What Did the Student Mean?

Once upon a time Prof. Wilson, of Edinburgh, wrote on the blackboard in his laboratory:—"Prof. Wilson informs his students that he has this day been appointed honorary physician to the Queen." In the course of the morning he had occasion to leave the room, and found on his return that a student had added to the announcement the words: "God save the Queen."

PROMISES MADE BY RUSSIA.

Must Be Fulfilled or Japan Will Fight the Bear.

London, Oct. 16.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Tokio Wednesday says:

"Important Cabinet meetings were held yesterday and to-day, and the impression in well-informed circles is that Japan will insist upon Russia's fulfillment of her promises. The newspaper criticism is quiet but insistent. The Nichi-Nichio, the most popular paper, believes the St. Petersburg Government is innocent of the bellicose actions of the Russian agents in the Orient. It urges, however, the necessity for precaution, because the ambition of Russian agents not infrequently precipitates hostilities.

The Jiji, also an influential paper, maintains that the only hope of peace lies in Russia's fulfilment of her promises."

WHAT'S THE PARTITION?

During the summer of 1900 my doctor treated me for liver complaint, but instead of getting better I was gradually getting worse.

"My appetite was very irregular and I would bloat very much after eating. I also had palpitation of the heart, and sometimes I could not sleep at all at night on account of my heart beating so hard.

"I was hardly able to get around when I commenced using Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. After using half a box I felt much better. Continuing their use I was soon entirely well and have had good health ever since."

This statement is made by Mr. A. D. Miller, of Pusey, Haliburton Co., Ont. It needs no comment. It tells run down, worn out people to get their stomachs put in working order by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets, and they will feel like new men and women.

The Embargo Stays on.

London, Oct. 16.—A deputation of Scotch farmers met Lord Onslow, President of the Board of Agriculture, at Edinburgh yesterday and tried to induce him to promise the removal of the restriction on the importation of Canadian cattle into Great Britain. His Lordship declared this to be impracticable. He approved of the Government's policy of a general restriction of cattle importation and thought it should be adhered to.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough begins, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance, and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

Before Fixing the Tariff.

London, Oct. 16.—(C. A. P.)—Mr. Chamberlain, replying to the question whether it was his intention to tax yarns spun into thread and leather, said that an expert committee would collect evidence from manufacturers before fixing the tariff. The committee is to take into consideration the special circumstances of each trade.

WITENAGEMOT AGAIN

CANADA'S PARLIAMENTARY REQUIREMENTS WOULD THUS BE SERVED.

Question of Fresh Air Without Draughts in the House of Commons—A Semi-Humorous View of the Situation—Where Mr. Charlton Fell Down in Constructive Criticism—Picture of Out-Door Parliament.

The able Mr. Fuller, who planned the Parliament Building at Ottawa, did great things for the photographers. The much-talked-of Capitol at Washington cannot compare with the stately pile on that hill—when outward appearance is considered. Nature did her part, for she furnished the site, while, twenty-odd miles from the city, she had kept in readiness down through the ages a quarry of splendidly soft-tinted stone. When the last workman had driven the last rivet in the wrought iron finial of the main tower, there stood forth a glorious pile. Forty years ago the Legislators and those who helped to do the work of Parliament were not, as Hon. James Sutherland puts it, "much on ventilation." Fresh air was not so much sought after as it is to-day, but it did not take long for the inhabitants of the building to discover that they had headaches—in the wintertime, catarrhs, colds and rheumatics. Then they knew that there was something wrong with the ventilation. The big furnaces, consuming numberless piles of cord-wood, added to the supply of hot air furnished by the Parliamentarians. When the furnaces were in full blast, the atmosphere was thick enough to cut with a knife. Men who came to Parliament ruddy-cheeked and healthful became the prey of all kinds of diseases and physical worriments when the windows were kept closed. When they demanded the opening of the windows, the other fellows resolutely refused, as they said, to die of pneumonia. Things were in an awful state when some genius devised a system of cold air ducts. Through an immense zinc pipe, five feet in diameter, the pure mountain air was pumped and led to the cornice under the galleries. There it flowed through a cunningly fashioned iron grillage into the Council Chamber of the nation.

This was all very ingenious, but the newspapermen began to make a mighty kick. That grill work was just on a level with the napes of their necks as they sat scribbling away in their cock-loft. They had—even for such a stiff-necked generation—difficulty in turning their heads from side to side. They showed their troubles in the distinct falling off in their work, and they protested to the Minister of Public Works of the day. Not a thing would he do for them, mainly because he did not know how any change could be made. The air in the Chamber has continued vitiated to this day, and thus it is that every session there is an afternoon hour of protest against the atmosphere. John Charlton, the other day, demanded more and purer air, to which the Deputy Speaker replied with heat that Mr. Charlton put in mighty few days in the House per session.

Though Mr. Charlton dealt sledge-hammer blows at the evil, he fell down on constructive criticism. Why did he not suggest a remedy for the present condition of things when there was one ready to his hand? asks Day by Day in Toronto News. He is the rough rider of legislation. He should have proposed that Parliament hold its sittings in the open air. Right at the top of that flight of steps leading to the main entrance the Speaker's estrade could be placed. On the steps themselves the members of the Cabinet, and perhaps R. L. Borden and his aides could roost. Down on the broad lawn and walk, seated on comfortable camp chairs, the ordinary members could bestow themselves. Perhaps the Government could afford a tent, or, if the state of the national finances would not permit of such expenditure, each Parliamentarian might be presented with a Japanese umbrella. A happy thought is surely to be found in the suggestion that the Liberals might be furnished with red paper sunshades while the Conservatives might have blue ones.

This open air Parliament would be a true return to type, for every school boy knows that the Witenagemot met in the open air. If it should rain, the game would be called. It may be asked: What would be done about winter sittings? The answer is easy. There would be no winter sittings. The session could begin on Victoria Day, and the members would know right well that they would have to get through by the first of October or else freeze. There would be less talk and more work. The Hansard men would not become victims of nervous diseases as a result of the strain put upon them. The newspaper reporters would find that the draughty grillage had gone for ever, and the newspaper readers would marvel at the improvement in the literary style of the able gentlemen who report the debates. It would be impossible, too, for any individual covertly to make excursions to Brule's canteen in the cellar, for, if a man should be seen making for the buildings, everybody would know what he was after.

The Pigeon's Marvellous Flight.

The pigeon's capacity for flight is marvellous. Many have flown from Nantes to Lancashire, 440 miles, in a day, and the winner of a race from the Shetlands to London, over 600 miles, made the journey in sixteen hours, at an average speed of thirty-seven miles an hour.

"To say a pleasant word to anyone was almost impossible."

"I was troubled with female weakness for eight years; and suffered more than I can tell," writes Mrs. Gust. Moser of Ovando, Deerlodge Co., Mont. "My disposition was affected to such an extent that to say a pleasant word to anyone was almost impossible.

"I had two operations performed by one of the most skilled surgeons of the West, but did not get relief. Then, against my doctor's strict orders, I commenced taking Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and also followed the advice given in the Common Sense Medical Adviser.

"I continued this treatment for three months, and to-day am as healthy and well as a woman can be. I cannot thank Doctor Pierce enough for his kind letters to me."

Womanly diseases, as a rule, spoil the "disposition," because of the extreme nervousness and suffering they cause. Happiness as well as health is restored to the woman whose diseased condition is cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

After eight years of suffering and two fruitless operations, three months' use of "Favorite Prescription" restored Mrs. Moser to perfect health. This great remedy for woman's ills, establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

The Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Elephant Hunting in Ceylon.

In the Island of Ceylon the people are very fond of elephant hunting. They begin by clearing an open space near a forest, part of which is strongly fenced in with trunks of trees, with open places for doors. This is called a corral.

When so much of the work is done, natives get behind and around the elephants with blazing torches, shaking spears and rattling all kinds of noisy instruments, in order to frighten the huge animals, while all the time driving them toward the open doors of the corral. At last, with a rush, the great herd enters, the entrances are barred, and the poor giants of the woods find themselves hopelessly imprisoned.

An elephant's rage is dreadful to witness, but the ingenuity of man has found a way of subduing it. One by one each prisoner is freed again, and tame elephants, remarkable for their sagacity, come up to him, stroke him with their trunks, and otherwise cajole him, until they lead him on to a strong tree. The natives creep up behind, and in a minute a rope with a running knot is round the elephant's leg and fastened to a tree.

All the time this is going on the tame elephants are humoring their deluded victim, but as soon as he is secured they go away and leave him. Then the men bring him nice cocoanuts and leaves to eat, which, of course, he refuses, as he is again in a great rage, and struggling to be free.

But hunger subdues even the fiercest, and at last his wild trumpetings cease to resound through the woods, and he is forced to eat. From that time the taming process is comparatively easy. Again and again, he is fed, as he requires it, by a kind hand; and the elephant, susceptible to kindness, becomes at last a docile servant of man.

QUOTATIONS ON THE WALL STREET MARKET.

The Bulls had Another Innings This Morning.

The Fluctuations of the Leading Stocks —Market Letters.

The Wall Street market continued its upward movement to-day and fractional advances were made in most cases over last night's close. Twin City showed great strength, opening at 84 1-4 which was also its closing quotation. Atchison reached 67 3-4 and copper closedat 39 after making 39 1-2. MOP too was a strong issue, opening at 91 and closing at 90 6-8. The strength in Sloss was a feature in the market, being quoted at 27 3-4. Its low price yesterday was 22 1-2. C.P.R., however, did not display particular strength, its highest figure being 20 1-4. A favourable bank statement proved to be a good bull argument and the close was strong and only a fraction under the highest price of the day.

ANOTHER BAR OF THE MUSICAL DISCUSSION.

"Another Music Lover" Criticises Choirs and Gives Them Some Advice.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear sir,—I read with much interest Music Lover's letter and I thought the letter timely and in good taste, and not at all lacking in charity. In fact I thought Music Lover had just said the right thing at the right time. I was not surprised at Charity's reply for that is the stock answer of the choir singer, instead of being thankful for honest criticism he inconsiderately charges the critic with ingratitude and bad manners and ignorance—and yet Charity candidly admits that on the one occasion he was at church the music "was perhaps not up to the mark." It was not quite bad enough to make him swear on that occasion, and if it was not good he says it "was, at any rate, as good as the pay"—a candid admission—cheap and nasty. And he adds "that good taste requires that we should not look the gift horse in the mouth." That is terrible and very unkind of Charity. Gift horses are usually spavined and ring-boned and broken winded and have heaves and are roarers and "sich like." Yet because had for nauthen one must declare the horse sound and young and beautiful and quite a sweet thing—a cantatrice. Don't look in her mouth; you brute!

Now, I thought choir singers loved music, and sang in choirs because it was to them a pleasure and because many of them thought to get a little instruction—all they get, poor things—and then some of them, if not all, like to help in the service of the sanctuary and with voice of song join in the praises of the Most High. I acknowledge the indebtedness to the choir. But then again, they like it and the sacrifice, like many others, brings its own recompense. Now sir, I am not long here. I came from a city where they did pay the people who praised the Lord—paid them well, and they got good music. It was as beautiful as a skilled quartette who sang for pay on the week days in the theatre where I heard them oftenest, could render. When I shut my eyes it was heavenly; when I opened them it was theatre. So when I first came I read in the local papers on Saturday night that the choir of a certain church would, on Sunday, render a selection from "The Creation." I went to that church and I heard it. My! It was a "creation"—apparently made on the spot. I could not get out and I could not with good taste put my fingers in my ears, but I did not go back to that church. Why do they attempt such things? An unpretentious rendering of a simple thing, with good time, good enunciation of the words and a little appreciation and interpretation of the sentiment would be in keeping with the musical attainment of the choir and would be effective; but these "creations;" they are conceived in sin and shapen in iniquity. Ha! On another occasion it was said that Miss ——, "the well-known local contralto" would sing; so I determined to hear her. Well, I did. The girl came out and sang with much confidence—too much. She apparently did not realize that her music was difficult, the sentiment one that called for thorough heart apprehension to enable her to interpret to the hearer the soul of the song. She had a voice, a good voice, but no culture. She did not enunciate her words clearly (without which church song is a failure.) She did not know how to hold her music, how to breathe, or how to sing. I felt sorry for her, for the poor child had a good voice and with proper culture would have made a good singer.

Now, I have no doubt this girl knew it all, and would not take kindly any intimation that a year or two under a good teacher would do her infinite good. She sang for nothing and it might appear unkind to criticise her; but if only that girl could once apprehend that she was in the rough there would be hope that some day she might shine as a star. But so long as newspapers flattered and lauded her she was content, and knew no better. Good singing in choir or elsewhere is only had as the result of teaching—good teaching and much labour—and unless the leaders of choirs are themselves cultured scholars in music and blessed with good taste and good judgment there must be indifferent—nay, poor results. The services of the choir are for the most part voluntary and so should be. If it is thought that one leading singer can make amends for poor quality behind it is a mistake. The leader shines for himself or herself. The others are belittled and discouraged. Far better employ a well qualified and judicious teacher who will bring up the general quality. Those who give their services gratis should at least get honest and good teaching. I know that the young people in a choir are like all young musicians—they want to be singing "pieces" but hard drill in voice culture, the elements of music, continuous drill and practice on one piece until a certain perfection is attained, then permission to sing that piece in the church, then more drill and more practice, and this continued and the result will be honest and well rendered music, not "creations" every Sunday. Mr. Editor, I have had my say. I love music and this is my excuse for putting in my oar at this time. I hope good will come out of the discussion so opportunely raised and that instead of calling names and charging want of charity, etc., there may be an honest effort to mend matters.

Yours truly,
ANOTHER LOVER OF MUSIC.

He Learned a Great Truth.

PEACE WITH HONOR.

Such is the Unanimous Desire of the Japanese Cabinet.

SOME GOOD NEWS IF TRUE.

Sir Claude Macdonald Said to Be Negotiating a Settlement Between Russia and Japan—Novoe Vremya Says Russians Will Rise as One Man at the Call of the Czar—Is Confident of the Issue.

Yokohama, Oct. 18.—The Japanese Minister of War, Lieut.-Gen. Terauchiki, denies that the army is desirous of war, and says that the cabinet is unanimous in wishing peace with honor.

No Fear of Result.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 17—While expressing the hope of a peaceful issue in the far eastern crisis The Novoe Vremya points out that if war breaks out the Russians will rise as one man at the call of the Czar and there can be no doubt regarding the ultimate issue.

The Novoe Vremya asserts that the Japanese belief that Viceroy Alexieff represents the Russian war party is quite erroneous, adding: "While the Viceroy has been given extensive administrative powers, he is only the executor of orders of the Czar in matters of foreign policy. One of the Czar's chief aims, the maintenance of peace, is the fundamental basis of Russian policy in the far east."

Japs Turned Out.

Tokio, Oct. 18.—The Japanese workmen at the docks in Port Arthur, the headquarters of the Russians, have been discharged.

The exodus of Japanese from Manchuria continues. There is no excitement here, as the people apparently have full confidence in the government.

GOOD NEWS IF TRUE.

Sir Claude Macdonald Mediating Between Russia and Japan.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 18.—A newspaper published at Port Dalny is authority for the report that the British Minister to Japan, Sir Claude MacDonald, has undertaken to mediate between Russia and Japan, and, having secured Japan's consent to certain proposals, is now negotiating with Russia. These proposals are that Russia shall restore Manchuria to China, and that the principal Manchuria towns be opened to foreign trade; Russia is to withdraw all her troops from Manchuria, with the exception of the railway guards; she is to renounce her forest concessions on both sides of the Yalu River, as well as the Yongampho concessions, and the whole country south of the Yalu is to be admitted as belonging to the sphere of Japan.

More Warlike in Tone.

Paris, Oct. 19.—The exchange of diplomatic notes continues at Tokio without definite results. The Japanese press, which for a time was restrained by the Government, has again adopted a belligerent attitude.

French in Tripoli.

Paris, Oct. 19.—A despatch from Tripoli to The Temps says a caravan arriving there from Wadai had accepted peacefully the proposals for a French protectorate. A French column under Colonel d'Estenavos is expected to arrive at Abeche, the capital, in a short time, to take possession. It is probable that Turkey as a suzerain of Tripoli will again formulate a protest against this action.

Boat May Have Been Foundered.

St. John's, Nfld., Oct. 19.—It is feared that the steamer Wales, bound for this port, with a cargo of coal, foundered with all hands during the recent hurricane. She is several days overdue.

Official Inquiry Begun.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 19.—An official inquiry was opened here on Saturday into the recent stranding of the Government steamer Lady Laurier, near Lockport.

ALASKA TRIBUNAL DECISION.

One Point of Importance Gained For Canada—Where Lord Alverstone Stood—U.S. Commissioners Ceded Unimportant Points—Canadian Commissioners May Refuse to Sign.

London, Oct. 19.—The Alaskan boundary commission Saturday reached an agreement whereby the American contentions are sustained, except those in relation to the Portland Canal, which Canada wins. All that now remains to be done is for the commissioners to affix their signatures to the decision and complete the map which will accompany it. On the map will be marked the boundary line definitely fixing the division of American and British territory. The United States will get all the waterways to the rich Alaskan territory, with the exception of the Portland Canal, which gives Canada the one outlet she so much needed, according to the United States Commissioners.

The long standing dispute was only settled after a week of keen, trying and secret deliberations between the arbitrators. Even up to noon Saturday there was an acute possibility that a disagreement might result, and the whole proceedings fall to the ground. Lord Alverstone, though openly inclined to believe in the justice of the American argument that the United States was entitled to the heads of inlets as contained in question five, held out that Canada had established her case in questions two and three, dealing with the Portland Canal.

After luncheon Senator Lodge, Secretary Root and Senator Turner agreed to cede those points and to start the American boundary line from the head of the Portland Canal, thus giving the Canadians that channel and some small islands on which there are only a few disused storehouses. This accomplished the majority of the tribunal agreed to fix with this exception the entire boundary as outlined in the American case.

Whether Messrs. Aylesworth and Jette, the Canadian Commissioners, will refuse to sign the decision and make it unanimous is not yet known. But, it will not affect the validity of the agreement if a minority report is submitted. By this afternoon it is hoped that everything will be ready for signature, though the actual marking of the line on the map which shall forever determine the respective territories will occupy some time.

The majority of the Commissioners left the Foreign Office hurriedly in order to catch trains for week end visits to the country. Nothing had occurred which would lead the few onlookers even to suspect that the dispute had reached its practical end. The Commissioners themselves are still bound to secrecy until the decision is actually rendered.

The successful termination of the Alaskan boundary arbitration Saturday afternoon came as a complete surprise to all interested in the case, except, perhaps, the Commissioners themselves. When the Tribunal adjourned at 3.30 p.m. it was understood that no decision had been reached. Indeed, so general was the impression that no decision would be reached till next week that several of the counsel and others employed in the case left London soon after the adjournment.

However, the Associated Press learned that a vote had been taken, and that the decision to grant all the American contentions, except that for the Portland Canal, which goes to Canada, had been arrived at. But, while the Americans throughout have been very confident, no vote had previously been taken, and no one could before Saturday afternoon say that the United States had won her case.

No hitch occurred during the entire deliberations, and as these progressed the confidence of the United States Commissioners that a decision substantially upholding the American claims would be given increased; but it was admitted that it would be necessary to agree to a compromise on the Portland Canal. The only disquieting feature of the situation for the Americans during the past few days has been a vague idea that Chief Justice Alverstone, even if he concluded to take the American view, might be unwilling to go on record with a decision to that effect, and that a disagreement was likely.

Leaked From American Sources.

London, Oct. 19.—(C. A. P.)—The Canadian Commissioners on the Alaskan Boundary Tribunal are astonished that matters in connection with a private conference are leaking out and are cabled to New York. The Canadian Commissioners and every official connected with Canada, though importuned on Saturday to express an opinion, positively refused to do so, as they declared that the Commissioners were solemnly pledged not to divulge the private proceedings. The leakage is attributed to the Americans. Messrs. Aylesworth and Jette were interviewed by the Canadian Associated Press correspondent on Sunday evening, but they again refused to speak regarding the decision which is expected to-day.

THE POINT FOR CANADA.

Decision Makes Very Little Change—The Portland Canal Not Valuable.

Toronto, Oct. 19.—"Canada has much to be proud of in the presentation of her case," observed Judge Thomas Hodgins, K.C., on Saturday night. As the author of several volumes on the subject, he is in a position to speak with probably more intelligence than any other citizen of the Dominion. Among other things he said:

Just as Before.

"This decision leaves the situation on the Pacific Coast exactly as it was in the past. The Portland Canal was desired by the United States because it gave her the islands near the shore line of the inlets—Pearse and Wales. They are of no agricultural or mineral value, but merely of strategic importance in controlling the waters of the inlet. This canal, by the way, is not an artificial body, as the word might indicate, but it receives this name from the language and correspondence of Vancouver. It leads inland to the confluence of the Salmon and Bear Rivers. Portland Canal is not valuable.

Decision Final.

"The treaty of reference provides that the majority shall rule, so this decision is final, though some members may return a minority report. It is merely a dissenting opinion and of no practical weight. This leaves each country in possession of that territory which it to-day holds, as I understand it, but I am sure the decision does not provide for the extension of the lines of the American occupation further inland."

SHOOTING WITH INTENT.

Terrence Scott Seriously Wounded by Edward Duke of Buffalo.

Hamilton, Oct. 19.—About 9.30 yesterday morning Terence Scott, Jr., 157 Napier street, was shot in the head during a quarrel with another colored man, name Edward Duke, who is known to his friends as "Mysterious." The men quarreled in Scott's house, and Duke was shoved out into the back yard. He turned at close range, drew a revolver, and fired. Scott dodged and the bullet tore a hole in the rim of his hat. Duke shot again, and the second bullet struck Scott's head at the base of the skull. The negro's thick skull saved his life. The bullet split in two pieces. One glanced under the skin, doing little damage, and the other entered his head in front of the ear, shattering the bone. The doctors extracted both pieces, and they think Scott has a chance to recover. Duke ran for his life and got a boy to drive him to Stony Creek, where he boarded a T., H. & B. train. At Welland the police took him off the train.

TO FIX FISH BOUNDARY.

A Careful Survey of Lake Erie Boundary to Be Made.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 18.—The United States revenue cutter Tuscarora will leave for Cleveland to-morrow to take part in the settlement of the international dispute between the United States and Canada over the fishing in Lake Erie.

Determine Boundary Line.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 18.—Collector of Customs Charles F. Leach said that when the Tuscarora comes to this port it will engage in determining the boundary line both at Ashtabula and Erie, where American fishermen have been fired on and their nets taken up because of alleged encroachment upon Canadian waters. A careful survey will be made to avoid further trouble for American fishermen.

48 MILES AN HOUR.

St. John Visited by a Wind Storm That Causes Loss.

St. John, Oct. 19.—Since Saturday midnight the worst storm of the season has raged here, the wind blowing 48 miles per hour. The three-masted schooner Edna dragged her anchors and drifted two miles down the harbor. Distress signals were hoisted and the crew were taken off by the local lifeboat and landed on Partridge Island. Later, when the wind subsided they returned to the vessel. Fredericton reports the storm very severe. The water in the St. John River there has risen 8 inches since Friday.

Lightning Does Damage.

Yarmouth, N.S., Oct. 19.—Yarmouth and vicinity was visited with a heavy thunder and lightning storm accompanied by a downpour of rain, Saturday. The house owned by Capt. Ferguson was struck, but escaped serious injury. The barn of Mr. Coleman Winter at Brazil Lake, was struck, set on fire, and consumed, together with horse, hay and other contents.

MASSACRE OF CATTLE.

Express Train Near Berlin Kills Seven Out of Thirty.

London, Oct. 19.—The Toronto Express of the G.T.R., near Berlin Saturday ran into a herd of 30 cattle. The shock was terrific, some of the animals being hurled 50 feet, and then, landing on the rails again, were cut to pieces. Others were thrown down the steep embankment and tumbled through the wire fences into the adjoining fields. Of the 30 cattle in the herd, seven were killed outright and many were so badly maimed that they had to be destroyed. The train presented a sickening sight when it arrived here. The cattle were the property of a farmer of the district, and had broken through a fence.

Canadian an Admiral.

Rear-Admiral Sir Charles Drury, who recently took the place of Admiral Sir John Fisher as Second Lord of the Admiralty, is a Canadian. He has already had experience of departmental work, having been a member of the Ordnance Committee in 1893. As a gunnery expert he stands high, and there is no doubt that the excellent work he did at Devonport marked him out for future promotion. Sir Charles, who was Commander-in-Chief of the East Indies Station when he received his new appointment, has since his return been paying visits to the principal home ports, with a view to qualifying himself for his duties as Second Sea Lord. Lady Drury is a daughter of Mr. Whitehead of torpedo fame and an aunt of Princess Bismarck.

Mrs. L. C. Glover, Vice Pres. Milwaukee, Wis., Business Woman's Association, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: I was married for several years and no children blessed my home. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles and I could not have any children unless I could be cured. He tried to cure me, but after experimenting for several months, my husband became disgusted, and one night when we noticed a testimonial of a woman who had been cured of similar trouble through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, he went out and bought a bottle for me. I used your medicine for three and one half months, improving steadily in health, and in twenty-two months a child came. I cannot fully express the joy and thankfulness that is in my heart. Our home is a different place now, as we have something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours very sincerely, MRS. L. C. GLOVER, 614 Grove St., Milwaukee, Wis." Vice President, Milwaukee Business Woman's Ass'n.

Women should not fail to profit by the experience of these two women; just as surely as they were cured of the troubles enumerated in their letters, just so certainly will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure others who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration; remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

An Indiana Lady Tells of a Wonderful Cure:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: It is a pleasure for me to write and tell what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I was sick for three years with change of life, and my physician thought a cancerous condition of the womb. During these three years I suffered untold agony.

"I cannot find words in which to express my bad feelings. I did not expect to ever see another well day. I read some of the testimonials recomending your medicine and decided to write to you and give your treatment a trial.

"Before I had taken half a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to sleep. I have taken now six bottles and am so well I can do all kinds of work."—MRS. LIZZIE HENKLE, Salem, Ind.

If there is anything in your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She can surely help you, for no person in America can speak from a wider experience in treating female ills. Address is Lynn, Mass.; her advice is free and always helpful.

PULLING THE WOOL OVER OUR EYES.

(Hamilton Times.)

We have of late heard a good deal from the organs of the extreme tariff wing of the Tory party about the condition of Canadian woollen mills, which are said to be languishing for lack of more tariff protection. The manager of a combine of these mills recently stated that United States competition did not bother them but that importations from Great Britain were hard on the business. He acknowledged that there was a duty of 35 per cent. against foreign goods, and over 23 per cent. against British goods, and that Canadians had free wool, free dye stuffs and a low duty on all the machinery required. But he demanded more protection, and blusteringly talked about "shutting down the mills to bring the Government to its senses;" which being interpreted means holding up the Government to coerce it into giving the woollen men the right to levy more taxes on the people.

In line with this policy the Montreal Star recently published a list of 26 woollen mills which, it alleged, had just been closed down because of receiving "inadequate" protection under the Liberal tariff. The Monetary Times, well informed as to the textile business of the country, refers to the Star's studied dishonesty in publishing such a list by saying: "The paper in question, however, did not mention that of these mills the majority had closed down long before the preferential tariff was ever heard of, or that in some cases they were shut up simply because their plants had been removed to other places." And it asks: "What is a Minister of Finance to say to an argument so clumsily expressed? "Clumsily" is not the word suitable to the description of such an attempt to deceive; "mendaciously" would be better. A correspondent of the Montreal Herald points out that many of these mills closed down when the N. P. was in full force and effect. He says:—

"The fact is that the Almonte Elliott's, Almonte Baird's, Almonte Cannons, Yarmouth, Glen Tay, Port Emsley and French's mills, Ottawa, in all 7 mills credited with having in 25 sets of cards standing idle, in reality have not a single set of cards, and were closed down from eight to fifteen years ago, the machinery being sold and removed from the buildings.

"Cornwall and Streetsville have been almost permanently closed down for the past eight years, because they did not, or could not, compete with more up-to-date Canadian mills. The Wattie woollen mill at Valleyfield was closed down fourteen years ago and the building sold to the Montreal Cotton Company, by whom it is now used."

He says the average production of the other leading mills referred to by the Star has in the last three years been much greater than ten years ago. There are over 200 sets of woollen cards and worsted combs being vigorously operated in the Province of Ontario alone, and over 100 sets in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, which means in the aggregate over 300 sets, exclusive of any mills mentioned in the above list, and producing approximately six millions worth of woollens and worsteds per annum. It is further pointed out that some of the mills that complain of the competition under the preferential tariff are using machinery twenty-five or thirty years behind the times. Why should they ask Canadians to tax themselves to make this lack of enterprise profitable?

If the makers of Canadian tweeds have a good case to present—and the Monetary Times thinks that branch of the trade is hard hit—they are very ill-advised in lending themselves to any scheme to "bull" the tariff by threats against the Government. Let them present it reasonably. The Government is not careless of the interest of any industry, but it has the general good of the community to safeguard; and if any combine seeks wrongly to influence legislation by concertedly shutting down, as threatened by this indiscreet woollen manufacturer, the Government's answer should be the entire abolition of all duties on its products. And its answer should not be long in coming.

GAMEY IS THEIR POLICY.

(Brantford Expositor.)

By the course they are adopting in the bye-election in Muskoka, the leaders of the Conservative party are certainly advertising to the world that Gamey is their policy. He is the only Conservative other than the party candidate who has as yet appeared on the public platform in that riding, and he has announced a series of meetings extending up to polling day.

Mr. Whitney does not seem to learn by experience. His weakness for years past is that he has spent all his time making wholesale and, for the most part, foundationless charges of corruption and ballot-tampering against his political opponents, and has neglected any serious attempt at the construction of a platform. That his political friends are more far-seeing than he is is shown by the following criticism which appeared in The Montreal Star after the provincial elections of last year:—

"The province gathered from the Conservative campaign that there was something apparently wrong about the Ross administration, but it could not make out what it was.

"Now during the next four years the Whitney group must better their position along this line. When the Government proposes anything bad they must say so at once and with emphasis and point out in what respect they would improve it. They should offer the province a plain alternative policy every time they are not prepared to endorse the Ross programme. Next election they ought to be ready to come down to details. If there is a difference between the parties it should be made obvious. If there are two distinct policies every young man in Ontario ought to be in a position to tell one exactly what they each are."

What policy is Mr. Whitney presenting to the electors of Muskoka? Thus far nothing but Mr. Gamey, with all that the member for Manitoulin stands for.

It is a pretty slim platform for a great political party to attempt to stand upon, and the fact that the attempt is made affords good and sufficient reason why the electors of the province do not seem disposed to entrust Mr. Whitney with the reins of power.

THE EXPANSION OF OLDER CANADA.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

Probably there is no intelligent Canadian now alive to whom the idea of the expansion of Canada has not been familiar since his earliest acquaintance with public questions. Joseph Howe in the fifties of last century told how the hopes of a railway extending from our Atlantic to our Pacific coast rose like a pillar of fire before him.

George Brown, George E. Cartier, John A. Macdonald, all our great dreamers of the past, beheld the same vision, and worked in their various ways valorously to bring it to pass. They proved themselves the most practical of statesmen by imbuing all sorts and conditions of Canadians with faith in the wisdom of their constructive policy.

The Dominion is what it is to-day because they and many lesser prophets were not afraid to put their energies into promoting what appeared to dullards the visionary impracticable. Thank the Lord our trusted statesmen have always been of the sagacious dreamers, who dream true.

In their desire and their anxiety to bind up British Columbia and the great lone land with the Eastern provinces, it was natural or even inevitable that they should somewhat overlook the importance, and indeed the necessity of expanding the older settled regions.

That Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime provinces could and would take care of themselves was a sort of corollary to projects requiring them to lavish money in developing the fertile Northwest and the vast tract of genial climate bordering on the Pacific Ocean.

But men who strenuously set themselves to enterprises located far from their own homes are apt to forget or ignore the local improvements from which gain might accrue.

The farmer who strives to clear and crop his most distant fields, and connect them with his barns by laying a good road through intervening swamp, can scarcely be blamed if he neglects the advantages for home gardening that are visible from his bedroom windows. He puts off the careful tillage which he can undertake at some future time in order that his whole tract may be got into some sort of order. When he has made it all available for cultivation, then he proceeds to make bottments near his verandah.

We of the older Canadian Provinces have been for some thirty years engaged in implementing a transcontinental improvement plan which first appeared fantastic, and then wild, and then hazardous, and which was certainly among the boldest ever undertaken by so innumerous a political community. The work accomplished during the past generation cannot but stand to its immortal honour in the history of enterprise. But during the period we neglected the work of colonization and development near our own back doors.

In the Maritime Provinces, Quebec and Ontario immense regions of valuable land have remained unopened to immigration. The cities, towns and villages of our front country, all likely to be much benefitted by a neighbouring back country, have tacitly ignored the wilds naturally tributary to their trade, in order to facilitate the establishment of cities and towns, and villages from 1500 to 2500 miles distant.

That was well and wisely done; we have already obtained some profit by the risks incurred, but as surely as it is more easy, safe and profitable to sell to customers within two miles than to those distant twenty or fifty miles, so it will be more easy, safe and profitable to deal with farmers and lumbermen and miners within 200 miles than with those distant from three to six days by rail.

The American rival, no matter what tariff changes may come, can never take from the Ontario, Quebec or New Brunswick front towns the trade of the back regions which in those provinces will be opened up by the National Transcontinental Railway.

In those districts the Canadian manufacturers of agricultural machines, stoves, furniture, woollens and everything else our artisans and operatives produce, can never be beaten. Proximity breeds trade. It must pay makers and dealers better to create a demand for axes, nails, reapers, glass, textile fabrics, groceries and what not within 200 miles than to have to cut prices in order to pay freights over the long stretches of connection between Ontario and Assiniboia.

Many natives and immigrants prefer woodland to prairie land. Of this undeniable fact our keen immigration agents should take advantage in canvassing Europe. This year about 8,000 settlers of the first quality are reported to have gone into the Temiscamingue region, because the Ontario Government railway promises its settlers trading facilities.

How many hundred thousand, how many millions does this fact prognosticate for the great clay belt between Quebec city and the Nipegon. By branch railways all those people will be brought into commercial relations with the Front of Old Canada, which has ever needed an extensive back country. It had got so settled in hopelessness of ever having one that the promise afforded by Sir Wilfrid Laurier's truly National Railway makes mossy residents of the front stare, as at something too good to be true. Just so those of twenty to thirty years ago gaped at the promise that Canada would not be impoverished but enriched by undertaking the cost of rail connection with the distant prairie.

In order that the Old Provinces may not be dwarfed by the new it is necessary that the old be broadened, and enriched by development of their wilds. Without opening up their back country they cannot reasonably hope to hold their own politically in confederation, let alone directing the future as they are justly entitled to do by their past of splendid optimistic energy. It is to the truly practical genius of Sir Wilfrid Laurier that they will owe the power of long holding what they now have of influence in the National Councils. The expansion of the Older Provinces as well as the betterment of the newer are the purpose of his greatly conceived National Transcontinental Railway.

NORTHWEST PROGRESS.

Statistics Indicating Rapid Progress the Last Few Years.

Quite a number of instructive disgrams illustrating the growth of the Canadian Northwest, appear in the Winnipeg Free Press of 7th October. The essence of some of these may be given as under. For instance, as to the increase of elevator capacity. In 1891 the storage capacity for grain represented only 7,6228,000 bushels; the next year it was 10,360,000; by 1898 it had reached 18,368,000; last year it was 26,298,000, and now it is over 39,000,000 bushels. At every point on the railway lines elevators have been built to make easy the handling and shipment of grain. These range from 50,000 to 500,000 bushels' capacity in the towns, but the enormous elevators at Port Arthur and Fort William will hold from one to three millions each.

From the insignificant number of 1857 in the year 1896 the entries for free homestead lands increased to 7,850 in 1900, to 22,215 in 1902, and this year to 33,102. This growth naturally corresponds with the great growth of immigration into Manitoba and the Territories. The 18,000 of newcomers in 1890 have been succeeded regularly by greater numbers in the later years. In 1899 and 1900 the figures of arrivals were about the same, namely 44,000 each, while in 1901 there were 50,000; the next year 67,000, and last year no fewer than 124,000. The division of these between "European," "British" and "American," is indicated in the diagram. In 1903 there were 47,000 immigrants from the United States, which proves that the greatest influx has been from that country.

Next we may take the land sales by the great railway companies. These amounted in 1896 to only 108,016 acres, valued at $361,238, figures which were about doubled in the next year. 1898 and 1899 were nearly equal, sales, being, say, 450,000 Then 1900 and 1901 advanced to 630,000 acres, and in 1902 they leaped to 2,201,795 acres, realising $7,746,958. Thus there have been sold in seven years nearly four million acres of our western domain. These are scattered through Manitoba and the Territories. The growth of railway mileage affords another basis for a comparative table. In the Canadian Northwest there were but 64 miles of railway, which length was increased to 630 miles by 1883. With the construction of the C.P.R. in 1888 the figure grew to 2,306 miles, while to-day the total is no less than 4,555 miles, and the network of rails is a remarkable one.

A Matter of Fact Dog.

There are prosaic men and women, and there are matter of fact dogs. For purely business purposes they are often the best.

We once owned an excellent retrieving spaniel of the simple order of mind, without a grain of humor. This dog accompanied us unasked when we wanted to shoot a bullfinch in the garden to stuff. The gun went off, and the poor bullfinch dropped.

Now, this dog had been used, when the gun was fired, to go and look for a dead or wounded rabbit. So, instead of looking under the apple tree, he disappeared into the hedge, and in a few minutes he returned with a rabbit in his mouth! So much for the value of a matter of fact dog.—London Spectator.

Great Britain's Seamen.

One in every thirty-six of the males over 15 years of age in Great Britain is a seaman in the mercantile marine or a fisherman. That by no means represents the proportion of Britons who go to sea in ships. For the current year the total number of officers and men, active service ratings provided by the estimates for the royal navy, 127,000, being an increase of 4,600 over the previous year. Taking the two totals this means that one in about every twenty Britons is a sailor, which is an enormously larger percentage than that which any other nation can boast, even with the conscription which supplies the seamen of several continental countries.

Short-Haired Cats.

The very latest wrinkle in the cat world is the breeding of short-haired cats, just the common or garden variety of cats. It is marvelous what a few short generations of care and breeding will do for poor pussy, who takes her outing on the alley wall or moans about the door of some deserted house. After scant joys and many hardships she is at last to see high life. She is to be bred for the same points as the Persian.

Pontiffs Once Were Red.

There are many people who will doubtless be interested to know that it is only since the thirteenth century that the popes have been accustomed to wear white. Until that time they were always arrayed in the red robes now affected by the cardinals. Boniface VIII., in 1294, however, realising that the red was no longer a distinctive color of the papacy since his predecessors had accorded to their legates abroad the right to wear it, issued a decree granting to all the members of the sacred college the red robes which they now wear and decided that the white should henceforth be the hue of the raiment of himself and of his successors. The popes, however, still retain from those ancient days the red hat which they wear out of doors and the red mantle as well as the red shoes.

Complaint Against Canadian Steel.

Washington, Oct. 17.—Complaint has been made to the United States Treasury Department that the Dominion Iron and Steel Company of Canada has been exporting bounty paid steel into the United States. It is claimed that the Australian Government pays a bounty of $2 per ton on pig iron and $2 more on steel produced from this iron, making a total bounty of $4, and that this steel is brought to Canada and then to the United States. It is asserted by those making the complaint that the countervailing duty against bounty-paid products should be applied to this steel.

TOOK A STRAW VOTE.

Interesting Experiment in a Restaurant.

An advertising agent, representing a prominent New York magazine, while on a recent western trip, was dining one evening in a Pittsburg restaurant.

While waiting for his order he glanced over his newspaper and noticed the advertisement of a well known dyspepsia preparation, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; as he himself was a regular user of the tablets, he began speculating as to how many of the other traveling men in the dining room were also friends of the popular remedy for indigestion.

He says: I counted twenty-three men at the tables and in the hotel office I took the trouble to interview them and was surprised to learn that nine of the twenty-three made a practice of taking one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal.

One of them told me he had suffered so much from stomach trouble that at one time he had been obliged to quit the road, but since using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets had been entirely free from indigestion, but he continued their use, especially while travelling, on account of irregularity in meals and because like all travelling men he was often obliged to eat what he could get and not always what he wanted.

Another, who looked the picture of health, said he never ate a meal without taking a Stuart Tablet afterward because he could eat what he pleased and when he pleased without fear of a sleepless night or any other trouble.

Still another used them because he was subject to gas on stomach, causing pressure on heart and lungs, shortness of breath and distress in chest, which he no longer experienced since using the tablets regularly.

Another claimed that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was the only safe remedy he had ever found for sour stomach and acidity. He had formerly used common soda to relieve the tablets were much better and safer to use.

After smoking, drinking or other excesses which weaken the digestive organs, nothing restores the stomach to a healthy, wholesome condition so effectually as Stuart's Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the natural digestives, pepsin, diastase, which every weak stomach lacks, as well as nux, hydrastin and yellow parilla, and can be safely relied on as a radical cure for every form of poor digestion. Sold by druggists everywhere.

POSTOFFICE BLOCK.

Sir William Mulock's Ultimatum to the Opposition.

SOME TONS OF LITERATURE.

Sent Through the Mails at the Country's Expense—Rebate on Fast Atlantic Service—Mr. R. L. Borden Moves a Resolution, But It is Defeated—Sir Seymour Gourley Turns Wrath Upon Englishmen.

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—In the House of Commons Saturday, Seymour Gourley, M.P. of Nova Scotia, took occasion to say:

"If the news is correct, all that the United States has got to do is to make a claim for Canada, and it will get it by boastfulness and dishonest effort. If it is true, we might as well throw away our national aspirations. The last two generations of Englishmen were degenerates and cowards. They have had no leader since Pitt died. Thank God! Chamberlain is galvanizing them and putting new blood in them."

Hon. William Ross of Cape Breton protested against speaking about Englishmen in this way, and Mr. Gourley retorted that "they went around with blinders on, unfit to drive sheep across the country."

Fast Atlantic Line.

In the House Saturday, Mr. Borden moved.

"This House affirms its belief that great advantages would result to Canada as well as to the mother country from the establishment of a fast steamship service between the two countries, and expresses its regret that no effective steps have been taken for that purpose by the present administration."

After speeches by the mover, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Dr. Sproule, R. Gourley, A. C. Bell, Col. Kaulbach, Roche, H. Logan and Hon. Mr. Ross, the resolution was voted down by 58 to 20.

Sir William Mulock's Ultimatum.

Like a dying campfire freshened by a rising breeze, the dreary week in supply brightened at the close by a fiery debate on the Opposition's abuse of the franking privilege. The subject, which was brought up by Mr. Charles Marcil, had immediate reference to the tons of Conservative literature being sent out daily from the Parliament buildings.

Sir William Mulock, in a speech full of indignation, told of the clogging of the postal service by the carloads and trainloads of matter being distributed So many of the Government's mail bags were requisitioned that the service was crippled, and one Montreal newspaper was unable to obtain a supply. He gave the parties interested until Monday to return the bags, of which there were then 735 lying in use in the corridor, or his officers would take them by force. A hot debate followed, but during Saturday evening the work of stamping the envelopes from the bags in the building went on until a late hour. No work was done yesterday, and as it seems to be a physical impossibility to stamp the literature by 11 o'clock to-day the outcome is awaited with a great deal of interest.

Passed Its Second Reading.

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—The transcontinental railway bill passed its second reading in the Senate at 10.20 o'clock Saturday night by a vote of 21 to 14, a Government majority of 7. About twenty were paired and several were absent.

Senator Cox, who was present, did not vote, and Senator Watson drew the attention of the Speaker to the fact. On rising to explain Senator Cox said: "I have abstained from voting not because I think there is any sufficient reason for so doing, but my name has been prominently identified with the project in consequence of certain unwarranted statements to which I have already referred on a previous occasion, and I have therefore decided to leave no possible room for misapprehension, or misrepresentation. I desire to repeat again that my sole and only interest in the project is my compliance with the request of the authorities of the G.T.R. to become a director of the G.T.P. Co., and in addition the earnest desire that should actuate every patriotic Canadian to see the early completion of this great national undertaking that will add so much to the prosperity of this country."

SHOT 5-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER.

Father Almost Crazy Over the Result of Gun Accident.

Nanaimo, B. C., Oct. 19.—A terrible case of accidental shooting is reported from Cumberland. The victim was Hazel, the pretty little 5-year-old daughter of James Carthew, ex-Mayor of Cumberland, and the gun which caused her death was in the hands of her father. Mr. Carthew was out on his own land shooting grouse, and was accompanied by his two children, a girl and a boy. Mr. Carthew was about to fire, and turned to the boy, warning him to keep out of the way. At that moment the gun, which chanced to be on a line with the little girl, was accidentally discharged, the contents of both barrels striking the child, who was but a few feet away, in the face and breast, tearing the flesh to ribbons. A hole was literally blown into the carotid artery. Mr. Carthew picked up the child, but before he could reach the house, which was close at hand, she was dead. Mr. Carthew is almost crazed.

RAILWAY MEN HURT.

Three Men Have Accidents That Maim Them For Life.

Toronto, Oct. 19.—While coupling cars at Leaside Junction late last night, James Christie, a brakeman on the C.P.R., lost his right arm from the elbow downwards. He lives at 52 Edmund street, Toronto Junction, and got his arm crushed in the draw-bar from the elbow to the centre of his hand. The arm was amputated above the elbow.

Saturday morning Albert Cheek of Mary street, a G.T.R. brakeman, stepped from a freight train in front of an engine on an adjoining track in the York yard and had his foot so badly crushed that it had to be amputated above the ankle.

Frank McDonald, Lansdowne avenue, another G.T.R. brakeman, lost his right foot Sunday morning at Oshawa. The unfortunate man was engaged in coupling cars at the time and while attempting to place a "knuckle" in position with his foot, had that member caught between the buffers.

A Brutal Case of Ill-treatment at Lapraire, Que.

HALF A MILLION BROOKING.

Victoria Sealers Had Good Season and Won't Quit Alaska Waters.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 19.—Local sealers have heard nothing in regard to the conference spoken of to be held in Washington to consider an offer said to have been made by the United States to pay two-thirds of half a million dollars demanded by the local sealers for the fleet and industry, provided that Russia contributes the other third. Had the arrangement to purchase the Canadian fleet been made some time ago the owners would have been disposed to sell, as they resent the restrictions that have been placed on the industry, but the season has been a good one, and the majority are opposed to accepting the half million dollars.

Offers From Canada.

Paris, Oct. 19.—A report has been circulated that Canada has offered facilities for the sardine fishermen and their families to emigrate. The prefect has written to the Government stating that the condition is worse than last year, because the population has been increased by 8,000, and advising emigration to Tunis or Algiers rather than to Canada, where the papers say the emigrants would compete with the French fishers of Newfoundland and Iceland.

Early Winter in Alaska.

Dawson, Yukon, Oct. 19.—Winter is closing in quickly, and several thousand tons of freight will not reach Dawson this season. Freight charges are phenomenally high, and prices of certain staples are going skyward. To-day hay in Dawson is selling for $180 per ton. Snow is several inches deep in Mayo district, and the streams are freezing. The gold output will be about $1,000,000 less than last year.

Scrawny People.

People grow thin, scrawny, pale and weak when the blood is thin and watery. What is needed to round off the angles and fill out the form, is not fat but healthy muscular tissue. By enriching the blood and increasing its nourishing qualities Dr. Chase's Nerve Food adds new flesh and tissue to the body as well as new vigour and energy. You can prove this by noting your increase in weight while using this great cure.

HAS LEASED FENELON FALLS FLOUR MILL.

Mr. W. H. Meldrum Secures a Profitable Mill.

Has a 21 Year Lease—Free Power, Free Taxes and Free Light.

The Brandon, McDougal, Austin Flour Mill at Fenelon Falls, which was recently sold to that town, has been leased for a period of 21 years, by Mr. W. H. Meldrum, of this town, for the sum of $1,250 per annum, with free power, free light, and free taxes

When seen by the Examiner on Saturday, Mr. Meldrum confirmed the report, and stated that the mill had a capacity of from 125 to 150 barrels per diem. It is situated on the canal, on the main street, is a stone building measuring 40 by 80 feet, and is five stories in height. Since the lease, which began on September 4th last, Mr. Meldrum has begun to build an addition on the west side of the mill, measuring 40 x 36 feet. As to the plant the rollers have been recut, and new machinery installed, so that the large number of orders which are expected, may be the more easily coped with. When navigation on the Trent Valley Canal is opened up, the wheat will be transported to the mill by that waterway, instead of per the Grand Trunk Railway, which railway has agreed to build a branch from their line to the mill, which will be about 500 yards in length. It will readily be seen that such a line, notwithstanding the short distance which the mill is situated from the railway, will materially facilitate importation, and subsequent exportation. There is no mill north of Fenelon Falls, those at Kinmount and Haliburton having been burned down; consequently, all that northern country will depend on the Fenelon Falls mill for flour, which already has a good reputation, and which reputation Mr. Meldrum intends to, at least, keep up, if not better. At present the building is in charge of Mr. Fair, a man who thoroughly understands the business, and who also worked for Mr. Meldrum in Peterborough some 16 years ago. Moreover all the employees of the previous owners, who resolved, it is said, to sever their partnership, necessitating the sale of the mill, have been taken over by the present owners.

That Fenelon Falls is a town with a future before it, can readily be seen by its location; its natural water power will be its revolving pivot. At present it is in a booming condition, and considerable building is being done. It is in fact said that next year this town as a summer resort, will rival Bobcaygeon and Burleigh. Thus it can be seen that the town's prosperous condition will make Mr. Meldrum's venture a very profitable one.

HOODLUMISM.

Wanton and Malicious Damage Done to Public Property.

There seems to be a lawless and vicious element in the town, and it seems evident that juvenile depravity is the chief ingredient. Within a few days or nights two drinking fountains have been distroyed, as far as their use is concerned. One is the fountain on Hunter street, at the creek. The pipe or spout has been wrenched or hammered off, evidently with a stone or some equally effective means. Not satisfied with this the youthful miscreants, for it is plainly the work of boys, smashed the interior fittings of the head of the fountain. Consequently the fountain is dry and teams and horses stop at it in vain to slake their thirst. Similar damage has been done to the drinking fountain in Central Park. The boldness of these misdeeds, done on two of our most frequented thoroughfares, leads to the enquiry as to whether we have adequate police protection. In the past it has been shown that there was need of some police supervision in the parts of the town outside, the business limits. This is not to say that the present force does not do its duty, but it is not large enough to cover any but the business portion of the town. Would not an extra night officer whose duty it would be to patrol the outskirts be a good thing. He might have no certain beat, but the fact of his being likely to turn up at any time in any part of the town, would at least make miscreants like [illegible] mentioned, a great deal more cautious, if it did not altogether put an end to their depredations.

The Arbitration Committee decided that a month's time would be given in which to reach an amicable settlement as to the location of a school, which it is proposed to build in the centre of the school section, and should a settlement not be arrived at during this time, the section will be divided and a school built in the portion the residents of which are now dissatisfied with the location of the school.

THE ELEMENTS OF ALL TRUE SUCCESS

Spoken of in Sermon at George Street Church Last Night.

Anniversary Sermon to Young Men's Guild—The "Strong Young Man" Portrayed.

"Strong Young Men," was the subject of Rev. J. P. Wilson's sermon at George street church last night, on the occasion of the first anniversary of the Young Men's Guild. The sermon was delivered to one of the largest congregations ever seen in the church, the young men being largely in the majority, and the discourse was an eminently practical and beneficial one. Not only was the sermon especially directed to young men, but the musical service was conducted by a young men's choir of over thirty voices, under the direction of Mr. G. W. Mulligen. The male members of George street choir were joined by other musicians from the church, and the assistance of singers from other choirs was secured. Messrs. Sollitt and Lendrum, from St. Andrew's, and Mr. A. L. Davis and a number of others rendered the choir valuable assistance. In addition to leading in the singing of the hymns, a chorus, "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," by the entire choir, was sung, and a quartette and sextette gave selections.

The Young Men's Guild, as a part of their anniversary services, requested the pastor to preach them a sermon especially adapted to young men, and the discourse listened to last night was one which it would be well for every young man bearing it to adopt the principle laid down in it for his motive in life. The text was that found in the 14th verse of I. John, 2nd chapter, "I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one." The speaker said that the Christian church was devoting a great deal of attention to the subject of young men, and the best methods of interesting them in the work for which the church was instituted. This is not to be wondered at when it is remembered that the founder of the church was himself a young man, and indeed some of the most remarkable men in history had accomplished the things for which they became famous, while they were yet young. One of the most interesting chapters in the history of the world is that dealing with the achievements of young men. Alexander was a young man when he had conquered the known world; Mozart gave to the world his wondrous musical compositions while he was yet a youth, and many other examples might be quoted to prove the truth of the assertion that numbers of the greatest reforms and other notable achievements have been accomplished by men early in life. Young men never looked out upon a brighter future than they do to-day. In industrial and commercial life they are in demand as never before and to-day the most responsible positions are being held by them.

He paid a high tribute to the benign influence of the mothers, and said that the fact just noted, that the young men had to a large extent been given the governing power in industrial life, was because they had been influenced rightly by the mothers who had reared them, and who had instilled into their children's minds high ideals and right motives.

While there is a great demand for young men, the speaker said, that the call was for strong men. Strong men physically, mentally and morally were everywhere needed. One of the first requisites to a successful career is a strong physique, and the principal reason, he said, why boys who were born on farms, took precedence over city boys, and who, in many cases, achieved greater success was because their early life had given them strong physical natures, which had made them to a certain degree independent and self-reliant. He was proud to know that Canada had attained such an enviable reputation for having well developed young men. This quality of the Canadian men had been amply demonstrated in the South African war, when they had so impressed the commanders that they were assigned tasks which required great resourcefulness and courage, and in every case they acquitted themselves in a manner which proved that the high estimates that had been formed of them, had not been mistaken ones. He thought that every young man should give sufficient attention to physical development, but that this part of the nature should not be given attention to the neglect of the mental or moral qualities. Two bars to success were intemperance and gambling, and no young man who hopes to attain success should indulge in them.

Then not only were men of strong physical powers needed, but young men who are strong mentally. To-day the battle of life is a battle of brains, and the man who gets the best things in life is he who is the best mentally endowed. The cultivation of the mental powers does not require a large amount of time to be devoted daily to general reading, because some of the most highly learned men have had but little time for study; but it does require thought, and young men of to-day should spend time in thought on the problems of life which confront them. Another necessary element to high mental development is the reading of good books, and in this land where good literature is so abundant, and so easily obtainable, no excuse can be made for reading questionable literature. Pictures, too, the speaker said, had a great influence upon men's minds and actions, and therefore it should be the aim of young men to be careful in the choice of the literature they read and the pictures they looked at.

The most important requisite to a well developed man is that he be spiritually strong. One may be perfect physically, and have strong mental power, but unless his spiritual nature is developed he will fail to achieve the highest success. Character is the most essential element in a man's life, and unless it is possessed, all other qualifications are worth but little. No man is fully successful unless he knows God, and His voice is needed to encourage and stimulate in the battle of life.

The speaker appealed eloquently to his hearers to make the largest success of life of which they were capable, and build strong physical, mental and spiritual natures.

Following the sermon, Messrs. Hill, Smedley, Sollitt, B. Turner, Maguire, Gardiner and Thornton, sang "When the Mists have Cleared."

The anniversary services will be continued to-night when the Young Men's Guild will serve a fowl supper in the Sunday school room, followed by a programme to be rendered in the church, at which Mr. J. Jeffries will be the chairman.

"IS CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SCIENTIFIC CHRISTIANITY?"

The Subject of a Lecture by Rev. A. R. Vosburgh

Given in Church of Christ Scientist Yesterday Afternoon—Eloquent Address in Which Much Information was Given.

The First Church of Christ Scientists was well filled yesterday afternoon when a lecture on the subject, "Is Christian Science Scientific Christianity?" was delivered by Rev. A. R. Vosburgh, of Rochester, N.Y. The lecture was attentively listened to, and was an eloquent exposition of the principles underlying the beliefs of Church of Christ Scientists.

Mr. R. J. Todd opened the meeting, with a short address in which he related his personal experience and gave a history of the events which led up to his acceptance of the principles of the church of which he is a member.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary, presided, and, in introducing the speaker of the afternoon, said that it gave him great pleasure to accede to the request which had been made to him, to preside on the occasion. As a representative, he felt that every class and interest of the community had claims upon his services in every legitimate capacity. The object of the gathering and of the lecture was ostensibly a good one, and he therefore felt not only justified but in duty bound to give any assistance in his power. His presiding, however, did not commit him to an endorsation of the peculiar views which might be uttered, but this did not effect his position. The views of every sect or denomination were peculiar from the standpoint of others, and he had on many occasions presided at gatherings when he was not in sympathy with the particular tenets represented by the majority, yet he was in sympathy with the general object, which had been to make men better. As a public man he was in sympathy with such objects—the higher the moral tone of the community was raised the better the general citizenship, the easier the task of Government and the better the results. The speaker of the afternoon, came very highly recommended as an eloquent speaker and one well acquainted with his subject, and he had great pleasure in introducing Rev. Mr. Vosburgh, who would deliver the address of the afternoon.

Mr. Vosburgh on rising to speak, said:—

Christian Science is a very recent movement, as it has come to the world in these latter days. While it is entirely based on the truth unfolded in the Bible and fully exemplified in the words and works of Jesus, yet its understanding in modern times is through a new discovery of this new old truth. This discovery came through a spiritual healing which occurred in Lynn, Mass., in 1866. This healing was the case of the lady who is now the Rev. Mary Baker Eddy; and in this recovery from what to all human resource, was a fatal injury, the portals of the unseen swung open, and a new realm of spiritual possibility was revealed.

Mrs. Eddy is the discoverer of the Principle, and the founder of the movement of Christian Science, and is its natural and necessary leader. By birth, by education, by native endowment, by the training that has come through experience, she has had such an experience as would fit her to bring to the world a message of truth. Born of an illustrious ancestry, reared in a home whose intellectual ideals were the highest, living in a time and an environment that was intense in its striving for ideals of freedom and truth, all these influences converged in her experience. With exceptional intellectual abilities, with a nature intensely spiritual, in all its motives and tendencies, trained in the school of adversity, purified in the furnace of affliction, her chastened consciousness was all prepared for the experience that came to her in the death-valley, when upon her awakened thought the Son of Righteousness arose with healing in His wings.

Christian Scientists, then, look to Mrs. Eddy with confidence, gratitude and love, for the good that has come to them through her teaching and work. I need not afront the intelligence of this audience to-day by deeming it necessary to cause and remark that Christian Scientists do not in any wise deify Mrs. Eddy; they do not worship her personality, they do not in any wise accord her divine honours, they do not regard her as another Christ. They simply accord to her the honour and confidence and love that is her meed as the discover of Christian Science, and as being to-day the logical, fitting and necessary leader of the movement that is carrying on its work.

Now, Christian Scientists have reached the full conviction that this teaching and this movement that is revolutionising human thought, that has carried its message to the four corners of the earth and the isles of the sea, is simply a revival of primitive Christianity, and is to usher in the Kingdom of God that was proclaimed and promised by Jesus.

Now, Jesus' mission was to declare the Truth; and His assurance was that to know this Truth would make men free. What then is the Truth that Jesus revealed? It could not have been anything vague, mysterious or difficult; for its early students and teachers were plain, unlettered fishermen. It must have been a practical, demonstrable understanding, for it enabled these disciples to practically apply it in works of healing the sick, reforming the sinner, and even raising the dead. Now, what shall be our definition of Truth to-day? Whatever our final conception of it, Truth must be that which represents things as they are, and the Truth in every phase of experience is practical to us only as it is revealed to us in a law of cause and effect. And it is finding in Jesus' teachings this law of cause and effect, in finding, in other words, the Principle that underlies His words and works, and the rule of its demonstration that Christian Science is bringing its message and doing its works to-day.

Then, if this be true, it only remains for us to grasp the divine Principle, or Cause, which Jesus taught, and understand our relation to this one supreme, infinite Cause, to bring forth in our experience the same divine results that appeared in the career of Jesus. He acknowledged no power, no intelligence, no life apart from God. He acknowledged, no power, no wisdom, no good, in Himself, but that of the Father working in Him.

Christian Science is based entirely on this fundamental Truth of God as All-in-All. God in Christian Science is defined not as limited Person, but as Indinite Principle, and by this is meant that God is Infinite Mind and is the creating, sustaining, controlling and directing Cause of all that is, and from this Cause, which is supreme Good, only effects which are good can come.

Now, we remember that God is Infinite Mind, and the energy and activity of mind is always and only expressed in thought; hence thought must be the mode of the Divine activity. And this being true, the universe itself is simply an expression of God's thought. His creating has been by thinking all things into being, and His thought constantly sustains their existence. And so it is that, according to Scripture, He "holdeth the winds in His fist," in His thought. So "in His hand"—in His thought—"is the soul of every living thing, and the breath of all mankind." And so it is in every sense literally true that we are God's thoughts, and that "in Him we live, move and have our being." The force that underlies all forces is the divine thought-force, and as the Source of this creating, sustaining, animating thought-force, God is the Divine Principle of the universe.

Then, if this be true, we must live in what is essentially a thought universe, dominated by thought-power, governed by thought-law, animated by thought-life. In other words, Mind accounts for all, and Mind controls all; but this Mind is divine, not human, and is expressed as Life, Truth and Love. But, human thought reflects the Intelligence and Energies of the Divine Mind; and as man understands his Divine Principle he can intelligibly correlate himself with divine energies, and gain their demonstration.

Through spiritual understanding man can find himself linked to limitless Life, Truth and Love, and prove them the controlling elements in every experience. The reign of Truth and Love constitute the kingdom of God, and their inspiration and activity are in the realm of human consciousness; all their essential elements are reflected in human thought, and this points the truth of Jesus' words "The kingdom of God is within you." Man is not himself the power, but as "ambassadors for Christ" we stand as the reflectors, the exponents of the power and love of God.

Jesus taught that prayer is the one means by which man comes into conscious communion with God and finds how to make the resources of God available. But if the Truth taught by Jesus was really an interpretation of the divine Principle and the spiritual law that governed God's creation, then prayer must have a scientific basis and a scientific method. And prayer must be vastly more than a petition. We cannot conceive that prayer can change the Infinite that prayer can induce God to do more than He has already done; but prayer must be the means, by which we come to realize what are the things which God has prepared for them that love Him.

Now, in finding the meaning of prayer we must keep clearly in view the truth embodied in this statement of Paul, that "All things are yours." And again, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him." Peter states the same truth when he says, "According as His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness." In other words, there is a realm of limitless resources to which we inherit a title; a promised land which is ours on this condition: "Every place which the sole of your feet shall tread upon" (which you shall reach with the advancing footsteps of understanding) "that have I given unto you." (Joshua 1; 13.)

Now, to perceive this Truth and to intelligently grasp it is to realize it, and so to bring these spiritual resources into demonstration, and if the teachings of Christianity are true, these resources will meet every possible need. This points the truth of the Master's words, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added." Then if there be waiting us such a heritage of spiritual treasure, such a wealth of Divine resources, our mental attitude should be that of claiming these treasures and affirming that we have them. That which God is offering us with out-stretched hands is ours, not to supplicate, but to receive.

Then the steps that reach the attainment of answered prayer, are these: First, a spiritual perception of our divine resources; second, a mental laying hold of these resources by affirming their reality, and our right to them; third, a continuing thus to affirm until our consciousness reaches the stage of a clear spiritual realisation; and this clearly held will in the words of Science and Health, "bring the things of life, Truth and love into a demonstration." To repeat, keeping clearly before us the truth that in the limitless treasures of God there is a present supply for every need, true prayer is a spiritual perception, an affirmation, a realization and a demonstration of these resources of Life and Love.

True prayer, then, seeks not to change God, but to know God. True prayer thinks not of interfering with or interrupting the reign of law, but of conforming to law. Such prayer, demonstrating the power and presence of the Infinite Love, proving God to be a "very present help in trouble," is not the expression of the thought that wishes and hopes to bring a divine intervention on the plane of our human condition, but that finds its way up to the plane of the divine condition. Such prayer recognising that the changeless conditions of the realm of spiritual reality are what they are because God is what He is, does not seek divine love to conform to us, but seeks to find how we may conform to divine love. And such prayer finds its answer in finding in God that which will satisfy every ambition, fulfil every ideal, supply every need; and in thus realizing the presence and power of Spirit, the human sense of matter and evil ceases to have even a seeming power to hold God's children in want, in sickness or sin.

Now, if what we have said be a true statement of the promise and conclusion of the Truth of Being, if God be the one efficient and sufficient Cause of all things, and if man have such an immediate abiding relation to God that he can always demonstrate the divine power and the divine Love as the controlling influence in every experience, then the whole teaching of Christian Science follows as a necessary sequence. In such a relation of cause and effect the scientific demonstration of the divine Principle will eliminate evil as either power or reality.

The question of the truth of the teaching of Christian Science is a matter not of theory but of demonstration. Those who have accepted Christian Science have done so not because of what Mrs. Eddy has said or of what Mrs. Eddy has done, except in so far as they have proven the correctness of her teaching in their lives. Christian Science does not rest on any philosophical argument wise or otherwise; it is not rooted primarily even in the teachings of Scripture, but in a practical experience. If Christian Scientists did not believe that this doctrine is founded upon Scripture and is the clear and explicit statement of the teachings of Jesus no such movement would to-day be in existence. But entirely apart from any question as to the credibility of the Scripture, or any theory of their interpretation, Christian Scientists have a practical basis for their faith in that they have again seen and felt and demonstrated its power in healing sickness, in destroying sin, and in bringing harmony out of discord in every relation of life. And so they have as the basis of their confidence the absolutely scientific foundation of a present experience rationally interpreted.

All through the Bible the ideal of spiritual attainment is pointed to as that which shall be achieved through knowledge. The prophet looks forward to the time when God shall write His law on men's minds and graven on their hearts; and no man shall say to his neighbour, know the Lord, for all shall know Him, from the least even unto the greatest. Jesus taught that to realize eternal life is to know God and His Christ. Paul holds out to us as the ideal of individual attainment that we are to all "come into the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." Such a knowledge must be nothing less than the understanding of God and the divine law of cause and effect by which man can prove the supremacy of Good; and this is Christian Science, and its unfolding, understanding and demonstration must bring the time when the "earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

At the conclusion of the lecture a gentleman arose and asked the privilege of a question. The question was, "Does Christian Science do away with the believing in Jesus Christ as a Saviour, any other sense than as a Mediator or Way-shower?" The lecturer replied that Jesus' redemption work was to show man how to do his own work, in working out his own salvation, but not to do it for him, or to relieve him of a single responsibility; that Jesus' mission was to reveal the truth, and to thus lift human thought and human affections to a spiritual plane, into conscious unity—at-one-ment — with God.

A further question was asked as to the Christian Scientists' belief regarding the punishment fo sin. The lecturer explained that the law is that "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap;" that suffering is the logical and necessary result of sin, and can only cease as sin is destroyed; that while Christian Science teaches that sin and evil are unreal, in the sense that God never made them, they will seem realities to the one who yields to their claims, until they have been overcome by the understanding of divine truth and love.

In answer to a further question the speaker explained that Jesus could only come when and as he did come, because the works of the saints and prophets of Israel who had preceded him was necessary to prepare thought to receive him, and to make it possible for such a character as the Virgin Mary to appear, to be the mother of the immaculate Jesus.

GOUGH'S Good Clothing

Is the Kind to Wear.

But don't confound good clothing with high-priced clothing. Some dealers may tell you that they sell as good, but a comparison will prove the fallacy of their claim. Come and see for yourself—be your own judge.

We want big business this month. To do it, and bring crowds here, we've made startling reductions throughout the entire store. A general slashing of prices is the order.

$7.00 FOR MEN'S SUITS

As fine and stylish and good looking suits in every particular as others are selling at $10. Better made than theirs at that price. And when you come right down to it, the making is what counts in clothes, as it does in a house or a watch.

$10.00 FOR MEN'S SUITS

We never had such a big season with $10 suits. Probably its because we never had such a big variety at that price. The coat with its high, broad shoulders is perfect fitting. You have no idea how popular it is.

$12.50 FOR MEN'S SUITS

We give as much attention to these suits as the average tailor does to the order made—and the chances are nine in ten that ours will fit better, wear longer and give all round satisfaction.

$15.00 FOR MEN'S SUITS

We are fortunate this season in having a better lot of fifteen dollar suits than we thought it possible to offer for that money. How smart the coats are. If any other store can duplicate a suit like it for $19, it is giving value for the money.

FAMOUS REBEL DEAD

Killing of Sarafoff, Macedonian Rebel Leader, Confirmed.

IN A SKIRMISH AT PRUVA.

He Was the Heart and Soul of the Revolutionary Movement—Popularly Believed to Be the Real Instigator of the Abduction of Miss Ellen Stone, the American Missionary—His Active Career.

Salonica, Oct. 17.—The report of the death of Boris Sarafoff, the famous Macedonia leader, is confirmed.

A despatch from Salonica Thursday said that it was reported that Boris Sarafoff was killed Oct. 12 in a skirmish at Pruva, near Florina.

He was popularly believed to be the real instigator of the abduction of Miss Ellen Stone, the American missionary, in September, 1901, in order to procure through her ransom funds to enable the Macedonian Revoluntionary Committee to organize the insurrection.

In 1895 Sarafoff formed a band of desperadoes to raid Turkish territory. Since then he headed nearly 400 daring raids into Turkey.

FOR THE ALGOMA CENTRAL.

Conmee and Bowman Allege Fraudulent Preference—Order to Restrain.

Toronto, Oct. 17.—Before Justice Maclaren, who sat at the request of Judge Britton in his stead, the case of Conmee and Bowman v. the Central Trust Co. of New York was advanced another stage. N. W. Rowell, K.C., obtained an export order restraining the defendants, their receiver or agents from taking possession of the Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway, and restraining the railway from delivering possession of the property to the Central Trust Co. of New York until Tuesday next, and until the motion, then to be made to continue, shall be disposed of. Liberty was also granted for the filing of further material.

A writ was also issued in this case in which it was claimed that certain mortgages given by the Algoma Central Railway to Speyer & Co. constituted a fraudulent preference in favor of the latter company. The mortgage mentioned are, one covering plant, rolling stock, telegraph wires, etc., for $6,750,000; another to secure a bond issue for $6,755,000, and a third for collateral security on a promisory note of $725,000.

Other creditors of the Algoma Central who are taking similar proceedings are: Everett and Coonor, Smith Bros., Talbot & Co., Spears and Anderson, and W. H. Plummer & Co.

Morristown, N. Y., October 19th. (Special.) — Vernon Bromley, now of this place, but formerly of Trenton, Ont., relates an experience that will prove of great interest to his old friends in Canada.

"I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism and Sciatica for years," Mr. Bromley states. "The citizens of Trenton will remember what a cripple I was. I could neither work nor lie down, the pain was so great.

"Reading of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills finally led me to try them, and from the second box I began to feel relief. I continued to use them until I had taken twelve boxes, when I was completely cured.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have made a new man of me."

Rheumatism and kindred diseases are caused by uric acid in the blood. If the kidneys are sound they will take all the uric acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make sound kidneys.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. AUSTRALIA'S BIRTH RATE.

An Ominous Condition of Affairs—Lessening Industrial Competition—How Will It All End Is the Question.

The Australian Commonwealth finds itself confropted by a new problem, says the Sydney correspondent of The London Globe. Under the dictation of the Labor Party the Federal Government has adopted a policy intended to discourage immigration of every description, white as well as colored, into the Federated States, and at the same time it has to deal with a rapidly declining birth rate, which, if not speedily remedied, will result in a largely decreased population. Recently published statistics show that the lowest Australian birth rate is only three per one thousand above that of France. A few years ago it was considerably higher; but the real decline is shown by the total number of births in wedlock compared with the number of women of child-bearing age. Without going into statistical details it may be mentioned that in New South Wales, between 1886 and 1901, the number of married women increased by 63,219, while the number of children born in 1901 was almost the same as in 1887. Taking the whole Commonwealth and New Zealand there are annually twenty thousand fewer births than there would have been had the birth rates of ten years ago been maintained. This shows a decline of two hundred thousand in the natural increase of Australian population during the decade.

It has also been ascertained that the average marriage age of Australasian women is steadily advancing. In 1881 it was twenty-two and a half years; in 1901 it was twenty-four years. This is regarded as an indication of a tendency to accept with reluctance the responsibilities of the marriage state; that the Australasian declining birth rate is due less to physical incapacity than to individual unwillingness. The New South Wales Government statistician, in connection with these very facts, remarks: "There have been very striking changes in the (birth) rates for the periods mentioned, and a persistent and astonishing decline among women of every class. It would seem that an increasingly large number of women make up their minds not to have children, or to delay child-bearing as long as possible. After each successive confinement, an increasing proportion of women, still of child-bearing age, cease to give birth to any more children, and the extraordinary condition of things has now come to pass that the fertility of women who have had two children is less than that of women who, in 1891, had nine children." There is no necessity for going into details, the broad facts are sufficient; but there is one point which has become overlooked by all concerned in the enquiry, and that is that the decline in the Australasian birth rate practically commenced with the discouragement of over-sea immigration, which was a means of systematically infusing fresh blood into Australasia.

The increasing reluctance of Australasian women to accept the responsibilities of maternity is traceable to several causes, one of the principal being the increasing love of pleasure. The numerous holidays and lessened hours of labor have strengthened the popular taste for outdoor amusement and weakened the feeling in favor of household enjoyment. Then the warm, sunny climate has a somewhat enervating effect on the younger population, which seems to pass the greater part of its existence in the open air. All this assists in loosening the ties of domestic life. There is too much holidaymaking and too little industrial occupation. Another difficulty consists in the early age at which Australasian children become emancipated from home control. The moment a boy or girl can earn a few shillings per week a start on their own account is made, followed by an early marriage, but no children. At holiday time nothing is more common than to find young married couples, unencumbered with families, taking part in excursions, picnics, and other forms of al fresco enjoyment. Where there are families most of the parents appear of middle age.

How will it all end? Here is a country capable of supporting the whole surplus populations of the British Isles and of Continental Europe, yet possessing fewer residents than the British metropolis, and ever seeking to become encircled by a wall to exclude the myriads ready to assist in tilling the hungry acres and developing the teeming mines. The great want of the Commonwealth is population, without which there can be no material advancement; yet, in the face of a rapidly declining birth rate, the Federal Government, in its fear of the hostility of the Labor Party, dare not open the door to willing immigrants, even from the mother country. The worst of it is that the states are powerless in the matter. If Queensland wants a few hundred agricultural laborers she cannot have them without the consent of the Federal Government. The states, in blindly accepting federation without proper safeguards, have virtually parted with their birthrights for a mess of pottage. Yet, how different was everything a few years ago. Then the burden of the song was increasing population, expanding industrial conditions, and rapidly growing resources; but then the Labor Party with its love of extravagant public expenditure and restrictive industrial legislation had not possession of the reins of power.

A Canadian by Birth.

One of London's best-known poster designers is a Canadian by birth. John Hassall, whose humorous work is all over the British billboards, sent some sketches up to a London weekly, whose editor astonished him by accepting them. This gave Hassall the ambition to become a great artist; he studied three years on the Continent, and then came to London to do so. He succeeded quickly, and his name is now known nearly all the world over. Most of his ideas (says a writer in Pearson's Magazine) are got from real life. The Underground Railway offers a great field for the gathering of ideas, and when he feels quite bankrupt of suggestions he takes himself in that direction, and, sometimes in a first class, then in a third, he will sit the whole length of the line round, looking about him to see what his fellow-passengers are like. Later the public has a laugh over his "finds."

TO WATCH WHALERS

CANADIAN STEAMER WENT TO HUDSON BAY TO STOP POACHING.

Made Good Time to Northern Labrador—A Silence of Nearly Twelve Months—Only Six of the American Whalers Remain at Present, But More Than 30 Vessels From New Bedford Were Formerly in the Industry.

The steamer Neptune, of St. John's, Nfld., chartered by the Canadian Government to convey the Low-Moodie expedition, under Dominion Government auspices, to Hudson Bay, has been making good time. She left Halifax on Aug. 22, and six days later called at Nachvak, on Northern Labrador, where she embarked an interpreter. From that point she was to steam north to Cumberland Inlet, in quest of information as to the movements of the American whalers, and then, entering Hudson Strait, would proceed to her winter quarters, near Marble Island, on the northwest coast, near to the musk-ox country, which the white man has never penetrated. After dropping letters at Nugava Bay about Sept. 20, which should have reached St. John's, Nfld., by Oct. 10, nothing more will be heard from her until July next, a period of nearly twelve months.

One of the chief objects of her visit to Hudson Bay is to drive out the American whalers, who have been poaching there for many years. About thirty years ago a fleet of more than twenty vessels from New Bedford hunted the cetaceans there, but, owing to their becoming scarcer, the fleet has dwindled down to six. These are engaged there now, and letters for them were sent on by the Neptune. It is presumed that the missives contain instructions for the captains as to how they should act in the event of being ordered to quit, and it is probable that they were instructed to make no trouble, but to submit to the inevitable.

These craft sometimes remain there two or three years. The creature they hunt is the bowhead or Greenland whale, the most valuable species of all, whose "whalebone" is worth $12,000 a ton. An adult male yields about fifteen hundredweight and also about fourteen tons of oil, worth $120 a ton.

The whalers harbor in Chesterfield Inlet or Roe's Welcome, a fiord running north, all the winter, and begin the chase of the whales in the spring, the bowheads being believed to enter the bay in June, and after cruising there all summer they return to the Atlantic in the autumn before the Hudson Strait becomes blocked with ice, as the whale, being a mammal, requires a clear area in order to come to the surface to breathe every ten minutes or so.

It is rather a curious fact that the Americans prosecute the whale fishery only in Hudson Bay, while the Scotch have an equally exclusive enjoyment of that in Cumberland Gulf, outside Hudson Strait. Formerly a few Scotch whalers entered the bay and the Americans had a station on the gulf. But the Scotch abandoned the former fishery and the Americans recently sold out their station to their Scotch rivals, the two industries being now pursued under different flags, though on the same general lines and with the aid of natives as a prime consideration.

The whalers now all employ the Eskimos as part of their crews. These natives made first-class boatmen and expert harpooners, and are honest and earnest. They transfer their whole tribe, with their paraphernalia, to the vicinity of a whaler's anchorage, and sign to help the crew for a weekly ration of four pounds of ship's biscuit, one-quarter pound of coffee, two pounds of molasses and four plugs of tobacco. Other articles they procure by trading musk ox, caribou or seal skins or wairns of narwhal ivory therefor.

They have lost their ancient arts of chasing these creatures with arrow or harpoon and are no longer proficient in the fashioning or use of the crude weapons of former years. They have come to rely upon the white man's weapons, rifles especially, and they handle these proficiently, but without a grasp of the principles underlying them, so that if the whalers were to be driven away and the Eskimos deprived of the opportunity of replenishing their stores of weapons, ammunition and minor necessaries, they would soon be reduced to the most desperate straits.

The crews of the whalers no longer live on the ships during the winter, but ashore with the Eskimos, using the same food—seal, walrus, and whale meat, with venison, bear meat, sea birds and fish to vary it. Salt food is absolutely barred. It produces scurvy very soon, the condition accelerated all too often by the indulgence in alcohol common to sailors. Scores of graves in every harbor attested the fell work done in foul smelling, ill-ventilated cabins, with little or no exercise taken for months. But now the native mode of life is adopted and the mortality is very slight.

The Scotch whaling enterprise in Cumberland Gulf is prosecuted from two shore stations, ships not being employed at all, except to visit the posts annually and unload stores there, taking away the products in exchange. These stations are at harbors called Blacklead and Kekerbon, and are owned by Messrs. Noble of Aberdeen, who have maintained them for upward of 40 years.

Each station has a Scotch manager, all the rest of the employes being Eskimos, a tribe of these, about one hundred and fifty souls, being settled around each station. Mr. Milne, the chief factor in charge at Blacklead, has been living there for more than thirty years, and has made only one trip to Scotland in the whole period. Mr. Mulch, a younger man, is factor at Kekerbon.

Each post has a substantial dwelling and stores for the chief, and is supplied with six first-class whaleboats, with the finest modern outfits, everything being kept in the finest order. The Eskimos are very teachable, and have no vices, and are a complete contrast to the riotous crews of the whaling vessels, who are the scum of the seafaring world. At both Blacklead and Kekerbon similar establishments were maintained by the Americans until 1894, when they sold out to the Scotch, after having operated there continuously for over thirty years.

In Cumberland Gulf whales are got off the edge of the ice in the spring, when they are on their way north, and feed for some time off the mouth of the inlet, on the animalculae which abound there. They are again found there in the autumn, as they come south from the higher latitudes, being driven away by the freezing over of the seas.

CONDITION OF THE INDIANS.

Superintendent of Indian Affairs Talks of the Race Problems.

Mr. Frank Pedley, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, recently stated that the Indian population of Canada, which was about 103,000, was holding its own numerically. The Indians were, however, suffering to some extent in their transition from their aboriginal state to that of a higher civilization. Tuberculosis was the disease which was most common among them, and he thought that the new conditions under which the redmen were living might have much to do with the prominence of the disease. They were now largely living in houses, and tent life was being discontinued. The Indians were formerly great meat eaters, and when living so much in the open the meat which they consumed benefited them. Now, when they were more confined, and unaccustomed to the conditions under which the white people consumed their food, disadvantages arose. Last year the Indians between Qu'Appelle and Battleford had raised over 40,000 bushels of grain. They had their own implements, including threshing machinery. This condition of affairs was becoming more common among the Indians of the Dominion.

In discussing the future of the Canadian Indian said: "The Indians of Canada are fusing with the whites, and I believe a hardy race will result. The struggle of transition from the primitive methods to modern ones has been hard on the redmen, but I believe the difficulty is over. Take the Indians west of Edmonton—they are working well, and last year raised over 47,000 bushels of grain. This fusion of races is going all over the Dominion, and the result is gratifying and speaks well for those who have controlled the destinies of the red man."

To-day the various tribes had over $4,000,000 on deposit in charge of the Department, $1,000,000 of which belonged to the Six Nation Indians on the Grand River.

Canada's Mineral Development.

The development of mining in Canada may not be as rapid as the richness of our heritage in mineral wealth seems to warrant, yet it continues steadily from year to year and holds out abundant promise for the near future. The Canadian Mining Manual has reached, with the current issue, the thirteenth year of its publication, and the statistical record presented is certainly encouraging, if not as great in aggregates as some have felt inclined to expect. The total value of the mineral products of the Dominion for 1892 was materially reduced by the shrinkage in the market price of copper, silver, and lead, and there was also a considerable reduction in the gold output from the Yukon. Yet, in spite of these influences, there was a satisfactory increase in the aggregate. The total output of metallic and non-metallic minerals for 1902 was valued at over $70,000,000 as compared with $69,209,305 during the previous year. Nova Scotia leads in the record of the Provinces, with an output of $19,501,180, and British Columbia is second, with $17,486,550. This is a reversal of the record of the previous year, when British Columbia led, with $20,086,780, and Nova Scotia was third, with $18,000,000, the Yukon holding second place, with $18,500,000.

Ontario holds third place, with $13,577,440, a gain of over $2,000,000 compared with the previous year, and the output of the Yukon $12,600,000, is fourth in the record of Provinces and Territories. Quebec produced to the value of $4,000,000, Alberta, Manitoba, and the other Territories $2,515,958, and New Brunswick about $1,000,000. The year was one of exceptional activity in the production of coal and coke, iron and steel, nickel, copper, and asbestos. The total production of coal for the year was 6,550,528 tons, of which 4,725,480 tons were mined in Nova Scotia, while British Columbia contributed over a million and a quarter tons. Over two million tons of bituminous coal were exported, but there was a total importation of 3,806,129 tons of bituminous and 951,883 tons of anthracite.

Mr. Barrie's Little Joke.

James M. Barrie, the famous Scottish author, who is very shy at social functions or banquets, and can hardly be induced to either converse freely or utter a speech, is not above poking fun at himself. On one occasion there appeared in the Scots Observer a brilliant lampoon in which Mr. Barrie was represented as attending a public dinner, keeping every one in roars of laughter with his unceasing stream of wit and epigram, and finally ending up by making the speech of the evening. When a certain literary friend of Mr. Barrie's saw this wickedly clever piece of satire, his indignation knew no bounds, and he rushed into print demanding by all the outraged gods that the author of this infamous article should straightway disclose himself, and be dealt with accordingly. But, alas for the well-meaning friend, the author was none other than Mr. Barrie himself.

When Queen Victoria Was a Child.

Among the many stories told of the childhood of Queen Victoria is one of a visit make with her mother at Wentworth House in Yorkshire. While there the Princess delighted in running about by herself in the gardens and shrubberies.

One wet morning soon after her arrival the old gardener, who did not then know her, saw her about to descend a treacherous bit of ground from the terrace and called out:

"Be careful, miss; it's slape!" a Yorkshire word for slippery.

The ever curious Princess, turning her head, asked, "What's slape?" and at the same instant her feet flew from under her and she came down.

The old gardener ran to lift her saying as he did so, "That's slape, miss."—Youth's Companion.

WHEN A QUEEN WAS MADE

By CURRAN R. GREENLEY

Copyrighted, 1903, by T. C. McClure

Night in Venice. The day was done, but the merriment only waxed the louder with the coming of the stars. There was glitter of golden banners along the Grand canal and the silent hurrying of many gondolas, for Venice was en fete. The treaty with Cyprus had been formally ratified, and that day the republic had formally adopted the slim patrician maid, daughter of Venice, that she might become the mother of kings to be.

A great destiny for the shy child of scarce fourteen years. But as Caterina leaned from her casement, the golden hair falling down the wall in a nimbus light, her thoughts were not of King James de Lusignan nor that storied kingdom of Cyprus oversea, not of them, for maiden thoughts are white winged birds that go where they list, but of one slender youth whose eyes sought hers across the darkness, where he stood in the shadow of the closed portals of the Morosini palazzo across the canal, so near that he could note the gleam of the scarlet light on the golden head, so far that the sword of a nation's destiny flashed between them. A king's bride—what chance had he, Andrea Morosini, cavalier and poet, and a Morosini, the ancient enemy of her house?

There had been days when old Cornaro's daughter had watched concealed behind her casement draperies to see him go forth with the young knights. There had been soft starlit nights when he had watched that selfsame casement and poured forth his soul to the silken sweet tones of his lute. One night when her nurse nodded drowsily the small white hand had dropped a great languorous white rose into the prow of his gondola, and after that there had been a moment in the great cathedral when he had pressed close and held the little hand for a moment in his. That was all, and there could be no more for Cornaro's child, the daughter of Venice, but the lad had dreamed his dreams and gone merrily forth to battle with the Genoese. It had been a month, a long month, when he returned, and all the bells were ringing in honor of Caterina.

The twilight died, but the blaze of festal beacons flashed from tower to tower. Over there in the Cornaro palazzo there was a perfect carnival of music and laughter. Andrea's face grew whiter in the reflected glare. He could see as the breeze blew aside the curtains many figures passing to and fro in that upper room. They were robing for her sacrifice in that maiden chamber that had been his heart's shrine for two long years.

No longer a Venetian maiden, the ceremony that would presently take place before the high altar of St. Mark's would make her a crowned queen. Well, he would go to the wars again. There was always the Genoese to battle with. He might even win the holy sepulcher.

Was there no way? He would have given his soul for one word with her face to face. Andrea flung the lute far out, where it sank into the dark waters. He would never need it again. Overhead all the bells of Venice called to one another, and the lap, lap of the tide sobbed beneath as the under note of human pain that beats a miner tone to all the joy of life.

Caterina stood up straight and tall in the midst of her maidens. The jewsled robe fell close to the round, young limbs, heavy with its weight of pearls. Pearls and rubies were twined in the golden curls, and the fair, round arms were banded with glowing gems of the orient. Across the childish breast, above the folds of cloth of gold, a baldric of emeralds rose and fell with every frightened breath, and the wild rose color was gone from cheek and quivering lip.

Straight and tall in her young majesty, but over the blare of the trumpet, the flash of the jewels, deeper than the voice of Venice in loud acclaim, came the low note of a lute that was stilled forever. There was a strangeness in her throat, a blackness before her eyes. Awed at her silence, the flock of maidens fell a little away from where she stood, and then there came an old woman, bowed and weary, through the velvet portals.

When the attendants would have barred the way Caterina held out her hand. As the old woman bowed before her she opened the palms of her brown hands an instant, so quickly that none saw but Caterina, who drew a quick breath and turned to the waiting throng with a new authority. "Leave us. I would have speech with the dame alone."

Wondering, they left her, and as the door clanged to the old woman slipped the iron bar into place and then stood up, the gray wig thrown off, the woman trappings cast aside, Andrea Morosini.

One step toward Caterina, and he held out his arms. With a low, glad cry she nestled into them, and for one long moment of heaven his lips lay on hers, while below the Grand canal pulsated with the music and triumph of a queen's bridal.

The seconds ticked away. There was no past, no future. Then St. Mark's called to the outermost mole, and the sound of feet came along the stone corridor, pausing at the barred door. Caterina started and paled. Her father, the Cornaro! The steps died away. Then a noise behind them startled them. Not ten paces Guido Cornaro leaned on his great sword, and their frightened eyes were met with a look so stern that for a time they were speechless. He had entered through a door of which Caterina had no knowledge, built by some jealous Cornaro of long ago, who had caused this place of espial to be made that he might the better prove his fears. Indeed they might all have been carven stone. There was no motion in the room but the waving of the arras in the evening breeze that blew through the casement—the slender youth in his cavalier garb of dark velvet, the stern mailed old patrician and between them, like some tropic flower blown athwart strange gray glooms, Caterina in her bridal robes of cloth of gold, the coronal of rubies blazing above her brow.

Andrea bowed low before the ancient foe of the house and, with one last lingering look at Caterina, awaited the Cornaro's pleasure. He had dared the strictest law of the republic. He knew the penalty.

Cornaro hesitated. There were wrath, love and mighty sorrow in his stormy eyes as they went from one young face to the other. A Morosini, the child of his deadliest foe! But he saw through the mist of long, lonely years a little rosy face pressed against a childish breast, a little head that lay within the curve of a round, white arm, so like, so like, and Guilia, who had died, spoke across the night of her unlived motherhood to the heart of her husband. The wrath died. He was powerless. He could not brook the might of the republic that claimed his child upon the altar of its ambition, but he could save her needless pain.

Already the surge of feet was coming up the long passage. The fanfare of trumpets and the voice of Venice, that was many voices, clamored for their princess. Below the gilded barge of the doge awaited her. Nevermore his child, but always the daughter of Venice.

There was an instant when the golden head lay against the steel corselet, another when Guido Cornaro saw his child give her lips to the Morosini, and then he flung wide the door to the secret passage and motioned to Andrea.

And so without a word he passed from her sight and her life, while her father led her down the rose garlanded stairway to the bitterness of the gilded mockery that awaited.

There was a battle next day, a mere skirmish between a Venetian war galley and one of Genoa. At its close they found him lying where the thick of the fight had passed, a smile on his lips, a crushed white rose above his heart. In Venice the people laughed and sang, and there was joy day and night for the week long bridal of Caterina Cornaro, the daughter of Venice, and King James de Lusignan.

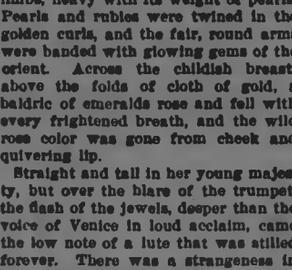
LONG BROS.

James Long, No. 338, George street, H. Long's Palm Gardens, No. 414 George.



Sickness steals more savings than the burglar. Slowly, coin by coin, the money that has been so hardly earned is paid out for drugs and doctors. Sickness is the worst enemy of the working man, and the common cause of the working man's sickness is disease of the stomach often involving the heart, lungs, liver, or kidneys.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will stop the stealing of the savings by sickness. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures diseases of heart, liver, lungs, kidneys, etc., when these diseases are caused by the diseased condition of the stomach and its allied organs.

"About two years ago I began to have trouble with my stomach," writes Wm. Connolly, of 325 Walnut Street, Lorain, Ohio. "It got so bad I had to lay off quite often two and three days in a week, my stomach would bloat, and I would belch up gas, and was in awful distress at such times. I have employed and been treated by the best doctors in the city but got no help whatever. By some way or other I happened to get hold of a vial of your 'Pellets,' and I thought they helped me. It was then I wrote to you for advice. You told me that by my symptoms you thought I had liver complaint, and advised the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' in connection. These medicines I have taken as directed, and am very happy to state that I commenced to get better from the start and have not lost a day this summer on account of my stomach. I feel tiptop, and better than I have for ten years."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate the bowels.

WOMEN AT SALOON BARS.

The closer the investigations into the drinking habits of women, the more startling are the revelations which they bring, says an English exchange.

The public house, according to one publican who keeps a suburban hotel, has now become a refuge for courting couples and a place where mothers spend the money they are supposed to save in the Saturday night's shopping.

"Whenever it is raining," he said, "the saloon bars are full of young men and women, who stay hour after hour. On Saturday night I have frequently seen more women than men in the saloon bar, to which there is a side entrance.

"The working-class woman is not the only one who takes little children into public houses. In my house I have seen half a dozen well dressed children, who sit on the lounges and take up the room required by grown up people. The women are of the middle-class type, and I have noticed that, beginning with one visit a week, they eventually pay a visit almost every night. Some come every night, call for their own drinks, and, in more than one instance, have stood up at the bar like the men.

Shameful Sight.

Enquiries in the city show that it is quite a common practice for young factory girls of a superior type to meet on Friday nights at favorite public houses and take turns in "standing" drinks, which generally take the form of port wine. Very frequently half a quartern is taken home by each of the girls.

The craving for drink is of so insidious a character that they imagine that the "faint" feeling of which they complain is a sign that a stimulant is needed. They grow up to look upon drink as the panacea for all the ills that they are heir to.

Medical officers are unanimous in the opinion that the drinking habits of women result in the birth of feeble children. In the north country towns the infantile death rate is terrible. Dr. Greenwood, of Blackburn, recently informed the town council that 226 out of 1,000 babies born in the borough do not live to be a year old.

More than half the deaths in Darlaston are those of children who have not reached the age of five. In Leicester, out of an average of sixty deaths each week, twenty are those of children. In Birkenhead 178 out of every 1,000 children born die before they are a year old.

Offspring of Drink.

The offsprings of drink are insanity, pauperism, epilepsy, and feeblemindedness. In London there are 2,000 epileptics and about 100,000 paupers, and all over the country there are 110,000 lunatics.

The chairman of a school board attendance committee in the suburbs informed an Express representative that 75 per cent. of the cases of irregular attendance were caused through the drunken habits of the mothers, some of whom appear before the committee in a crying state of inebriety.

"No one," he says, "knows better than a school attendance officer, what havoc the drinking habits of the mothers play with the children, who are deprived of food, boots and maternal care—which includes cleanliness—while mothers have carousals at each other's houses.

"The Child Messenger Act did a great good, but it has not stopped the drinking among women. Their at homes' take the form of a drinking bout, towards the expenses of which they all contribute, each taking a turn in fetching the liquor."

Court Room Repartee.

In a suit relating to brewery property reported in Case and Comment an eminent and very dignified counselor was one day reading to the court some manuscript affidavits which were not overlegible and by mistake read the word "mash" as "wash." Counsel on the other side, who was small of stature and polite in manner, but keen in intellect and frequently sarcastic, was immediately on his feet and, with a somewhat irritating deference of manner, begging his opponent's pardon, etc., asked liberty to suggest that the word which the eminent counselor read "wash" was really "mash." Somewhat nettled, the counselor thus corrected thanked him for the information and added that he was not himself very familiar with terms used in the brewery business, as he had never spent much of his time in a place of that kind. "Are we to understand, then," said his opponent in the suavest manner, "that the eminent counselor wishes us to infer that his early days were spent in a laundry?"

Henley's Library to Be Sold.

The library of the late W. E. Henley will soon be sold. Many of its volumes have interesting autograph inscriptions. Apropos of Henley's books The London Morning Post tells this story: "Mr. Henley once unconsciously illustrated one of his own arguments rather well. He had been talking of versions of poems by Burns, which were said to be final because they had been written by the poet and given to his friends long after they had been published in his books. 'You know,' he said to one of the company who sometimes wrote verses, 'that if you are suddenly asked to make a copy of a poem you did and finished with years ago you are quite likely to include one or two things that were in the original version, but were afterward altered. You never can remember exactly.' Later in the afternoon—it was at Muswell Hill, in the house that faced the scene of the famous murder—a man produced a first edition of the 'Book of Verses,' published by Mr. David Nutt in 1888, and asked Mr. Henley to copy on the fly leaf the poem, 'Bring her again, O western wind,' which has so often been set to music. He consented, broke down in the first verse, and had to consult the text. When he had finished the task his friend complained that the sixth line of the eight which make the poem was altogether spoiled by the changing of a single word. Somebody was there who had seen the poem before anybody save its author, and was able to explain, 'That was how it was in the first version.' Mr. Henley had made exactly the slip which he had suggested Burns might have made sometimes in similar circumstances."

London's Street Vehicles.

It is an odd reflection on the sixty years' development of the railway system that the road beats the railway easily in London. The street vehicles travel twenty times as far as the train every day, and carry more passengers. It may seem incredible, but it is perfectly true, that the street vehicles of London accomplish a journey every day equal to twenty times around the earth. It is startling, in contrast with this, that the trains cover only 25,000 miles, but the explanation is, of course, the simple fact that for every train there are about fifty other vehicles.

There are always running in London between 4,000 and 5,000 'buses and trams, carrying 1,600,000 passengers every day, and when all these are full there is room left for nearly 12,000 cabs, for which 700 stands are provided. "Cabby," one of the best abused men in the great metropolis—often enough deserving it—drives 120,000 people about London every day.

Strange Postal Facts.

The Postmaster-General of Great Britain, speaking at the dinner of the Newspaper Society, said on an average ten letters daily went to the Dead Letter Office having no address, and 1,000 registered letters were returned daily through being insufficiently addressed. These letters contained £600,000 or £700,000 in money in the course of a year. Millions of postal packets could not be delivered because of the incorrectness of the addresses.

THE LATEST NEWS OF LOCAL SPORT.

RUGBY.

The situation in the City Rugby League is becoming decidedly interesting, the game on Saturday between the Britannias and the All Saints resulting somewhat differently to what had been predicted. The All Saints team was minus the services of Ford, and the game put up by them was of a quality much inferior to that which chacterized the previous game in which they figured. The Britannias were the victors, the score being 7—0. This makes the situation a complex one; first the Rough Riders defeated the Britannias by a large score, they then played the All Saints, the result being a tie—10 all.

The Britannias had the best of the game all through, the score at half time being 3—0, and during the second period the play was confined entirely to the All Saint's end, the ball not passing beyond the centre line. The scoring in this half was all done by the Brits., who secured 4, making the final figures 7—0.

Next Saturday the first game of the second round will be played between the Rough Riders and Britannias and a game of especial interest is expected. The game on Saturday was refereed by Mr. Hal. Burnham, with Mr. W. Crowley umpire. The teams lined up as follows:—

All Saint's—Back, Campbell; halves, Thornton, Cranfield, Dusty; quarter, Gillespie; snap, Robertson; wings, Gilbert, Hopkins, Roddy, Pedlar, Cunniff, Adamson.

Britannias—Back, Boucher; halves, Hodgson, Quinlan, McFarlane; quarter, Walkey; snap, Mulhern; wings, Bolleghem, Harmer, Ferguson, Sawers, Fitzpatrick, Miller.

Kingston, Oct. 14.—The new Eastern Hockey League appears to be an assured fact. AN ITALIAN INJURED AT CEREAL DAM.

An accident occurred this morning about 11.30 at the Cereal Dam, by which Anthony Olverstar, an Italian, had his left leg broken between the knee and ankle. The injured man was attending the push cars used in conveying earth to the different parts of the works, and a rail over which a car was passing, springing up struck him on the leg with the above result.

He suffered great pain all afternoon, and Dr. McCullough was called about three o'clock, and after an examination deemed it advisable to have him removed to the hospital for treatment, consequently the ambulance was called and the injured man taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Olverstar lived in the boarding house at the dam along with his fellow-countrymen.

THE CHURCHES.

ALL SAINT'S CHURCH.

Rev. H. C. Dixon of Toronto, preached in All Saints church last night to a large congregation, his subject being "Where there not ten cleansed, but where are the nine?" His sermon was a very practical one and in the course of his remarks he referred to the work of the Diocesan Missions. At the offertory Miss Helen Davies sang very sweetly "The Voice of the Eternal."

CHARLOTTE STREET CHURCH.

At the Charlotte street church yesterday the services were of a thanksgiving character. Rev. W. J. Jolliffe took for his subject in the morning "Foresight and Forebodings," and in the evening "How can we reconcile the goodness of God and suffering?" At the morning service the choir rendered the anthem "O Lord, How Manifold," Barnby, and during offertory Miss Belleghem and Mr. Mitchell sang a duet. In the evening the Anthem was Buck's Jubilate Deo, Miss Belleghem taking one solo and Mr. W. Stocker the other. After the lesson Miss Belleghem sang very effectively, "Come Thou Saint," by Millard, and during offertory Mr. J. Laurence rendered Piccolomini's "Ora Pro Nobis," and delighted the audience with his rich tenor voice.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.

The illustrated lecture to be given in St. Luke's church to-night by Rev. H. C. Dixon, of Toronto, promises to be a very interesting one. The lecturer will take for his subject "Ben Hur," and in illustrating it over one hundred views will be used. Mr. Dixon is a very fluent speaker, and will no doubt make his lecture a very enjoyable one.

The services in St. Luke's yesterday were especially interesting. That in the morning was made so by the sermon being preached by Rev. H. C. Dixon, of Toronto, the Diocesan Missionary Secretary, who preached a very eloquent sermon on the miracle of the loaves and fishes. Mr. Dixon is a most convincing and earnest speaker, and presented the truths in an especially effective manner. He urged his hearers to consecrate their lives to the service of Christ. The Rector, Rev. E. A. Langfeldt preached in the evening to a large congregation.

MURRAY STREET BAPTIST.

There was special thanksgiving music at the Murray street Baptist church at both services yesterday. In the morning the anthem was "O Lord, How Manifold," by McFarren, while during the offertory Mrs. Rehill gave a solo, "There's a Beautiful Land on High." At the evening service the anthem was "O Be Joyful," by Sheckner, the duet passages being taken by Miss Florence Hall and Mrs. Rehill. During the offertory Miss Hall sang, "I will Extoll Thee," by Costa.

ELECTRICAL CURRENT WROUGHT INJURY.

The Residence and Stable of Mr. R. W Waters of Norwood, Struck by Lightning.

The electric storm of Thursday night was luckily much less severe in Peterborough than in some other parts of the county. At Norwood the residence of Mr. R. W. Walters was struck by lightning, as was also the stable, and, by the most remarkable of circumstances, these two buildings were struck at different times, and they were the only ones in the town damaged in the slightest. All the members of the family were in the house at the time, but, fortunately no one was injured, although in the stable a valuable pony belonging to Mr. Walters was paralyzed by the shock, and its complete recovery is doubtful. Starting at the peak at the gable end facing south the current divided into three branches. One went straight to the ground, shattering the side. One took the west, passed down, and the third took a stud half way down and then swerved to jump to a post in an adjacent shed. This was followed in a few minutes by another and more severe explosion, which struck one of the chimneys of the house, and in addition to smashing it, it tore a hole in the wall for a distance of about eight feet. Entering the house it ran along a string of stovepipes, breaking and twisting them into almost unrecognizable shapes. Instead of following the pipes to the stove, as would have been expected, the current left them at an elbow, cutting the seam off as clean as a pair of shears would have done. After having left the pipes, the current struck the upper corner of a window sash and, running downwards, shattered the sill, upon which, but a minute before, Mr. A. Campbell, Mr. Walter's Clerk, had been resting. He had just returned to his bed when the deadly current struck the spot upon which he had been leaning. His escape was marvellous, as indeed was that of the whole family. It is very fortunate, too, that neither the house nor the stable were burned. Both the buildings were insured, but it is doubtful if a sufficient amount will be recovered to make good the damage to the buildings, not to speak of the injury done to the pony, which is probably permanently disabled.

RIVER ROAD, OTONABEE.

Addresses and Presentations to Mr. Alex. and Miss J. Savigny.

Owing to the fact that Mr. Alex. Savigny and Miss J. Savigny, are leaving Otonabee this week to make their future home in Peterborough, about sixty of their friends surprised them on Monday evening, October 5th, by going to their home to spend an evening with them before their departure, and to show their appreciation of their work whilst among them by giving to each a handsome present. To Miss Savigny they gave a clock and Bible and Presbyterian Hymnal, and to Mr. Savigny a gold-headed cane. The addresses were read by Mr. George Stewart, and the presentations made respectively by Mrs. J. Hanbidge and Mr. Robert Deyell. Very fitting replies were made by both Mr. and Miss Savigny, and a pleasant evening was spent, during which refreshments were served. The following are the addresses:

Dear Mr. Savigny,—We, the people amongst whom your lot has been cast for so many pleasant years, have heard with regret that you are going to leave us. For many years you have lived and worked among us, actively engaged in Church and Sunday School work.

Your upright life has been an inspiration to many and you will be greatly missed by all.

We feel that we can never repay you for the help you have so freely given but we wish you to accept this cane as a slight token of our appreciation, and hope that as you use it happy recollections of the givers will constantly arise.

Our pathways must henceforth be separate but we pray that God will lead us all safely Home at last, where there will be no more parting.

Signed on behalf of the Sunday School,
GEORGE STEWART,
ROBERT DEYELL,
ROBERT HANBIDGE,
ALEXANDER STEWART.

Dear Miss Savigny,—

It is with deep regret that we learn of your decision to leave the neighbourhood, in which you have resided and worked for so many years — years which have endeared you to us all. In our Sunday school you have always been a faithful worker, and your faithfulness has always been a source of encouragement to others engaged in the work. Your Christian excellence has always been an example to us many a time when we felt discouraged at our failures; and your influence will long be felt as a great force in our midst, although you are absent from us.

Your resignation will leave a vacancy in our school which will be hard to fill. The pleasant associations which we hoped might be continued through years to come, must end, even though our desires would have it otherwise. Your life among us will be looked back upon as one in which all duties were well performed.

Feeling that we can never repay you for your help in our Sunday school and church, we hope that we may at least show you that we do not pass it unnoticed. We would therefore ask you to accept this small gift as a token of our appreciation.

Since we must say "Good-bye," we would call to remembrance the fact that "we cannot drift beyond God's love and care," and pray that the conscious presence of our Great Leader may follow you wherever your new pathway may lead.

Signed on behalf of the Sunday School,
GEORGE STEWART,
ROBERT DEYELL,
ROBERT HANBIDGE,
ALEXANDER STEWART.

The Young People's Mutual Improvement Society met on the 8th, with the new officers all in their places. After the opening exercises the topic for the evening was taken up, and made very interesting by Miss May Hanbidge, it being "The Life of Abraham." Rev. J. G. Lewis was present and added some helpful remarks, and a solo was given by Mr. Will Hanbidge, after which the business of the evening was transacted. It was decided to hold a public Thanksgiving service on the 15th. The meeting was then brought to a close by Rev. Mr. Lewis.

CANADIANS PROTEST AGAINST THE DECISION.

Leave the Room on the Signing of the Alaska Award.

Sir Louis Jette and Mr. A. B. Aylesworth Strongly Mark Their Disapproval—They Would Not Sign the Document—The Others Signed the Paper.

London, Oct. 20.—The draft decision of the Alaskan Boundary Commission was signed last night. A. B. Aylesworth, K.C., and Sir Louis Jette, the two Canadian Commissioners, refused to sign.

The decision grants all the American contentions with the exception of the one relating to the Portland Canal. The signatories were Lord Alverstone, Senator Turner and Secretary Root, the American Commissioners. They consituted a majority and ensured finality.

A. B. AYLESWORTH, K.C.

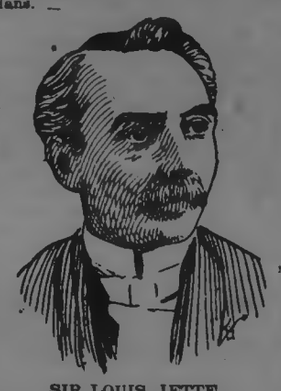
Messrs. Aylesworth and Jette carried their outspoken disapproval of the decision to the point of refusing to sign even that section of the decision giving the Portland Canal to Canada, and they emphasized their attitude by walking out of the Cabinet room in the Foreign Office before the signatures of the others had been affixed to the historic document.

The only thing remaining to be done at this session is that the majority of the tribunal complete and sign the map which accompanies the decision, and which minutely determines the course of the boundary in accordance with the American contentions, contained in question No. 5.

The engrossed copy of the decision also will be signed on Tuesday. There is no hope expressed that the Canadian Commissioners will reconsider their attitude.

After a brief secret session yesterday morning the Alaskan Boundary Commissioners drove to Buckingham Palace, where they were received by King Edward, who had previously been informed of the terms of the agreement by the tribunal.

The King's reception of the Commissioners was a very simple affair. His Majesty congratulated them on the conclusion of their labors, and was especially cordial to the Canadians.



SIR LOUIS JETTE.

The Alaska decision will not be publicly given out before to-day.

Mr. Sifton Was Absent.

London, Oct. 20.—(C.A.P.)—At the Goldsmiths Company banquet to the Commissioners last night the absence from the gathering of Clifford Sifton, Canadian Minister of the Interior, was noticeable.

Mr. Aylesworth in a speech emphasized the hope that Canadians would soon be no more strangers in London "than the man from Shropshire."

Regarded as a Sop.

London, Oct. 20.—(C.A.P.)—King Edward's reception of A. B. Aylesworth and Sir Louis Jette yesterday is regarded as a sop to Canadian feeling.

Not Till To-Day.

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—In the House yesterday Hon. Mr. Haggart asked if any information had been received as to any award being made by the Alaskan Commission. Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied: "We have no official information upon this question, but it is expected that an award upon the reference will be made to-morrow by the commission."

The mountain line adopted as the boundary, lies so far from the coast as to give the United States substantially all the territory in dispute.

PROFIT-PRODUCING PROFITS.

Are Expected to Go Into Operation Again As Soon as Possible, and Give a Large Number of Men Work — Senator Dandurand's English Syndicate Have Now Sixty Days to Pay Off the Mortgages.

Sault Ste. Marie, Oct. 20.—The contest over the possession of the plants of the Consolidated Lake Superior Co., which had been in progress in and out of court for weeks, came to an end yesterday at two o'clock when James Bicknell, representing B. T. Fackenthal, the receiver, was given the keys of the office and all of the subsidiary factory buildings.

The peaceful surrender of the property to Speyer & Co., which the company had hitherto declined to make, is the result of an agreement reached in New York last Friday, whereby all of the directors and officials of all of the subsidiary companies resigned, and their places were filled by Speyer & Co., who selected Benjamin T. Fackenthal, the receiver, as the president of all the companies.

Names of the other directors and officials are unknown here. In consideration for this surrender of the property, Speyer & Co. have agreed to postpone the sale of the securities until Dec. 15, thus giving the stockholders time to get funds to repay the loan and restore the big concern to its feet.

It is expected that as soon as possible all of the plants of the company that are profit-producing will be put into operation again by Mr. Fackenthal. These include the pulp mills, the saw mill and the veneer works, which would employ a large number of men.

The action at the Soo yesterday by which James Bicknell, K.C., acting for Speyer & Co., took possession of the works of the Lake Superior Consolidated, is in accord with the plan by which Senator Dandurand and his English clients are to have sixty days in which to pay off the mortgage. This possession of Speyer & Co. includes all the industries but the Algoma Central Railroad, against which the injunction is not dissolved. This leaves Mr. Bicknell in charge of all the subsidiary companies except the railroad, and gives the English syndicate until Dec. 15 to secure the necessary funds to take charge of the property.

DISSOLVED THE INJUNCTION.

Judge Johnson of Algoma Cannot Grant Order For Possession.

Toronto, Oct. 20.—In the judgement handed out yesterday by Justice Britton, the temporary injunction restraining the Central Trust Co. from taking possession for Speyer & Co. of the works at the Soo, was dissolved, as was also the injunction restraining Judge Johnson of Algoma from granting an order for possession.

The judgment says in part: "It is certainly contrary to the policy of the courts as law is now administered to permit an action for ejectment and afterwards an action for sale. This suit is not for foreclosure or sale. It is for a declaration as to the plaintiff's rights, and if I am right in deciding that the action in the district court is only for recovery of land, and is within the jurisdiction of the court, I ought not to restrain further proceedings there merely because the plaintiffs could have their complete recovery in the present action.

"The mere question of immediate possession cannot under the special and unfortunate circumstances, now existing, matter much to either party. The plaintiffs are mortgagee in fact and must account for their dealings with the property if the defendants are able to redeem; and the defendants in the present action have the right to attack the mortgage if open to valid legal objections."

This decision does not, however, affect the Algoma Central Railway, as, by the temporary injunction granted, Messrs. Conmee and Bowman, the Central Trust Co., Speyer & Co., and all others are prevented from taking possession of the railway. The railway are, moreover, by a similar injunction restrained from delivering the property to Speyer & Co., or any other creditors.

WERE 19 DAYS IN CROSSING.

Great Suffering Endured by Captain and Mate of Schooner.

London, Oct. 20.—The Snaefell, a 79 ton schooner, laden with codfish, reached Queenstown from Newfoundland Sunday night. She was navigated for the entire trip, which lasted 19 days, by her captain and mate alone. The men suffered terrible hardships. The schooner encountered a succession of gales and cold weather, and fatigue caused the captain and mate extreme sufferings. They never slept in their bunks from the time they started. For five days the schooner was on her beam ends, and then the two men subsisted on bread and water, as they were unable to light a fire.

THE POST OFFICE SURPLUS.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

The Canadian people have every reason to be gratified at the announcement made by Sir William Mulock in the House of Commons on Thanksgiving eve as to the result of the year's operations in the Post Office Department, over which he presides with conspicuous ability.

For the first time the Postmaster-General was able to announce a surplus on the entire postal service of the Dominion. He told the House that after allowing for a deficit of over $100,000 on the Yukon service, the revenue for the year had exceeded the expenditure by $292,702.

Compared with the last year of the last Conservative administration, when there was a deficit of $781,000, this means a betterment in the postal revenue and accounts of over one million dollars, in addition to a million dollars which is estimated to have been saved to the people by a reduction in the rates of postage.

This surely was a most gratifying statement, and it is not to be wondered at that it was listened to with evident pleasure on all sides of the House, revealing, as it did, the highest efficiency in administration, the enlargement of the organization, the development of the service and the multiplication of the facilities for bringing it in touch with the people.

What the post office is doing in the east where the centres of population are large, it is not difficult to realize; but what it is doing in the west is apt to be overlooked. Its operations extend three thousand miles west of the Capital and north-west to the far distant head waters of the Yukon. One can scarcely comprehend the part it plays in the development of the agricultural and mineral wealth of the west. Locked in the mountains of Canada is mineral wealth second to that of no country in the world in extent and potential value. The services rendered by the post office in connection with it can be understood and appreciated only by those engaged in those remote regions.

Between the Lake of the Woods and the Caribou Mountains the forces of civilization are building up a mighty empire, destined soon to become the granary of the world, and one of the best and most effective of civilising agencies is the post office, which keeps the still sparsely settled population of Assiniboia, Alberta and Saskatchewan in touch with life of the larger centres, and imparts warmth and brightness to the lives of the people.

The part of the Postmaster-General's announcement which related to the recommendations for increased remuneration, can hardly fail to give satisfaction throughout the service. It was not an easy matter to adjust things so as to do substantial justice to all. Many postmasters serving only ten, a dozen or a score of people, have received only a nominal sum; and postmasters where the revenue is only ten or twenty dollars for the yearly operations of the office receive a minimum fee of ten dollars, going up to twelve or fifteen. In future they will receive a minimum of $25, and in the case of accounting postmasters there will be an increase of ten per cent. in salaries and fees, and with all these and other increases already made the Postmaster-General expects to avoid a deficit.

Altogether the country is to be congratulated on the excellence of its postal service, which stands out in pleasant contrast to that of the United States, where the department, after a searching investigation has been found to be weltering in corruption.

A SCHEME DISAPPROVED.

(Kingston Whig.)

The New York barge canal is not at all popular with the business men, and it promises to meet with pretty general repudiation. Even the cities along the line of it have no faith in its capacity to draw trade away from Canada, and the press, as the reflection of public opinion, is severe upon the proposal to imperil $101,000,000 in the undertaking.

The Rochester Chamber of Commerce has, through the labours of a special commissioner ascertained that the barge canal will not do Canadian shipping any harm, and for the reason that the Canadian canals are superior to the Erie and will be depended as the time and trade demand. They are 14 feet deep now, while the proposed barge canal through New York State will only be twelve feet, and when this canal is fourteen feet the Canadian canals will be twenty feet.

So the special commissioner gives up the idea of wresting any trade from Canada by canal competition, and the Rochester Chamber of Commerce appeals to the people to defeat the scheme at the succeeding election. It means "higher rents, higher licenses, and heavier expenses without any return." It has been discovered that there will be three classes of beneficiaries by the barge canal, if the work upon it goes on—the speculators, the contractors, and the padrones. To these the Syracuse Standard-Post adds, the Canadians, who, while the twelve-foot Erie canal is being built, we have all the commerce that now goes via the American route, and what the Canadians have they will hold. The $101,000,000 canal job may, therefore, by extras, be made a very much more expensive project.

THE ENCOURAGEMENT OF SHOOTING CLUBS.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

Not the least important feature of the comprehensive scheme of defence which the Minister of Militia has submitted to Parliament is the encouragement which will be given to the establishment and maintenance of shooting clubs.

That such clubs have already sprung into existence all over the country, and represent a membership of something like 20,000, demonstrates how well the young manhood of the country realize the importance of this branch of military training and the satisfaction that proficiency affords.

That the Government has not been unmindful of the desirableness of stimulating skill in the use of the rifle is shown by the expenditure of seven million rounds of ammunition. Yet one frequently hears murmurs at the tax that the purchase of ammunition imposes upon the individual who is willing to devote his time, patience and energy to improving his shooting.

Under the new scheme greater attention will be given to the promotion of target practice. Here as in the branch of strategy, known as the intelligence department, the superiority of the Boers over the British troops was exemplified in the South African war, and all experts are agreed as to the important part that good shooting will play in the wars of the future.

As the merits of the scheme become better known they commend themselves more thoroughly to those who are interested in this important part of the national life.

The organization of an army of 10,000 men is not a small task, but by the system of which Sir Frederick Borden was the exponent to Parliament, this will be possible in a few years. A force complete in all its details with its complement of cavalry, artillery, service corps, intelligence department and transport. The splendid training ground of 30,000 acres which is to be provided will give an opportunity for mobilization and tactics from which important results may be expected.

SLOPEVILLE, DOURO.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Business in the village is booming.

Two weddings are booked for this week.

Miss Hanna Torpey of Michigan, is visiting with her brother-in-law, Mr. George Towns.

Mr. R. J. Berry, our local egg-buyer, is at present buying turkeys and intends shipping them to the old country. He has engaged Mr. J. McCliggott to buy in the back country. John starts for Apsley on Monday next.

Bears are quite numerous in this vicinity. Mr. Wm. O'Connor captured one alive in his sheep pen, and intends keeping it to take to the World's Fair, which will be held in St. Louis in 1904.

The new sheds at St. Joseph's are now finished and are a credit to the contractors, Messrs. Condon and Lonergan, and also the committee, Mr. Moloney and Mr. McMurray, who had charge of the work.

John D. Condon met with an accident last week when riding home from the village on his broncho; the animal shied and threw him into the ditch. He was carried into Mr. Ed. Sullivan's and Dr. Casey sent for. The doctor found no bones broken—nothing worse than a bad shaking up.

Mr. P. G. Towns is wearing a broad smile these days. It is a daughter.

The friends of Mr. Wm. Condon are pleased to see him out again after the accident in which he was injured.

The population of the village is increasing so rapidly that it is rumoured that we will have a mayor and council for 1904. Mr. Edward Allen is spoken of as mayor; no doubt he would be the right man for the position.

GETTING OUT SOO TIMBER.

Hon. E. J. Davis Explains the Latest Move.

Many Logs Would Otherwise go to Waste—The Company and the Government Both Interested.

Hon. E. J. Davis, Commissioner of Crown Lands, has confirmed the announcement in the despatch from Sault Ste. Marie that men were being sent into the woods to bring out logs that might go to waste. Mr. Davis said the situation is this:—

"Immediately when the difficulties came, of course, the company owed the department money, and we arranged to protect ourselves, which was done. Then they wanted to ship timber which they had already sold, and we allowed them to do that, in order not to stop operations, protecting ourselves by the way in which the funds received were disposed of. We placed ourselves in such position that our claims will all be paid first.

"I sent two of our timber men to go over the timber areas and see what logs were cut, what condition they were in, and so on. They found that there was a certain amount of pine and pulpwood cut, which would be injured unless taken to its proper destination, and instructions were given and arrangements made for doing this, after we had received their report.

"The company's representative, Mr. Hodson, went on with the work, using such supplies as he had on hand, and any additional outlay that was required we arranged to be paid. Our man, Mr. Maughan, is representing us there generally, and we will see that any further outlay for wages and supplies is met. These wages must be paid the men before any interested parties can make any use of the logs."

Mr. Davis could not give the number of men to be employed, nor the amount of timber involved, but said both would be considerable.

PREVENTION OF TUBERCULOSIS

The origin of consumption and its relation to tuberculosis were discussed recently before the Medical Congress at Cassel, Germany, by Prof. von Behring. His theory is that a large portion of mankind is infected in infancy with the germs of tuberculosis derived from cow's milk. He distinguishes between tuberculosis and consumption, persons infected with the former may be years before symptoms of the latter disease appear. He has hopes of a prophylactic being discovered by which immunity from tuberculosis may be secured. So far as reported the paper read by Prof. Van Behring was rather a foreshadowing of what was probable than a precise statement of what was absolutely known. It seems, however, the safer course to use only sterilized milk, for infants especially.—Chronicle.

Fatality at Goderich.

Goderich, Oct. 20.—A shocking accident occurred here about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the elevator of the Goderich Elevator and Transit Co., whereby Engineer Fred Love, superintendent of the elevator was instantly killed.

The Newmount was unloading a cargo of wheat at the time, and the steam shovels were in use. One of the ropes regulating the shovels was lying slack between the elevator and the vessel, and Mr. Love stepped across it when the rope suddenly became taut and threw the unfortunate man between a pair of drums on which the ropes are wound. Mr. Love's skull was severely crushed, and his left leg was broken. Mr. Love is a middle-aged man, married, and has four children, the youngest about 5 or 6 years of age.

NEW FISCAL POLICY.

London Post's Canadian Correspondent Says It Would Sweep Canada.

London, Oct. 20.—The Morning Post's special Canadian correspondent dwells on the part the popularity of the new fiscal policy plays in Canada. The scheme for a preference, no matter what opposition came from the manufacturers, would sweep the country. Overtures would certainly come from the United States, but he is assured by Goldwin Smith that his friends in America have no intention of annexing the Dominion by force. The growing need of America is national resources, and Canada is so great that unless England made a previous arrangement the American offers would be so tempting that Canada would find them difficult to refuse.

Canada a Big Factor.

London, Oct. 20.—(C.A.P.)—The Daily Chronicle says: "Mr. Chamberlain promises great expansion in the colonial markets, but is Canada going to remove the duties on British cottons, and if not, where is Lancashire's advantage coming in?"

The Standard says: "The opinion that Canada must not sacrifice her liberty of action is present everywhere and presents great difficulty to the fiscal arrangement. As Canada increases in population, her manufactures will inevitably conflict with established British industries, and if Mr. Chamberlain tried to prevent their establishment he would imperil every connection between the Dominion and the Mother Country."

Colonies May Quit.

London, Oct. 20.—(C.A.P.)—Monsieur Bert, secretary of the Union Colonial of Paris, says: "If the health of Mr. Chamberlain permits him to fight, he ultimately will win the support of the Empire. But if colonies like Canada and the Cape are not given solid reasons for rallying to the support of England, they are bound to begin the march toward emancipation."

Where Would Money Come From?

London, Oct. 20.—(C.A.P.)—The Marquis of Graham, reviewing the proceedings of the Montreal Congress of the Chamber of Commerce, says that if the Canadian Parliament decided to contribute towards naval expenditure it would be difficult to see, as things stand, where the money would come from, as increased indirect taxation would be impossible, and to increase direct taxation would be equally impossible, if not still more unwise.

Modify Fiscal Policy.

London, Oct. 20.—(C. A. P.)—R. Dunlop, the head of the Allan Line, yesterday, before the Glasgow Chamber of Commerce, called upon the Government to modify its fiscal policy in order to secure reciprocal trade with foreign countries.

MORLEY'S FIGHTING SPEECH.

Cobden, Bright and Peel Put Up to Cheap Auction.

London, Oct. 20.—John Morley, M. P., the former Liberal Chief Secretary for Ireland, who has been in semi-retirement while writing his "Life of William Ewart Gladstone," returned to active political life last night, and took his place in the fighting line against the protectionist policy of the present Government.

In the historic free trade hall at Manchester, the biographer of Cobden and Gladstone, addressing an audience which filled the large edifice, aroused immense enthusiasm by an eloquent and spirited attack on the new policy, against which, he declared, he was arrayed with the whole weight of authority, both practical and theoretical.

So crude, raw and unthought out were the proposals launched in this country, that men of all parties, Liberals and Conservatives, were united in opposition to them.

The country, continued Mr. Morley, hat been invited to put its ancestors, like Cobden, Bright and Peel, up to cheap auction; but, when he thought how right Cobden and Bright had been as to free trade, the French treaty of 1860; the Crimean War and the American War, he was not going to apologize for them.

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES

Over Four Millions of Revotes Passed in the House.

HON. MR. TARTE'S CAR NO. 001

Considerable Amusement Caused Over the Mail Bag Controversy—Several Bills Disposed of—The Quebec Bridge—Further Government Assistance Provided For Upon Terms That Have Been Drafted.

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—The attention of the House was engrossed for the greater part of the day by the resolutions granting subsidies to railways, which were considered in committee. All the re-votes of subsidies which have lapsed, thirty in number, were passed, and half a dozen new subsidies received the assent of the committee.

The Mail Bag Controversy.

The House took considerable amusement out of the answers to a number of questions of the order paper. Several had reference to the flood of campaign literature now being sent out by the Opposition. In reply to Mr. T. O. Davis, Sir Wm. Mulock said the Government were of the opinion, as stated in the question, that several loads of campaign literature had been shipped to Ottawa from the office of The Montreal Star and were being sent through the mails under the frank of Mr. Taylor, M.P., and others. The Government received no revenue from it. The only apparent limit was the capacity of the cars and the transportation facilities of the country. (Ministerial "hear, hear.") The Speaker, replying to Mr. Talbot, said no additional employes except those in the postoffice, who did stamping, were employed in handling or forwarding the said literature. The cartage was not paid by the House of Commons. (Opposition, "hear, hear.") If those employes were not busy at that work, they would be available for Parliamentary or other duties. (Ministerial "hear, hear.") No additional employes had been engaged by the House for this purpose. Sir Wm. Mulock, replying to a further question by Mr. Talbot, said the mail bags in question belonged to the country. (Opposition cheers.) No authority had been given for their use and they were being illegally used.

Mr. Tarte's Private Car.

In answer to Mr. Demers, of St. Johns and Iberville, the Minister of Public Works stated that it was true the Government had paid for certain improvements to Car "No. 001," belonging to the Canadian Pacific Railway; that the car was fitted up by the then Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte); that the car was still in the use of Mr. Tarte; and whether it was intended to reclaim the cost of the improvements had not received the attention of the Department.

Mr. Paterson stated to Mr. Henderson that the total amount of refined sugars imported during the year ending June 30, 1903, was 26,672,088 pounds, and the amount of duty paid was $380,652; the amount not above 16 duty standard was 861,698,709 pounds and the duty was $2,316,622.

To Lieut.-Col. Hughes, the Minister of Militia stated it was not true that the members of the Canadian South African Constabulary had not taken the oath of allegiance before leaving Canada.

New Bills Introduced.

Mr. Scott (East Assiniboia) presented a bill to amend the Mounted Police Pension Act, 1889. Mr. Haggart objected that a private member could not present a money bill.

Sir Wilfrid agreed with Mr. Haggart in this respect, and the bill was withdrawn.

Mr. Fitzpatrick introduced an Act to determine and define the duties and functions of certain departments. Mr. Fitzpatrick explained that the object of the bill was to empower the Governor-in-Council to make transfers of officials from one department to another.

A bill to amend the Northwest Territories Act (Mr. Fitzpatrick) was read the third time, and several amendments to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's bill respecting the jurisdiction of the Exchequer Court as to railway debts, were concurred in.

The Acts respecting the revised statues of Canada and increasing the salary of the librarian of Parliament were passed.

Railway Subsidies, Revotes.

The railway subsidy re-votes, 30 in all, and amounting to slightly above four million dollars, were passed before 6 o'clock.

When the resolutions for new subsidies were taken up after dinner some of the Opposition members criticised the Government policy.

Quebec Bridge Company.

Mr. Fielding gave notice late last night of resolutions granting further aid to the Quebec bridge enterprise, based on the agreement entered into yesterday between the Bridge Company, represented by Premier Parent, and Mr. Fielding on behalf of the Government. It recites that the company has issued capital stock to the amount of $200,000 of the $1,000,000, on which the shareholders have paid $65,585. The Province of Quebec has granted and paid subsidies of $3,000,000, while the Dominion Government has granted a subsidy of $1,000,000, on which it has paid $374,858. Up to the present time the company has spent on the work $914,862, and is indebted on the work to the extent of $779,580, including par value bonds to the value of $479,000, upon which was realized $283,279. The amount required to complete the bridge with necessary railway approaches, terminals and other facilities, as well as to pay off the indebtedness of the company, is estimated at $6,866,882. It is stated that the company cannot proceed with the work until it receives further aid from the Government. The Government therefore agrees to grant the necessary assistance upon certain terms.

Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure

Costs Nothing If It Fails.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer. For years I searched everywhere to find a specific for Rheumatism. For nearly 20 years I worked to this end. At last, in Germany, my search was rewarded. I found a costly chemical that did not disappoint me as other Rheumatic prescriptions had disappointed physicians everywhere.

I do not mean that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure can turn bony joints into flesh again. That is impossible. But it will drive from the blood the poison that causes pain and swelling, and then that is the end of Rheumatism. I know this so well that I will furnish for a full month my Rheumatic Cure on trial. I cannot cure all cases within a month. It would be unreasonable to expect that. But most cases will yield within 30 days. This trial treatment will convince you that Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure is a power against Rheumatism—a potent force against disease that is irresistible.

My offer is made to convince you of my faith. My faith is but the outcome of experience—of actual knowledge. I know what it can do. And I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal card for my book on Rheumatism. I will then arrange with a druggist in your vicinity so that you can secure six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure to make the test. You may take it a full month on trial. If it succeeds the cost to you is $5.50. If it fails the loss is mine and mine alone. It will be left entirely to you. I mean that exactly. If you say the trial is not satisfactory I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs for it is dangerous to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood. My remedy does that even in the most difficult cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met, and in all of my experience, in all of my 2000 tests, I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the book. Try my remedy for a month, for it can't harm you anyway. If it fails the loss is mine.

Address Dr. Shoop, Box 47, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases not chronic are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

New Bills Introduced.

Mr. Scott (East Assiniboia) presented a bill to amend the Mounted Police Pension Act, 1889. Mr. Haggart objected that a private member could not present a money bill.

Sir Wilfrid agreed with Mr. Haggart in this respect, and the bill was withdrawn.

Russian Viceroy in Far East Replies to the Czar.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 20.—A story is current in military and diplomatic circles here to the effect that the Czar recently telegraphed Admiral Alexieff, Russian Viceroy in the Far East, regarding Russo-Japanese relations, and saying that Russian interests must be maintained by force of arms if necessary. The Viceroy is said to have replied to this message by demanding 50,000 additional troops.

Perplexity at Pekin.

Pekin, Oct. 20.—Like other cities in the Far East, Pekin is perplexed by the reports from various points of events portending a Russo-Japanese war. Most of these reports on investigation prove to be unfounded. The opinion prevails here that Russia proposes to hold all she has gained in Manchuria and refrain for the present from further advances in Corea.

Pains in the back, arms and legs, lumbago, rheumatism, sore, stiff joints, headache and all of the most painful and fatal diseases arise from

Poison in the Blood

Of the food which is taken into the body, part is digested and assimilated, and goes to form new blood and tissue, and a certain portion becomes waste matter which is poisonous to the system. Much of such matter is cast out or excreted by the kidneys in liquid form and passes from these organs through the ureters to the bladder.

When the kidneys become deranged this liquid poison forms into solid material, sometimes collecting in the joints and causing rheumatism, at other times in the kidneys, ureters or bladder, and becoming what is known as gravel or stone in the bladder, probably the most torturing and most fatal ailment known to mankind.

Don't wait for symptoms of these horrible diseases, don't wait for Bright's disease, diabetes, dropsy or apoplexy before beginning the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but prevent these results by taking warning from the first symptoms, such as backache, headache, deposits in urine, loss of flesh and any irregularities of the urinary organs.

The kidneys, liver and bowels work together in removing poisonous matter from the body, and it is because of their direct and combined action on these organs that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so phenomenally successful in curing serious and complicated disease.

It seems useless to experiment with new-fangled remedies which are only intended to afford relief when you can be thoroughly cured and the cause removed by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

MR. BARNABY.

Mr. B. H. Barnaby, painter in the D.A.R. shops, Kentville, N.S., states:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for a number of years, whenever I would get constipated and suffer from kidney pains and derangements of the digestive system, and know of many others who have also used them for similar troubles. I can join with others in pronouncing them an excellent medicine. When constipated I find one pill sufficient to set me right, and am never without a box of these pills in the house. I consider them the best medicine I ever used."

Mr. J. G. Kirby, head miller in the large flour mills of Munro and Rountree, Thorold, Ont., states:—"I can scarcely say too much in praise of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Some years ago I was laid up by a severe attack of kidney disease, which was later complicated by other bad symptoms, such as headache, lumbago, backache, constipation, indigestion and insomnia. I became reduced in flesh and was very much discouraged. Professional medical treatment was of no avail; other remedies were resorted to, to no purpose. My appetite diminished, and I was losing hope of recovery.

"Fortunately my attention was called to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I derived much benefit from the first box. By the time I had used four boxes I was again enjoying my former good health and vigor, as the bad symptoms all passed away, and I was then able to resume work. That was in 1899. I have waited now for about four years to see if the cure would be permanent, and now am convinced that it is, and feel justified in giving this testimonial for the benefit of others."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Are sold by all dealers at the advertised price of 25 cents a box, 5 boxes for $1.00, or mailed postpaid on receipt of price by Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

☛ To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author, are on every box of his remedies.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Metzler, of Selwyn. The duties of bridesmaid were performed by Miss L. Higgins, of Peterborough, and the groomsman was Mr. Henry Elliott, brother of the bride. HORSE MET DEATH AT BETHUNE STREET.

Runaway Horse Belonging to Mr. John Dainty Causes its own Death.

Last night about nine o'clock Mr. John Dainty was engaged in hauling seats from the Opera House to the Brock street rink for the Culhane, Chace and Weston Minstrel show, to be given to-morrow night, his horse became frightened in some mysterious manner, while standing on Brock street opposite the rink, and running at a furious rate down Brock street it turned at Bethune and went down the G.T.R. track, until it reached a switch stand south of Hunter street of which the lever was protruding. In the darkness, it is presumed that the horse did not notice this obstruction in time to avoid it and the lever struck the animal in the chest, making so frightful a gash, that the poor animal's suffering was ended by shooting him. The force of the impact was so great that the lever which is made of iron about 1 1-4 inch in diameter, was bent over about eight inches.

The loss to Mr. Dainty will be considerable, as the horse was a valuable one, and the sympathy of his friends has already expressed itself in a tangible form.

LINDSAY BOY BAGS A RED FOX.

Was Shot on Saturday on the Fenelon Road.

On Saturday last, as Mr. Bruce Hopkins, youngest son of Mr. G. H. Hopkins, was sauntering through the woods, on the farm of Mr. Eustace Hopkins, Fenelon road, looking for partridges he was confronted with a handsome red fox who was also taking his morning walk. This being the first fox Bruce had ever seen in its native haunts he thought it to be a yellow dog but on a second look, concluded that it was Sir Reynard, and gave him the contents of his No. 10, with a charge of partridge shot. The result being he was Bruce's meat.—Lindsay Post.

A SPECIAL SITTING OF THE COUNTY COURT.

Inquiry Into the Rights of Cereal Co. to Raise Water at the New Dam.

The Cereal Company's new Dam will be six feet higher than the old one of the Dickson Company, thus the water in the pond will be raised to the level of the old Martin dam above Inverlea Park. A special sitting of the County Court is in consequence being held for the purpose of trying the right of the Cereal Company to raise the water and to fix compensation paid to same property holders affected. The evidence given was chiefly of a technical character. Mr. Chas. H. Keefer, C. E., of Ottawa, produced plans and explained the general outline of the work and showed that no occupied mill privileges will will be affected and the right of the lumbermen will be protected. The area of the pond to be created will be about 35 acres, and the water will be raised to the level of the concrete piers at the mouth of present raceway leading to the Peterborough Light and Power Company's power house. The large number of defendants were represented and the interests of the town were looked after by the Town Solicitor.

The Court will sit for some time to fix the compensation claims of persons affected.

SPENT A DAY AT LONG LAKE.

A party composed of Messrs. Geo. Scott, W. J. O'Brien, Louis LeClaire, Jos. Carey, Han. Darling, and Harry Wilson, left on Saturday to spend a day with Mr. Jas. Byrne at Long Lake. A most pleasant drive of the thirty-five miles was enjoyed, and the members of the party were warmly welcomed at their destination by Mr. Byrne, whose many friends will be glad to learn that his health, for the benefit of which he is staying at the lake, has improved considerably.

A very pleasant day was spent at McGregor's camp, the only regret of the boys being that they were unable to bring home as mementoes of the of the trip some of the numerous partridge and mink encountered on the journey. They report the game this season as being very plentiful, but respect for the law deterred them from taking advantage of the good shots which they encountered. Not only are the smaller varieties of game numerous, but bears are also quite plentiful. Mr. Wilson last week shot one weighing 320 lbs.

THE FOWL SUPPER A COMPLETE SUCCESS.

George Street Y. M. C. Held an Enjoyable Anniversary.

Fitting Climax to the First Year's Work —Splendid Programme Following Supper.

To say that the first anniversary of the George street Young Men's Guild was a success is stating it mildly indeed. It is hard to imagine how anything could have been carried to a more satisfactory issue. The event received a splendid impetus on Sunday by the special services held in the evening, and a fitting climax was the fowl supper and entertainment held last night. That it was such a complete success is a tribute to the energy and enterprise of the young men of the church, who made all the arrangements for the event.

The supper was announced to commence at 6 o'clock, but long before that hour there were many persons there waiting to be served. The tables, which were spread in the Sunday school room of the church, were ten in number and were very tastily decorated with flowers and coloured lights, the effect being a decidedly beautiful one. At each table, four young men in immaculate white aprons and caps attended to the wants of their guests, and it seemed to be the generally expressed opinion that they did it well. Of the fare, little need be said, beyond the fact that it was fully equal to that usually supplied by the ladies of George street church.

Following the supper a short but interesting programme was rendered in the church, Mr. J. Jefferies acted as chairman of the meeting in opening which he took occasion to express on behalf of the Guild, thanks to those who had favoured the young men with their presence. It was the first time the Guild had attempted anything on such an elaborate scale, and, that it had been successful was due to a considerable extent to the support which they had received from the friends. Following the chairman's address Mr. G. W. Mulligan sang a solo, "His Majesty, the King." Mr. W. D. Campbell then gave a reading which was much enjoyed. A solo, "The Maid of Malabar," sung by Mr. N. Jolliffe, was the next number, and this rising vocalist delighted the audience with his excellent rendition of this composition. So enthusiastically was he applauded that an encore was given, "Killarney" being the selection given. Mr. Jefferies then announced that the All Saint's male quartette had kindly consented to assist the young men, and called upon them for a selection. Those in the quartette were Messrs. J. Legg, J. Browne, Rev. W. L. Armitage and R. H. Shepherd, and they sang, "Stars of the Summer Night," in such pleasing manner that an encore was demanded, to which a gracious response was made. Rev. J. P. Wilson, the pastor was then called upon for an address, and in a few remarks congratulated the young men on the success of their anniversary, and gave a short history of the formation of the Guild, from its inception with a very few members to its present very satisfactory condition. The church, he said was proud of its young men, and that they had evidenced a desire to assist in a material way the enterprises of the church, was very gratifying to the officials. Mr. Sidney Rogers was then called upon for a mandolin solo, which he rendered in a musicianly manner. The quartette gave a second selection, "The Wayside Cross," with a solo by Mr. J. Browne, the number being one of the most enjoyable on the programme. This, with the National Anthem, closed the evening's entertainment.

The members of the Guild feel highly elated over the success of their first anniversary, and wish to express their thanks to the friends who assisted them in making the event the success that it was. Mrs. Mowat acted as accompanist for the soloists.

The supper from a financial view point, was most satisfactory, the receipts being about $125, which will be devoted to church purposes.

A HANDSOME DISPLAY OF VALUABLE FURS.

Mr Fred Clarke's Fur Establishment as Seen To-day.

As the winter season approaches, one naturally thinks of furs and winter garments, and in this mood, a visit was paid this morning to the store of Mr. Fred Clarke, who has just opened up a stock of furs, and a look at the stock gives reason for thinking that he has ground for making the declaration, that he has as fine an assortment as can be found anywhere.

A glance at the range of valuable and tasty goods displayed is sufficient to demonstrate that they have been selected with care, and that the latest styles are represented. A large range of ladies' goods is shown including garments made from White, Grey and Sable Fox, Mink, Marten, Sable, Persian Lamb and Seal. A particularly fetching coat was seen, a combination of Persian lamb and mink, and another equally rich looking one of seal and mink. A mink with the new stole effect, was also one of the prominent styles. Persian lamb coats, incorporating the Russian blouse effect, and a complete line of sable goods in ruffs and scarfs, are noticeable, both for their excellence and for the extra large range shown.

Mr. Clarke says that the volume of his trade already is very gratifying, and especially in the best ladies' and children's furs, to which he is devoting particular attention. But the department devoted to men's wants is not being neglected by any means, and a full line of all the newest goods is being displayed. A particularly large number of men's gauntlets are in stock, the predominating furs being otter and Persian lamb, with the former slightly in the lead as a favourite. Men's fur lined overcoats also occupy a prominent place in a well assorted stock.

Mr. Clarke has installed a battery of electric light in his window, which makes the store front have a very pleasing effect, the beauty of the effect being enhanced by the really meritorious display of the newest and most reliable furs.

Mr. Campbell's loss will be severely felt in the different organizations in town in which he has taken an active part, and while his friends cheerfully congratulate him upon his well merited promotion, the efficient service that he has rendered to St. Andrew's Guild and other Societies will make his departure an unpleasant prospect.

SUNDAY SCHOOL VISITATION.

Objects and Methods of the Undertaking Set Forth.

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—Permit me through your columns to add a word to what has already been said regarding the house to house visitation that is planned by the local executive of the Sunday School Association of our town.

Briefly stated, the movement is this—co-operation on the part of all the Sunday schools and churches of the community for the purpose of bringing the people into closer touch with some Sunday school or church. This is a work for which there is great need, for careful observation reveals the fact that a large number of children in our town, as in other places, are yet outside the Sunday school, while there are also many families who, because not known to the pastors of our churches, are, from a religious point of view, unshepherded, uncared for. Every denomination feels that this state of affairs should be remedied, if at all possible. The house to house visitation which we are preparing to carry out is the remedy proposed. It has been tried in Toronto and other cities with most gratifying results.

For the work in Peterborough we have called for two hundred and fifty workers, these to go in pairs and as far as possible in pairs representing two denominations. The whole town and Ashburnham will be divided into some one hundred and twenty-five districts, a district for each pair of visitors. These visitors will call at the different homes in their respective districts and gather on uniform blanks such information concerning each home as will enable pastors and others interested in church work to intelligently follow up the visits. In this way the visitation is intended to be but the beginning of a much larger work to be done by each local church along its own denominational lines.

The fact that this work is interdenominational, and of interest to all classes, irrespective of creed, ought to ensure for the visitors a most cordial reception from every home. The work is a good one, and the heartiness with which the different denominations have taken it up augurs well for its success.

Yours sincerely,
J. A. WILSON,
President Local S. S. Association.

"BEN HUR" LECTURE MUCH ENJOYED.

Rev. H. C. Dixon Gives a Delightful Literary Entertainment.

The illustrated lecture on "Ben Hur," or the story of the Christ, as given in St. Luke's Sunday school room last night by Rev. H. C. Dixon, of Toronto, was a very enjoyable event. The room in which it was given was crowded, fully 200 persons being present, all of whom were highly pleased with the lecture delivered. Preceding the lecture Mr. Dixon gave some facts relating to the book, the story contained in which he was going to give in a condensed form. The lecturer gave in a very fluent and pleasing manner the story of Christ as contained in the book, illustrating his remarks as the narrative proceeded by pictures thrown on a canvas, and numbering about one hundred and twenty. The lecture occupied about two hours, but throughout its entire delivery the speaker succeeded in interesting his listeners, all of whom felt regret when the lecture was concluded.

During the delivery of the lecture, at suitable occasions hymns were sung, among them being, "Art Thou Weary," "God Moves in a Mysterious Way," "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," and "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross." The meeting concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

St. Luke's church is to be congratulated on securing such a distinct literary treat for a Peterborough audience, and those who were fortunate enough to hear the lecture were well pleased.

I know a good thing when I see it. The Snowshoe Tobacco Tags are worth money, and as I want to get a valuable present for them, I will allow you in trade 50 cents per hundred for all you have, can get, or buy. Alive Charles LeGros.

THE LOCAL BAKERS WANT NEW BYLAW.

A Deputation met Legal Committee Last Night.

Ask That the Standard Size of Bread be Changed—Local Bread Cheaper Than Imported.

The bakers of Peterborough met the Legal Committee of the Town Council last night to present their views in reference to a grievance, which they claim they have, and upon investigation their claim appears to be an eminently reasonable and rational one. The Government has given municipalities the power to fix the standard weight of bread in each municipality, which is usually done by Bylaw. This has been set in Peterborough at two and four pounds per loaf. This was satisfactory until the bakers of Toronto commenced sending their bread here, and as the standard size there is one and a half and three pounds, the local bakers claim that the selling of this bread here places the home manufacturers in a false position, inasmuch as the great majority of buyers do not distinguish between the smaller loaves sold by the merchants who handle Toronto bread, which sells at 5 cents and 10 cents per loaf, and the larger, and in reality, cheaper, bread, made here at 6 cents and 12 cents per loaf. As a matter of fact the product of the local bakers is the cheaper, selling at 3 cents per pound, while that imported sells at 3 1-3 cents for the same weight. This fact, however, is unknown to the great majority of buyers, who imagine that because the price per loaf is lower, the bread is cheaper.

There are two methods of redressing this condition of things. The first has been given a trial by some of the bakers here, and its trial has not proven its effectiveness. The bylaw now in force provides that loaves of other than the standard weight may be made, but they must be labelled. This method has been resorted to by a few of the local bakers, but not only is it a source of great inconvenience to the baker but the customers object to receiving bread upon which a label has been pasted, as the law compels. The second method of redress, and the one that the bakers are asking for now, is the amendment of the bylaw to enable the standard to be changed to coincide with that of Toronto, Belleville, Kingston, and other cities, which will place the product of the local bread bakers upon an equality with that imported from the above city. A deputation of bakers composed of Messrs. Bates, Mann, Stock, Lush and McGregor, waited upon the Legal Committee last night to present their views, and although there was not a sufficient number of the members present to constitute a quorum, those present heard the deputation, and it has practically promised that some action will be taken to make the bylaw an acceptable one to the local bakers, who have good hopes that their request will be dealt with as they desire.

It is pointed out that the Toronto bakeries have branched out into big concerns, and by amalgamation have been able to send their goods out of the city to towns within one hundred miles of Toronto, and by the difference in price, by reason of the lighter weight, are enabled in a certain degree to injure the business of the local bakers.

MR. JAMES MURRAY WAS REMEMBERED.

At a meeting of Diamond L.O.L., No. 80, held last evening, the following address was presented to Bro. Jas. Murray, who is leaving Peterborough for Temiscamingue, where he will engage in farming.

The address was read by Bro. W. H. G. Armstrong, Recording Secretary, who has been associated with Bro. Murray for the past twelve years in the work appertaining to the Association, and expressed sincere regret that the intimacy thus formed should be terminated.

To W. Bro. James Murray, P. M.,

Dear Sir and Brother, — We, the officers and members of Diamond Loyal Orange Lodge, feel that we would be very ungrateful did we not avail ourselves of this opportunity to express to you our deep sense of regret at your departure from amongst us to take up your residence in New Ontario.

During the years that you have been in connection with our beloved Association you have always taken a deep interest in our work. During your long term of membership you have been assigned positions of trust and responsibility, and have discharged the important duties appertaining to them faithfully and to the satisfaction of your brethren. Although you have served in the highest offices in the gift of your brethren, you have never failed to cheerfully shoulder the burden as a pleasing duty to speed on the good work. No matter how dark, or how calm and bright, the future appeared for us, you always saw the silver lining, and your buoyant hope and encouraging words have cheered us on in our work, till now, we are proud to say, we are in a more healthy state, both morally and financially, than ever before. A part at least of this success can be attributed to your untiring and unselfish efforts.

We assure you that you will be welcome should you at any time return to visit us, and we hope you will remember the many happy hours we have spent together.

That our Heavenly Father may bless and prosper you and your family in all your labours and undertakings in your new home, is the wish of your brethren of Diamond Loyal Orange Lodge No. 80.

Signed on behalf of the Lodge,
R. B. McGILL,
W. M.,
W. H. G. ARMSTRONG
Rec.-Sec.

Peterborough, Oct. 19, 1903.

Bros. Robert Wilson, D. M., W. A. Kindred, D. C. M., and John A. McWilliams, P.C.M., made appropriate speeches, and Bro. Murray, who was much affected, made a suitable reply, thanking the brethren for their address, and assuring them that he would always remember the happy hours spent with them in the lodge room.

THE LATEST NEWS OF LOCAL SPORT.

Scotch Curlers Express Appreciation of Canadian Hosts' Kindness.

Second Game in Intermediate O. R. F. U to be Played Here on Saturday.

CURLING.

The Peterborough curlers held their annual meeting in the Charlotte street rink last night with a fair attendance, there being present, Mr. Robert Neill, in the chair, Col. E B Edwards, and Messrs. R Kerr, R Waddell, G H Giroux, W G Ferguson, T F Matthews, T Brightman, D Davidson, G S Matthews, W G Morrow, R J Frost, D Hall, Dr. Greer, J D Collins and C N Brown.

The first business of the evening was the election of officers which resulted as follows:—

President—R Neill.
Vice-President—W G Morrow.
Secretary-Treasurer—C N Brown.
Executive Committee—Messrs. T Brightman, R J Frost, J. S. Knapman, R Kerr and T F Matthews.
Membership Committee—J S Knapman, R Waddell, T Brightman and R J Frost.

It was suggested that the club try to arrange matches with neighbouring clubs, which will be done.

Secretary Brown asked the Examiner to say that all cups and medals are to be returned as soon as possible.

From all outward appearances, although one can scarcely size up the situation at this time of year, curling in Peterborough will boom, and it is the general opinion that four or five strong rinks can be formed. This winter game has previously been enthusiastically indulged in and it is thought that this season will be as successful as any.

* * * *

It's a pity the parchment didn't come last night. It would have added, if possible, to the enthusiasm at the annual meeting of the Curling Association which, as it was, was evidently affected by the back wash or reflex action of the visit of the Scottish Curlers last winter. At noon to-day the secretaries of the Granite and Peterborough Curling Clubs received from Scotland a beautifully engrossed resolution of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club, thanking the local clubs for the courteous attention, cordial hospitality and general sportsmanlike treatment extended on the occasion of the visit of the Scottish Curling teams to Peterborough. The parchment, beautifully engrossed, was signed by Mansfield, chairman of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club; J. Gilmour and Robertson Durham, vice-presidents; C. Davidson Smith, secretary, and Rev. J. Kerr, chaplain and chaperon, and R. Husband, secretary-treasurer of the Scottish curling team. No doubt both clubs will have their trophies framed and hung in their parlours as a memento of one of the most delightful and inspiring incidents in local curling circles, in the history of the game in Peterborough.

GOLF.

The Ladies' Championship of the Peterborough Golf Club was played off yesterday afternoon between Mrs. R. M. Dennistoun and Miss Jessie Dennistoun, the former player winning easily by a score of 5 up and 4 to go. Mrs. Dennistoun exhibited some very good play, and well deserves the championship, which, by the way, she also won last year.

BANK OF COMMERCE VS. BANK OF MONTREAL.

Before quite a host of spectators this match was played off yesterday afternoon.

The Bank of Commerce was represented by Mr. Hughes-Charles and Mr. J. Laurence, and the Bank of Montreal by Mr. Wilmot and Mr. M. Hamilton. Mr. H. Burnham acted as referee.

Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Laurence were both off their games, but the magnificent play of Mr. Charles and Mr. Wilmot made the game well worth looking at. Special mention must be made of Mr. Wilmot's splendid drive at the first hole, which evoked great applause from the spectators.

Owing to the biased decisions of the referee(?) the Bank of Commerce were defeated by 6 up and 5 to go. It is rumoured that the referee was bribed by a heavy supper the night before, but as to the truth of this statement there seems to be some doubt. The game, of course, was protested and after the referee has had time to read up the rules, will be played over again.—Com.

RUGBY.

The football-loving public of Peterborough, will learn with much satisfaction that the Victorias of Toronto, will play the locals here on Saturday afternoon next. The game is of course in the schedule of the O.R.F.U. Intermediate Series. The Peterborough men will make strenuous efforts to win the match, and the visitors will likely be as determined in that regard. The match will be played on the Nicholls oval, and a large crowd is expected to witness the event. The locals will be somewhat strengthened by the addition of Burnham on the half back line, and it is also hinted that other changes may be made on the local aggregation. Citizens in general should bear in mind Saturday afternoon's match and make a point to be present.

The executive of the City League will meet this evening at 8 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. parlours. All who can possibly turn out are requested to do so.

* * * *

The Toronto Varsity team, with McPherson playing half-back, went to Montreal on Saturday and defeated the McGill team, champions of the Canadian Intercollegiate Union, by a score of 7—3.

* * * *

Kingston Whig — There was an attendance at the Queen's H-R.M.C. game on Friday of about 300, who had an opportunity of comparing the close, heavy mass plays of the old rules, and the more open style of play as demonstrated in the Limestone-Brockville match on Thursday. One thing was most noticeable that whereas in Friday's contest some 10 men were more or less knocked out in Thursday's contest there was not a single similar case. This is where the new Burnside rules appear to the best advantage.

HOCKEY.

The Belleville Intelligencer's size up of the hockey situation is quoted below: "The most surprising news comes from Picton, where they are going to have a team this winter which will make the Belleville aggregation look like a lot of cripples. A bunch of star players have been hypnotized and have agreed to play in Boulterville, and if what one hears is true the residents of that little Prince Edward metropolis are going to have the real hockey time of their lives. The Picton team will stick to Belleville wherever Belleville goes, either Senior, Intermediate or Junior, and already they are willing to bet anything from a can of peas to a hundred dollars that the Picton team will beat the Belleville team on its own ice. What do you think of that? In the meantime Port Hope and Peterborough have been strengthening up and sawing wood, and when the championship season opens in this district of the O.H.A. it will take a mighty fine guesser to pick the winner. And that's no idle October dream."

LACROSSE.

The members and officers of the Athletic Lacrosse Club, are being tendered an oyster supper by Mr. Gardiner this evening at 9.30.

THE ANGEL'S WHISPER.

A baby was sleeping;
Its mother was weeping,
For her husband was far on the wild raging sea;
And the tempest was swelling
Round the fisherman's dwelling;
And she cried, "Dermot, darling, O, come back to me!"

Her beads while she numbered,
The baby still slumbered,
And smiled in her face as she bended her knee:
"O, blest be that warning,
My child, thy sleep adorning,
For I know that the angels are whispering with thee."

"And while they are keeping
Bright watch o'er thy sleeping,
O, pray to them softly, my baby, with me!
And say thou wouldst rather
They'd watch o'er thy father!
For I know that the angels are whispering to thee."

The dawn of the morning
Saw Dermot returning,
And the wife wept with joy her babe's father to see;
And closely caressing
Her child with a blessing,
Said, "I knew that the angels were whispering with thee."

FIRST SUBMARINE.

Sole Survivor of First Vessel of the Sort Ever Made.

Mr. W. A. Alexander is the sole survivor of the first submarine to be successfully operated in time of war, and ought therefore to be a person of interest at the present moment, when submarines seem expected to play so great a role in modern naval warfare. The first submarine was a most primitive boat, hand-driven, and constructed out of a cyl .der boiler 25 feet long. As a member of the artillery it fell to Mr. Alexander's lot to build the submarine, and he did it, without, of course, having any experience to guide him. Mr. Alexander, a white-haired, gentle old man, would not give anybody the impression that he would show daredevil courage enough to go down in a boat that had already three times drowned its crew of nine men. Mr. Alexander was only prevented by a mere chance from going out on the last occasion when the Confederate submarine disappeared with the Federal cruiser she destroyed. There was no means of replenishing the air supply, and once when a test was being made as to how long the boat could remain under water a candle would not burn more than twenty-five minutes, so rapidly did the breathing of the nine men of the crew exhaust the oxygen. It gives some idea of the nature of these men that they remained below the surface of the water some two hours after the candle went out.—St. James' Gazette.

GOOD NEWS FOR HIS OLD HOME.

Vernon Bromley Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

For Years he was Crippled by Rheumatism and Sciatica—Dodd's Kidney Pills Made him a New Man.

Morristown, N. Y., October 19th. (Special.) — Vernon Bromley, now of this place, but formerly of Trenton, Ont., relates an experience that will prove of great interest to his old friends in Canada.

"I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism and Sciatica for years," Mr. Bromley states. "The citizens of Trenton will remember what a cripple I was. I could neither work nor lie down, the pain was so great.

"Reading of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills finally led me to try them, and from the second box I began to feel relief. I continued to use them until I had taken twelve boxes, when I was completely cured.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have made a new man of me."

Rheumatism and kindred diseases are caused by uric acid in the blood. If the kidneys are sound they will take all the uric acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make sound kidneys.

Synonyms Discriminated.

Shortly before Napoleon III. appropriated the vacant throne of France he one day asked a great lady to explain the difference between "an accident" and "a misfortune."

"If," she said, "you were to fall into the Seine, that would be an accident; if they pulled you out again, that would be a misfortune."

Caution.

"Don't you think you'd better speak to papa tonight, George?" the girl suggested.

"He's just come in, hasn't he?" asked George.

"Yes."

"Well, I think I'll give him time to get his slippers on."

A Sport.

"So Mistah Erastus Pinkney is gwine to git married," said the coffee colored youth with the large scarfpin.

"Yes," was the answer. "Somebody done tol' him dat marriage was a lottery, an' he's sech a spoht dat he's boun' to take a chance."—Exchange.

ROADHOUSE ROBBERS

MUCH DAMAGE DONE AROUND DAWSON CITY BY BEARS.

One of the Latest Forms of Excitement in the Yukon Country—Lively Experience of Dominion Land Surveyor Charles W. Macpherson—Saved by a Man and Two Dogs—Cinnamon Bear's Raids.

Robberies and depredations are the order along the winter trail between Dawson and White Horse, say recent mail advices from Dawson City in the Yukon. Roadhouses are being broken into and rifled and men are being pursued in broad daylight. The outlaws are bears.

The bears have broken into and rifled Clarke's roadhouse, Stevens' roadhouse, further south. At Jennings' roadhouse, 15 miles south of Stewart Crossing, one attacked Charles W. MacPherson, Dominion Land Surveyor, from Dawson, and created a great deal of excitement.

Damages done at the Clarke and the Stevens' roadhouses by the marauders amount to hundreds of dollars. Both houses were entered and pillaged when the people were all absent.

MacPherson was attacked at the Jennings roadhouse when about to leave the building. He had stepped out the door and was a few feet distant when he saw a huge black bear approaching on its hind paws, and waving its fore paws.

MacPherson thought he could frighten the impudent fellow away and began to warble a series of his most melodious baritone notes, mixed with a choice selection of war whoops, yells and light opera gesticulations presented in accelerated time. The bear seemed to like the music and the sonorous intonations pouring from the frightened MacPherson. The big fellow advanced with quick strides and a smiling countenance and outstretched arms.

Charley waved his sombrero and said, "G'wan, go back, whatcher want?" and increased his delsarte exercise. The bear failed to halt. MacPherson thought the situation serious. In a moment the bear was five feet from the door, and MacPherson made a spring into the roadhouse.

The bear rapped at the door without effect. MacPherson could not escape from the house. The bear came to the window. MacPherson thought the big rascal was coming in at the door. He began to think over his past life, and the last time he was at Sunday School.

Just then the roadhouse man appeared up the road with two dogs. MacPherson gave a shout of joy. He was saved.

Another moment and one of the roadhouse man's dogs gave chase to the bear and bruin fled to the woods. A second dog became excited, ran between the legs of the roadhouse man, upset the man, causing a verbal explosion, entangled the man in a fishline which he was carrying, and made his shotgun go off in the air. But MacPherson was saved. He has been home several days, and has confided his secrets to only a few friends. All have promised not to tell. They are keeping their word.

At Clarke's roadhouse a huge cinnamon bear made a raid. He mounted the roof, disturbed the gravel covering and gnawed the logs. He smelled the goods packed inside, and scratched away the gravel from a spot over the kitchen. The fellow was so persistent he got down to the small roof poles, and before he knew what was happening crashed through the roof into the larder. He was in heaven. He filled up on bloating dried fruits, ate flour, sugar and everything that can delight a man and a bear, and then took in the remainder of the house. He slept in the bed, made use of the chairs, smashed the windows, demolished other furniture, and then landed a double solar plexus on the door with his giant paws and emerged into the world.

MacPherson reported the Clarke roadhouse case to Constable Bell of a nearby police detachment. The constable went to the roadhouse on horseback to investigate. When he arrived at the place the bear emerged covered with flour and looking like a great Polar, or some other member of the Bruin family doing the ghost dance. The constable's horse became frightened and fled. The constable had no big gun, so did not make an issue. He returned to the barracks and sent another man after the bear. The other man shot the bear in the hind leg, but the fellow escaped. The only trace found of the bear was a spot in the woods nearby where the intelligent old robber had stopped and plugged his wound with moss. He was a giant cinnamon.

At Stevens' roadhouse a bear broke into the place, one of the finest hotels on the overland route, demolished windows, mirrors, furniture and everything in sight, and continued his costly fun by breaking down the single wall partitions on the second floor. He broke open the kitchen supplies, had a mammoth feed, and then went forth into the wilderness to look for another roadhouse.

Turner Paintings in Canada.

The third volume of the library edition of Ruskin (George Allen, 1903), which is the first volume of "Modern Painters," contains many illustrations not in the original edition, and among them seven illustrations of pictures by Turner. If we consider the condition of art in Canada twenty years ago, it may seem worthy of notice that of these seven Turners four are owned in Montreal:

1. Mercury and Argus. Owned by Lord Strathcona.
2. Llanthony Abbey. Owned by Lord Strathcona.
3. Venice: the Dogana and Madonna della Salute. Owned by James Ross.
4. Port Ruysdael. Owned by Hon. George A. Drummond.

Of the remaining three, one is owned in Boston.—B. E. W., in Toronto News.

LOU DILLON'S SPEED.

New Trotting Champion May Put Record Still Lower—What Driver Sanders Says of the Possibilities.

The light harness horse world is now talking about the possibility of the new world's champion trotter, Lou Dillon, 2.00, going the distance in 1.59 or better. Experts agree that she has more speed "up her sleeve," and her owner, C. G. K. Billings, formerly of Chicago, is confident that she will do better than 2 minutes flat, possibly going the mile in 1.58.

Mr. Billings says: "I'm glad I decided to let my horse have a chance at the Readville track. It was very fast. I think Lou Dillon can go below 2 minutes."

LOU DILLON (2.00) WORLD'S TROTTING CHAMPION.

Millard Sanders, driver and trainer of Lou Dillon, says: "The two minute trotter has appeared, but I firmly believe that Lou Dillon is able to lower the mark still lower, to 1.59 or 1.58¼. There is not the slightest doubt in my mind that Lou Dillon has every trotting record at her mercy from one to two miles. She has lasting endurance and is easily the stoutest hearted horse the world has ever seen. She is unusually reliable and in all her career has never disappointed me. In fact, she has bettered her marks more than any rational man could expect.

"To demonstrate that she has not nearly reached her limit you have only to study the fractions of today's mile. She did the last quarter in 29, and the last eighth in 14 seconds, which in itself is one of the most marvelous exhibitions ever given by a trotting horse. The majority of fast horses practically stagger across the line, while Lou Dillon finished at a 1.52 gait. She wanted more, and took me a quarter of a mile to pull her up. No sooner was she unharnessed than she began prancing around like a horse that had just gone a 2.40 mile instead of doing a record making mile in 2.00.

"Many horses cannot go farther than a mile at top speed. Lou Dillon is different. If her owner desires I have not the remotest doubt that she could easily break Cresceus' record for two miles. She has done what few horsemen ever dared to hope for, and she can do still better."

Lou Dillon has gamely won her right to a niche in the trotting hall of fame, and she is the greatest of the sure gaited horses that have forged into the ranks of the world beaters. The trotting record has dropped a minute since 1806, and the horses that have figured in lowering it are as follows:

Wagner and Thirteen.

In the life of Richard Wagner the number thirteen played a curious part. He was born in 1813, the numerals of which, added together, are equal to thirteen, and he received a name the letters of which when added to those of his family name are also equal to thirteen. Moreover, he finished "Tannhauser" on April 13, 1860, and it was performed for the first time on March 13, 1861. Twenty-two years later he died, and again the mystical number was dominant, for he passed away on Feb. 13, 1883.

KEEP CLOSE TO NATURE.

Country Young People Make Mistake in Migrating to the Cities.

Mr. Goldwin Smith, a veteran of culture and a resident of the city, gave some good advice at the exhibition of the Broadview Boys' Institute recently, says The Toronto Globe. He strongly approved of teaching useful arts to the boys and domestic science to the girls, and of endeavoring to "reinforce the home" in its rivalry with the saloon. In these days, when manual training for boys and cooking and needlework for girls are strenuously advocated by educationists, it is encouraging to have such endorsation from one, whose outlook over society has been so long and so varied. If it does not silence objectors it will at least tend to keep the reformers from wearying in well doing.

All who have made a close study of sociological conditions in Canada—and we have Mr. Smith's assurance that they are in this respect similar to those in Britain and the United States—will agree with his view that young people brought up in the country make a great mistake in migrating to the city. In the country there is room sufficient to give a sense of freedom; in the city the only spaces of which the great majority of people can make sure are crowded thoroughfares.

One of the causes promoting the movement of population city-ward is a prevalent feeling among rural youth that farming is not as respectable as some other callings. It should be possible to do something to counteract so absurd a notion, if the ten thousand teachers in our public and high schools were in a position to speak intelligently, inspiringly, and convincingly on the subject; but most of them are themselves fugitives from the farm, who have long been out of sympathy with the life that seemed so unattractive in their childhood. There is no reason why it should be so uninviting as it has been and still is. Some progress has been made in the way of giving color and variety to it, but the evolution will proceed slowly until the public schools are made more efficient co-operators in the work of improvement.

Canadian Known Abroad.

Mr. Robert N. Venning, who has been appointed Assistant Commissioner of Fisheries, is probably as well known outside of Canada as any member of the Canadian Civil Service. For thirty years, although he was born so lately as 1854, Mr. Venning has been attached to the Department of Marine and Fisheries. As Chief Clerk of the Fisheries Branch of the Department, Mr. Venning has been of inestimable aid to the various members under whom he has served. From the inception of the Behring Sea sealing issue Mr. Venning became the confidential officer in charge of the preparation of the Canadian case. His labors in this connection were enormous, and his natural aptitude for research enabled him to speedily perform an immense quantity of work. So ably did he perform this commission that Mr. Venning, by advice of Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, then Minister of Marine and Fisheries, was appointed British Commissioner to report on the Russian sealing operations in the Kommandorski Islands. To this end he was given quarters on a British man-of-war cruising in the Aleutian waters, and for several months he had the vessel at his service in prosecuting his researches. He also passed some time on a Russian warship, by invitation of the Admiral commanding the Czar's fleet in the North Pacific. The results of Mr. Venning's researches formed an important portion of the brief for the British counsel in the argument before the Paris Tribunal. The Governor-General-in-Council signalized Mr. Venning's efforts by an official pote of thanks and acknowledgment. Since then Mr. Venning has performed valuable services in connection with the Commission for adjusting the claims of Canadian sealers whose vessels were seized by American cruisers. As assistant to Professor Prince Mr. Venning will undoubtedly be a most efficient officer.

SINFUL HABITS IN YOUTH
MAKE NERVOUS, WEAK, DISCASED MEN.

THE RESULT of ignorance and folly in youth, overexertion of mind and body, induced by lust and excesses are constantly wrecking the lives and future happiness of thousands of promising young men. Some have had this without at an early age, at the blossom of manhood, while others are forced in doing only weary, fruitless and melancholy existence. Others punish their money but find no solace or comfort there. The victims are found in all stations of life—the farm, the store, the workbench, the pulpit, the trades and the professions. The symptoms are found on the faces are unmistakable and are easily detected by any physician. Some of these are: Pimples on the face, Blotches, Eruptions, Sunken Eyes, Falling Hair, Nervousness, Lack of Energy, Despondency, Dizziness, Specks before the eyes, Weak Back, Kidneys and Bladder, Sexual Organs Impaired, Unnatural Drains, Lack of Ambition, Aversion to Society, Bashfulness, Timidity, Self-distrust, Poor Memory, Sleeplessness, Bad Dreams, Constipation, Impure Blood, Stomach Disorders, Rheumatism, Kidney Trouble, Bladder Irritation, Gravel, Pain in the Back

Through the Orchard Gate

By HARRIET WHITNEY

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

"Kree-e-ee," went the frogs down in the marshy corner of Miss Bennett's meadow where the cattails grew.

The high buttoned crown of Miss Bennett's white sunbonnet had but now been pink with the bloom of sunset. It was pushed back off the young lady's head and hung around her neck by two ruffled strings.

"I hate the country after sunset," complained Miss Bennett's visiting sister, standing forlornly on the back porch. Violet twilights shot with gold and faint pink afterglows were dust and ashes and the far twilight voices from marsh and thicket were desolation to Mrs. Belinda Bonsel. "These old frogs drive me frantic."

Marjorie seated herself upon the shallow lower step, untying her bonnet and gathering it up closely in her supple hands. There were two indistinct horizontal lines in her forehead.

"I always love the frogs," she said, turning her face toward the meadow, "only—they remind me of the evening I nailed up the orchard gate—years ago."

"And I wish you'd unnail it." Belinda's nimble mind frisked into another grievance. "Ed 'll be up from the city tomorrow evening again, and he always cuts through the orchard. Last time he tore an acre of lining out of his coat climbing over the fence, and I had it to darn. Whatever did you nail it up for?"

"Kree-e-ee," echoed faintly. The silver gray had almost overcome the rose lights. A slim little curve of moon lay against the dim gold of the west. Marjorie was fluting the cape of her bonnet over her fingers.

"I nailed it up so that Ben Harper couldn't come through it any more."

"You always were a queer little trick," commented Belinda, "and never knew beans so far as men were concerned. But I forgot you and Ben fell out. What was it—jealousy, misunderstandings or meddling friends?"

"Clotheslines," said Marjorie.

Belinda's laugh broke into the tremolo of the frog chorus.

"Whatever! You can do a good many curious things, Marge, but how did you manage to get your romance tied up with a clothesline?"

"Becky Bean always would fasten the line to the plum trees this side of the orchard and forget to take it down. Ben invariably came through the orchard gate at twilight and the line never failed to knock his hat off. Men are singular about their hats. He and I were combative, anyway, in those days. One particular evening, like this, and the frogs piping just that way, we were unusually predisposed to battle. We had been to a picnic. Both our noses were peeling with sunburn and our shoes were tight. The sunburn was a just retribution to him, for he had sat for an hour on a tumble down stile in a snarl of blackberry bushes with Sadie Plummer beside him, and then flung thunderbolts of wrath about because I gave Joe Lawton most of the jelly cake out of the lunch basket. But he came over as usual in the evening, and as usual Becky had left the clothesline in the trees, and it happened to sag a little and caught Ben right across his poor sunburned nose where it was tenderest. The war broke out then. Among other things he said if I wanted him to come I would at least see that he could get in without maiming himself. I said he could come the front way as a well regulated person would or not come at all. He said it would be not at all, then—and after the fray I nailed up the gate."

"And so nailed out the only man you ever knew that was worth a yard of calico," was Mrs. Belinda's consolation. "You might as well unnail it now and let it be of some use, as long as the whole business is ancient history and Ben vanished away into airy nothing. He won't bother you any more. While you are mooning among dismal memories and frogs, intrenched behind your nailed up gate, he is living comfortably somewhere with a fat little wife and probably seven children. No doubt one of them, a little freckled one who meddles, is named Marjorie."

It was dark now and Marjorie's cheeks could burn unseen.

"Kree-e-ee," croaked the frogs derisively.

Before the mists were out of the hollow lands the next morning Marjorie turning her face toward the meadow, "only—they remind me of the evening I nailed up the orchard gate—years ago."

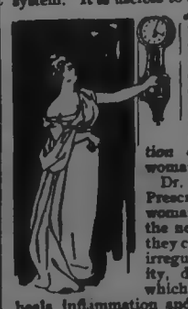
A Nervous Woman

Will often feel compelled to stop the clock whose ticking seems unbearable to her. In such a nervous condition the woman needs a building up of the entire system. It is useless to attempt the cure of the nerves while the cause of the nervousness remains uncured. A very common cause of nervousness in women is a diseased condition of the delicate womanly organism.



Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures womanly diseases and the nervousness which they cause. It changes irregularity to regularity, dries the drains which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It is a perfect tonic and nervine, tranquilizing the nerves, promoting the appetite and inducing refreshing sleep.

"When I first wrote you I had been to three different doctors and two of them said I would never get better without going to the hospital for an operation," writes Mrs. Selma Erickson, of 406 Elm Street, St. Paul, Minn. "Was not able to do anything. If I would get up and walk to the kitchen and back I would have to lie in bed for a day or sometimes two days. Now I have used six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and six of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and the result is just wonderful. I was so nervous I had to have some one by my side all the time even in day time, and I could hardly eat anything. I took treatment from a doctor twice a week, and every time I would go there I felt so sick, but since I quit all the doctors and began taking your medicines I gained right along. I weighed 125 pounds, when I began taking your medicines (in August) and now I am up to my usual weight 165. I am as well and feel as good as ever."

Bennett, with a claw hammer, was drawing the bent and rusted nails from the old orchard gate.

"Belinda told the truth," she admitted in the inner circle of her heart. "I nailed my own happiness out when I drove in these nails. However, the crooked little nails of miserable pride and temper (I called the mixture 'independence' then) I drove every day would inevitably have had the same effect in time. And not a nail here is an atom more rusted than my hopes of his ever coming back. But the old gate may as well be of some use to others. Belinda knows a few things, and I dare say it's true, all she said."

The hammer fell into a big bunch of spiderwort on the outside of the gate, and Marjorie rested her elbows on the top rail of the fence. The clover lay in deep billows, crested with the silver of the dew. The ruffle on her pink gingham gown was limp and wet. The early sun looked at her through a soft, long vista of orchard, out of amethystine vapors. Robin songs bubbled and splashed all about.

The gate swung wide open on a loose hinge that creaked a note of relief.

"I must have Hiram Bean fix it," Marjorie decided practically, coming out of her retrospect and passing through the gate in quest of the hammer.

A man had come trampling along the orchard, leaving a wake of crushed wet clover behind him.

"You've broken the latch," he said, with a laugh that swept Marjorie into old paths and byways, while he spread a broad, brown palm for her hand, "just the way you broke the latch off my poor heart long ago, so I could never keep you out of it any more."

"I could nail it together again," she said sedately, with eyes that sparkled under their lashes.

"No; you couldn't drive the nails straight. Look at those wretched little twisted things. Mayn't I come through the old gate now, Margie? Only if I do you can't bar me out any more."

"I will never try," she answered, with dimples of happy laughter that were swiftly washed out by a recollection.

"Wait, Ben; I'm afraid—at least, Belinda said"—

"What did Belinda say?"

"That you must have married some one long ago."

"Oh, Belinda! It was Belinda's dear delight when we were all less than ten to create strife by getting me suspected by you of a deeply rooted resolve to marry Peggy Dodson when we grew up. She has come just about as near the mark now. No, Margie, Mrs. Ben's name is to be Marjorie or nothing. Providence has let me come back at just the right time. Let's take hold of hands and race through that gate the way we did when we were little—come." He caught Marjorie's hand. "Now—one for the money and two for the show, three to make ready and four—to—go."

Like two heedless children they sped, laughing, with linked hands through the old orchard gate, straight into an enchanted country.

A Just Judge.

Theophilus Harrington, a Vermont judge in the early part of the last century, was a man who loved the right and cared little for mere legal quibbling. "If justice controls your verdict," he would often say to the jury, "you will not miss the general principles of the law."

At one trial when the possession of a farm was in question the defendant offered a deed of the premises, to which the plaintiff's lawyer, Daniel Chipman, objected because it had no seal.

"But your client sold the land, was paid for it and signed the deed, did he not?" asked the judge.

"That makes no difference," said Chipman. "The deed has no seal and cannot be admitted in evidence."

"Is anything else the matter with the deed?" asked the judge.

"I don't know that there is."

"Mr. Clerk," said the judge, "give me a wafer and a three cornered piece of paper."

The clerk obeyed, and the judge deliberately made and affixed the seal.

"There, Brother Chipman," said he, "the deed is all right now. It may be put in evidence. A man is not going to be cheated out of his farm in this court when there is a whole box of wafers on the clerk's desk."

"The court will give me an exception?" pleaded the counsel.

"The court will do no such thing," answered the judge, and he kept his word.

COLONIES ARE A HANDFUL.

Andrew Lang Makes Contribution to the Political Situation.

Mr. Andrew Lang makes an illuminating contribution to the fiscal controversy in "Longman's Magazine." Why cannot Mr. Chamberlain "be 'aisy?" he asks. This is no place for politics, but the distressing worry about "fiscal policy" is not politics; it is something much worse, namely metachrematistics. Just as metaphysics are things on the off side of physics, and as "metether rial" is somewhat beyond and behind ether, so metachrematistics are in the charterless hinterland of political economy. Now, political economy is one of those things which no fellow understands so we may guess how totally incomprehensible metachrematistics must be. The higher mathematics are not on the same level of abstruness, and the topics discussed in "Mind," that cheerful periodical, are but as double acrostics, or the encyclopaedia competition, compared with this odious problem of fiscal policy. Meanwhile, the country is giving its opinion about metachrematistics, and every casual human being is voluble and confident of a theme manifestly not understood by professors who occupy chairs of metachrematistics in the universities. Laborers are invited to vote; and ladies ask you the impossible conundrum: "What do you think of fiscal policy?" Having read speeches by F.P.'s and Anti-F.P.'s, I learn that we are certain to lose the colonies in either case—that is, whether we adopt Mr. Chamberlain's plan (whatever it may be) or whether we don't. I am rather sorry for the colonies, because if we lose them, somebody else will take them, and find them rather a handful.

Mr. Lang's "impartial and luminous reflections" are, he says, the result of wet weather in a lovely part of the West Highlands. The weather also provoked the following beautiful but melancholy poem, which is titled "To Fiona." These three verses, forming a parody on "The Canadian Boat Song," are delightful:

From the damp shieling on the draggled island
Mountains divide you, and no end of seas.
But though your heart is genuinely Highland,
Still, you're in luck to be away from these!

Far from the mountains where the thirsty crofter
Early and eager registers his vote,
Still drinking harder as the day grows softer,
Fiona, from these then art happily remote.

Far from the hostels where the baffled tripper
Watches the window and contemplates the rain,
Far from the drenched decks where the oil-skinned skipper
Herds the unhappy clients of Macbrayne.

The Pay of Canadian Officials.

Compared with the United States, Canada's civil service, notwithstanding the increases under the new amending Act, remains ill paid. The maximum for deputy heads of departments is only $4,000 a year, and for chief clerks of departments $2,800 a year, far below the remuneration paid to officials of equal ability employed on railroads, in the banks, insurance and financial concerns, and commercial houses.

The officials are expected to live in a style which leaves no possible margin to the good. Men of large families lead a struggling existence to keep up social appearances and die poor. The consequence is the service has ceased to attract the best material.

Matters on the bench are even worse. The High Court judges in Ontario receive $6,000 a year, and Federal Supreme Court judges, the highest in the land, only $7,000 a year. The insufficiency of these salaries may be gathered by comparison with New South Wales, with a population of only 1,400,000, which pays ten Puisne judges $12,500 a year each; Victoria, population 1,200,000, pays $15,000 to the High Court judges, and so in all the Australian colonies.

The integrity of Canada's judges is traditional, but the salaries paid are below the earnings of first-class lawyers. Recent discussions on the subject in Parliament have made it clear that many vacancies on the Bench have been filled of late years with less regard to fitness than for party purposes.

A similar undesirable state of affairs as regards pay exists in the defensive forces. Canada maintains a permanent corps, established for the express purpose of producing a body of men capable of taking charge at a moment's notice, in case of national danger, of the training of all branches of the militia—cavalry, artillery, infantry, and the rest; but the pay is in no sense the modal required.

The London Fashions.

A Canadian girl now in London sends the following to a Toronto correspondent: "Some very dainty yet warm little wraps are to be seen at the theatres. A cream satin pelerine, or, rather, collarette, which was padded, for warmth, was veiled in a handsome silk braid lace collar, and had a ruche of white ostrich round the neck, and ostrich trimming all round the collarette, the feathers shaped like sable tails. The long stole ends were also of ostrich. Another neck-protector was of white satin, under lattice-work of chenille, and all trimmed with accordion-pleated chiffon frills. In Paris, where ladies attend theatres in a special style of dress, suggesting both evening and outdoor toilets, a novelty, seen on a leader of fashion, was a set of chiffon and marabou. The shoulder cape, of white satin, was applique, with Irish guipure, and frilled with plisse chiffon, on which the marabou came in scollops. The long ends to match, were further trimmed with bows of satin ribbon. There were a hood and muff to match. The collarette and hood might well serve for a London theatre, but no lady over here would dream of carrying a muff with her into the stalls of an evening."

J. W. Dinwoodie, of Campbellford, Ont., states: "For years I was troubled with nervousness and impaired liver and kidneys. I was treated by several doctors; tried every medicine. Last fall I procured a bottle of SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE. I took but a very few doses and the nervous depression left my entire system. I will never be without it."

QUOTATIONS ON THE WALL STREET MARKET.

Another Grand Advance in Wall Street Issues.

The Fluctuations of the Leading Stocks —Market Letters.

There was another grand rally in in the Wall street market and Atchison, C. P. R., and sugar were amongst the leaders. London came from 1-4 to 3-4 above parity and the Wall street people followed. By noon C.P.R. had reached 119 1-2, Atchison 66 1-2 and sugar 115. These were advances of from 3 to five points over yesterday's lowest prices. Twins which closed at 82 yesterday opened at 82 3-4 this morning and ran up to 84. There was a strong undertone and the bears were driven to cover. Sales to noon were 275,800.

Messrs. McMillan & Maguire report as follows:

New York, October 20, 1.50 p. m.—Market opened very irregular. Prices responded very languidly to higher London quotations. Most serious movement was of nature of liquidation in number of stocks supposed to be held by Pittsburg operators. This was sufficient to colour trading throughout market. Helping over of the National Bank of Pittsburg more than offset reassuring advices from elsewhere. Heavy sales of Reading were understood to be for middle west. Renewal of liquidation in U.S.S. was feature. Small premium exacted for use of Southern Ry. Pfd. was best support of that stock. It was thought that Gould Brokers had early Market generally.

The mercantile situation is sound, general trade, although checked, is not paralyzing. Railroad earnings made steady increases, ensure further prosperity to the west and south. We have paid the price for the craze of creating something out of nothing, and that account is probably about closed. In the natural order of things we should now have a gradual general advance of from 10 to 20 points. The failures in Baltimore unsettled the whole market, but, considering the very bad news, stocks held very well. I am a bull around present prices. They should not go three points lower.—Ridgeley.

CAUGHT IN THE SNARE O' THE FOWLER.

Detroit Race Track Bookmakers "Played" by a Rube.

A Smith Township Boy Cleans up a Pot of $3,500.

The following, which is from the Detroit Journal of October 5th, refers to the exploit of Mr. J. Fowler, now of the Northwest, but formerly of Smith township, near Fowlers' Corners. It is a case of diamond cut diamond, for the bookies would have had no compunction in victimising Fowler, if they had been clever enough. It is "admirable good fooling," if not commendable morality, to have cute Yankee sports done up by a Johnny Canuck in blue jeans.

"Wild Het, 20, 10, 5," was what the sports saw when the bookmakers marked the prices on the boards for the third race at Highland Park, Monday afternoon. But nobody wanted any part of the horse at these odds. She wasn't expected to win or to get a place or a show. That she was a gold brick at any price was the general opinion in the betting ring. Nobody seemed to know who Wild Het was or where she came from. Nor did any body seem to care two straws whether she was sired by Dick Welles or the commonest truck stallion in the country.

"How under the sun could she beat Jane Oaker and Onannetta, the favourites?" they asked.

"Wild Het, 40, 20, 10," read the betters a little later. The bookmakers were of the same opinion as the majority of the men in the ring and were willing to risk big odds on the mare. The figures were still too small, however. Everybody was too busy backing the favourites to notice Wild Het.

The bookies began to get uneasy. If the favourites won without some money being down on Wild Het they might be swamped, they reckoned. So they got busy with their chalk once more, this time placing the long-shot at 50, 30, and 20.

No sooner did they have the new prices on the boards than a gawky farmer-looking chap tripped up to a betting stand and handed the bookmaker two 50-dollar bills, saying:

"Fifty on Wild Het to win and fifty to show."

The bookmaker's eyes opened in amazement, and he looked at the fellow to see if he was crazy or just joking. He saw that his customer was in earnest and it occurred to him that the bills might be bogus. He and other bookmakers examined the bills, with the result that they were accepted and tucked away in the strong box of the bookmakers, to be kept there the rest of the day, at least they reasoned. The "Rube" got his bits of pasteboard, which, if Wild Het chanced to win, would net him $3,500 according to the odds on the horse, and jammed the checks into his jeans, just as the average city man does with his wife's millinery bills.

The bookmakers now seemed to realize that there was something doing, and they lost no time in pulling Wild Het's odds down to 30, 10 and 5.

A crowd of sports had seen the country chap make his big bet and they somehow took a tumble that he knew what he was about. So they dug down into their pockets and fished out a few bills to risk on Wild Het. Then the bookies immmediately set her price 12, 6 and 2, at which she closed.

Among those who bought her when she was 30 to 1, was Manager Ed. Barrow of the Detroit Ball Club, and a friend of his from Toronto.

Nobody in the stand seemed anxious for Wild Het to win, her supporters evidently being lost in the crowd. But Wild Het faltered not a bit for lack of encouragement. To the wire she came bouncing along like a cannon ball and won by a length and a half.

The "Rube" whose tickets called for $3,500, received his money in two checks and a stack of gold, and never cracked a smile as he walked off with it. The bookmakers said they were hit hard.

There will be no investigation in connection with the race, for Wild Het is no ringer. It is just another case of history repeating itself. Five or six years ago a party of horsemen from Winnipeg, Man., came out with an unknown horse called "Cyclone" and cleaned up a barrel of money with him on the Windsor track. Since then they have been coming out annually, this time bringing Wild Het, which is eight years old and owned by J. Fowler. She was bred by Hoosatonic and Abbey Hunt, neither of which is known in this part of the country. Wild Het appeared on the Highland track for the first time last week and the bookmakers then offered odds of 100 to 1 on her. She was nowhere in the race on this occasion, but it is now intimated that she was held back in that race.

It is reported in Windsor that Fred Dumouchelle, proprietor of the Farmers' Rest at Walkerville, won $4,000 on the victory of Wild Het. George Richards, of Windsor, is also known to have cleaned up a big sum on the race, and several other Canadians are said to have had the "killing" tipped off to them in time to get down big bets.

What Fred Douglass Said.

One cold night during the height of the civil war Hon. Frederick Douglass got out of a train at Jersey City. "Nigger!"

Owes His Life to a Neighbour's Kindness

Mr. D. P. Daughar'y, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbour. A PLEASANT SURPRISE

In Store for Those Who Doubt.

When you read that a sufferer of many years' standing has been completely restored to health by using Smith's Cure-all, you are inclined to doubt the statement and, in fact, have no belief in it whatever. The reason for this is that so much is claimed for the Cure-all it is impossible for anyone to believe it; if the advertiser confined his claims to the curing of one disease, as do the proprietors of Pyramid Pile Cure, readers would have much more faith in published testimonials. Those familiar with this great remedy know that testimonials as to its merit may be relied upon implicitly, also that the cures brought about by its use are little short of marvelous. The genuineness of the testimonial here given is vouched for and is but one of thousands received:—

"I wish to write you and tell you what your Pyramid Pile Cure has done for me. I have been troubled with piles for the past five years and used every remedy that was recommended to me. While some would give me relief for a while they never have cured. I was so bad this summer I could not get up or down without pain; could not attend to my household duties. Finally I got a 50-cent box of your Pyramid Pile Cure at the druggist's and it is now two months since I used the last of the box, and have had no trouble since. I can say it is really and truly a good remedy.

"I am so thankful I tried it as I know it has cured me, and if at any time I should have any such trouble again I would use it at once. Since I am cured I have recommended it to my friends, whom I know to be afflicted as I was, and I know they will use it too. I am so thankful I ever learned of your cure." Mrs. F. Hutt, 460 2nd street, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Pyramid Pile Cure is sold by druggists for fifty cents a package, or will be mailed to any address upon receipt of price by Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich. Write this firm for their book describing the cause and cure of piles.

RIGHTS SACRIFICED BY ALASKAN AWARD

An Official Digest of the Decision of the Boundary Tribunal.

Canada Practically Gets Nothing by Terms—Completely Barred From Port Simpson to Mount St. Elias—Americans Secure Islands Commanding Entrance to Portland Channel—Will Go on Record.

London, Oct. 21.—Following is an official digest of the Alaska decision:

The decision of the tribunal it made up of answers to the seven questions contained in the treaty of 1903 constituting the tribunal.

First question—What is intended as the point of commencement of the line?

Answer—The line commences at Cape Muzon.

Second question—What channel is the Portland Channel?

Answer—The Portland Channel passes north of Pearse and Wales Islands, and enters the ocean through Tongas Passage between Wales and Sitklan Islands.

Third question—What course should the line take from the point of commencement to the entrance of Portland Channel?

Answer—A straight line to the middle of the entrance of Tongas Passage.

Fourth question—To what point on the 56th parallel is the line to be drawn from the head of the Portland Channel, and what course should it follow between these points?

Answer—A straight line between Salmon and Bear Rivers direct to the 56th parallel of latitude.

Fifth question—In extending the line of demarcation northward from said point on the parallel of the 56th degree of north latitude, following the crest of the mountains situated parallel to the coast until its intersection with the 141st degree of longitude west of Greenwich, subject to the condition that if such line should anywhere exceed the distance of ten marine leagues from the ocean, then the boundary between the British and the Russian territory should be formed by a line parallel to the sinuosities of the coast, and distant therefrom not more than ten marine leagues; was it the intention and meaning of said convention of 1825 that there should remain in the exclusive possession of Russia a continuous fringe or strip of coast on the mainland, not exceeding ten marine leagues in width, separating the British possessions from the bays, ports, inlets, havens and waters of the ocean, and extending from the said point on the 56th degree of latitude north to a point where such a line of demarcation should intersect the 141st degree of longitude west of the meridian of Greenwich?

Sixth question—If the foregoing questions should be answered in the negative, and in the event of the summit of such mountains proving to be in places more than ten marine leagues from the coast, should the width of the lisiere which was to belong to Russia be measured (1) from the mainland coast of the ocean, strictly so-called along a line perpendicular thereto, or (2) was it the intention and meaning of the said convention that where the mainland coast is indented by deep inlets, forming part of the territorial waters of Russia, the width of the lisiere was to be measured (a) from the line of the general direction of the mainland coast, or (b) from the line separating the waters of the ocean from the territorial waters of Russia, or (c) from the heads of the aforesaid inlet?

Required no answer after the fifth question had been answered in the affirmative.

Seventh question—What, if any exist, are the mountains referred to as situated parallel to the coast, which mountains when within ten marine leagues from the coast are declared to form the eastern boundary?

Answer—The majority of the tribunal have selected the line of peaks starting at the head of Portland Canal and running along the high mountains, on the outer edge of the mountains, shown on the maps of survey made in 1893, extending to Mount Whipple and thence along what is known as the Hunter Line of 1878, crossing the Stikine River about twenty-four miles from its mouth, thence northerly along the high peaks to Kate's Needle, from Kate's Needle to the Devil's Thumb. The tribunal stated that there was not sufficient evidence, owing to the absence of a complete survey, to identify the mountains which correspond to those intended by the treaty. This contemplates a further survey of that portion by the two Governments. From the vicinity of Devil's Thumb the line runs to the continental watershed, thence through White and Taiya or Chilkoot Passes, westerly to a mountain, indicated on the map attached to the treaty as 6,850 feet, thence to another mountain 5,800 feet and from that point in a somewhat curved line across the head of the Glaciers to Mount Fairweather. This places the Canadian outpost on the upper water of Chilkoot River in British territory and the mining camps of Porcupine and Glacier Creeks in American territory. From Mount Fairweather the line passes north on high peaks along the mountains indicated on the map by Mounts Pinta, Ruhama and Vancouver to Mount St. Elias.

Special opinions were submitted on the second and fifth questions by Lord Alverstone, Secretary Root and Senators Turners and Lodge, which will form part of the record.

Will Go on Record.

Messrs. Aylesworth and Jette will submit their contrary opinions to the tribunal, so as to go officially on record, and while they declined to sign the award they signed the maps agreed on by the majority.

London, Oct. 21.—Sir Louis Jette and Mr. A. B. Aylesworth, the Canadian Commissioners, have made a statement regarding the award, as follows:

"The decision of the Alaska Boundary Tribunal has been given, and in view of its character the people of Canada are, in our judgment, entitled to such explanation from us as will enable them to comprehend fully the manner in which their interests have been dealt with. We take the points of the decision in the order in which they are presented by treaty under which the Tribunal was constituted:

"First, Portland Canal. There are two channels parallel with each other, with four islands lying between them. The Canadian contention was that the northern channel should be adopted, the United States contended for the southern channel. If the Canadians succeeded it would give Canada the four islands which lie opposite the southern shore of Observatory Inlet and the harbor of Port Simpson. If the United States succeeded it would give them these four islands. The islands named in order as they run from the sea inward are Kannaghunut, Sitklan, Wales and Pearse Islands. When the members of the Tribunal met after the argument and considered this question, the view of the three British Commissioners was that the Canadian contention was absolutely unanswerable. A memorandum was prepared and read to the Commissioners embodying our views and showing it to be beyond dispute that the Canadian contention upon this branch of the case should prevail and that the boundary line should run northward of the four islands named, thus giving them to Canada.

An Unjustifiable Award.

"Notwithstanding these facts, members of the Tribunal, other than ourselves, have now signed an award giving the two islands of Kannahunut and Sitklan to the United States. These two islands are the outermost of the four. They command the entrance to Portland Channel, to Observatory Inlet and the ocean passage to Port Simpson. Their loss wholly destroys the strategic value to Canada of Wales and Pearse Islands. In our opinion there is no process of reasoning whereby the line thus decided upon by the Tribunal can be justified. It was never suggested by counsel in the course of argument that such a line was possible. Either the four islands belong to Canada or they belong to the United States. In the award Lord Alverstone agrees with the United States Commissioners that the islands should be divided, giving the two that possess the most strategic value to the United States.

The Mountain Line.

"Second, the line northward from Portland Channel. Substantially the Canadian contention on this line was that there were mountains parallel to the coast within the meaning of the treaty of 1825, and that the tops of such mountains should be declared the boundary, the mountains nearest the sea being taken. The United States contention was that there were no mountains parallel with the coast within the meaning of the treaty, and the boundary line, therefore, must be fixed under the provision of the original treaty relating to the ten marine leagues, or 35 miles, and so run at a distance of 35 miles from shore, including the term shore heads, all inlets, bays, etc. The Tribunal finds the Canadian contention correct as to the existence of mountains within the terms of the treaty, but the fruits of this victory are taken from Canada by fixing as the mountain line a row of mountains so far from the coast as to give to the United States substantially nearly all the territory in dispute. Around the head of Lynn Canal the line will follow the watershed somewhat in accordance with the present provisional boundary. We are of opinion that the mountain line traced by Mr. King, the Dominion astronomer, along the coast should have been adopted, at least as far as the shores of Lynn Canal. If effect had been given to the contention that Great Britain had, by her acquiescence in adverse occupation, deprived herself of the right to claim the head of Lynn Canal, we should have regarded such a conclusion as perhaps open to reasonable justification. No such position can, however, be taken regarding the inlets lower down the coasts. Mr. King's line running along the coast to Lynn Canal and a line thence drawn around the head of Lynn Canal, following the watershed, would have given Canada the heads of the lower inlets, with at least one fine harbor from which access to the interior of Atlin and the Yukon country could have been had. It would not, so far as we have been made aware, have taken in any territory ever actually occupied by United States citizens. It would have given to the United States the whole of Lynn Canal, including Skagway and Dyea and Pyramid Harbor, and it would have been, we think, reasonably satisfactory to Canada.

Canada's Interests Sacrificed.

"Instead of taking the coast line of mountains, a line of mountains has been chosen far back from the coast, clearing completely all the bays, inlets and means of access to the sea, and giving the United States a complete land barrier between Canada and the sea from Portland Canal to Mount St. Elias. We have not been able to derive any understanding from our colleagues on the Commission as to the principle upon which they have selected their line of mountains, and our observation of the discussions which have resulted in the settlement of this line has led us to the conclusion that, instead of resting upon any intelligible principle, the choice of this line has been compromised between the opposing and entirely irreconcilable views as to the true meaning of the original treaty. The result of this compromise has, we think, been a distinct sacrifice of the interests of Canada. When it was shown that there were mountains parallel with the coast within the meaning of the treaty, the only logical course, in our judgment was to adopt as the boundary the mountains in the immediate vicinity of the coast.

"Third, as to the general question of inlets. The tribunal finds against the contention of Canada. We both are strongly of the opinion that this conclusion is wrong, and we have put on record at length the reasons for our view in this respect.

"Finally, if the six members of the tribunal had each given an individual judicial decision on each of the questions submitted, we should have conceived it our duty under the treaty of 1903, however much we might have differed from our colleagues, to have joined in signing the document which constituted the official record of answers. We do not consider the finding of the tribunal as to the islands at the entrance of Portland Channel or as to the mountain line a judicial one, and we have, therefore, declined to be parties to the award. Our position during the conference of the tribunal was an unfortunate one. We have been in entire accord between ourselves, and have severally and jointly urged our views as strongly as we were able, but we have been compelled to witness the sacrifice of the interests of Canada, powerless to prevent it, though satisfied that the course the majority determined to pursue in respect to the matters above specially referred to

APPEALING TO THE ELECTORS.

The Opposition newspapers — The Mail and Empire, The World, The News, and others—are bemoaning the degradation of the Liberal party in Ontario as revealed in some of the appeals reported to have been made to the electors in Sault Ste. Marie and Muskoka. It would seem that some over-zealous campaigner so far transgressed all limits of decency as to mention with commendation the action of Premier Ross and the Government in safe-guarding the interests of the employees of the Clergue industries at the Soo. The delicate and refined sensibilities of the Opposition journals have been offended by what the most sensitive of them calls "the appeal to the pocket." What offends them most of all is that the appeal is "vulgar," "peculiarly vulgar."

Now we have no desire to excuse the "vulgarity" of the average election appeal of either political party. Too strong language cannot be used in condemnation of the irrepressible playing to the gallery on the part of petty politicians, especially if the playing is itself "peculiarly vulgar." But it is quite another matter to have it argued that the Government arranged for the payment of the wages due by the derelict corporation to its employees "because a bye-election was pending." The interest of Premier Ross and his Government in the development and welfare of northern Ontario is no newborn affair. In the long ago the Liberal party had to fight for Ontario's possession of a large portion of territory, and ever since the Government has had to do its duty to those northern districts in the face of the Opposition's denunciation and disparagement. Mr. Whitney and his old-time advocates now doing service in the bye-election campaign have for years been sneering at the worth of "the land of the stunted poplar" from Temiskaming to the Lake of the Woods, and their sudden interest in the Soo is almost suspicious. If one examines it closely it might seem even "peculiarly vulgar." And it is quite gratuitous and unwarranted to insinuate that the admittedly good thing done by the Government would not have been done had there been no bye-election pending. The record of the Government gives that insinuation a flat denial.

If any Liberal had disgraced his party by appeals to the electors that were "peculiarly vulgar" he would be deserving of censure; but what shall be said of the appeals of the Opposition press and speakers to the electors in the Soo and Muskoka to assist in placing the administration of Ontario's affairs in the control of a party whose leader has been supplanted by a political adventurer, the least of whose offences against political morals is his vulgarity? Ontario politics may be "peculiarly vulgar," but a lower depth would be touched were the administration in the dishonoured hands of the member for Manitoulin and his ilk.—Globe.

STABLE GOVERNMENT NEEDED.

There is much point in the statement of Mr. E. V. Bodwell, K. C., of Victoria, B. C., who told a Toronto newspaper that British Columbia, which has had a vexatious experience of political uncertainty and crisis, needs a stable government, that is, a government by any party which has a strong enough following to permit of energetic administration. British Columbia has great natural, mineral and other resources. To secure the desired measure of development, foreign capital is needed. While the country is seething in political crises and political unrest, outside capitalists will be deterred from investing money, no matter how alluring the prospects in other respects. The same idea applies to this province. Ontario has great resources, and to secure their development there is required more capital than is available at home. With a good stable government, with a united following, foreigners will be encouraged to venture upon investments, feeling confident that no political uncertainties and unsettling squabbles for place, will imperil their investments. This will more readily come about if the government has, as the Ross Government has, a definite and aggressive develoment policy, and shows a practical interest and sympathy with great enterprises, profitable to the promoters and beneficial to the country, in the development of its resources. Under these circumstances the result of the bye-elections—Sault Ste. Marie and Muskoka—is a matter of moment. Even if they go against the Government, the latter will still be in the majority, but that majority will not be as satisfactory, nor permit the Government to apply its policy of advancement with so much vigour and energy. These two elections going favourably, will encourage the Government to persevere in the application of its programme of advance legislation and administration in a manner worthy of the extent and importance of our resources and the reputation of the province for enterprise and progressive instincts and achievements.

MR. GAMEY SIZED UP.

(Toronto News, Anit-Ross)

Mr. Gamey is announced to address a series of meetings in behalf of the Conservative candidate in Muskoka. There is a curious and lively interest in the Manitoulin politician. He represents no particular policy or principle, and contributes nothing to the serious discussion of general Provincial questions. His short sareer in public affairs has revealed qualities and characteristics which make neither for the dignity of public life nor for his own good reputation. The blunt truth is that he had suspicious negotiations with the agents of the Government which he was elected to oppose. He signed pledges which involved the betrayal of his constituents, and a secret compact with Liberals. He was bought, or, at the best, (says he) took money, in order to entrap and expose his pursuers. He used for his private purposes the money which he declares was taken only as a means of establishing the guilt of Liberal politicians who plotted to subvert his party allegiance. He sought to destroy bank slips which carried the details of his banking transactions, and he left the country at a critical hour in the investigation of his charges by the Royal Commission.

ONTARIO AND THE G. T. P.

Mr. Andrew Pattullo, M.L.A. for North Oxford, Ont., was in the city yesterday. He expresses confidence in the ability of the Ross Government to carry the two bye-elections now being fought. Mr. Pattullo is a remarkably close observer of the political situation, and it is his strongly founded opinion that the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme will command itself to the better judgment of the people of the province.

"Why," he remarked, "the Federal Parliament has done, by the stroke of a pen, a work for the development of Northern Ontario which our Legislature could not accomplish in the next quarter of a century. We are doing what we can to develop that great territory, but the transcontinental railway will make possible and profitable lateral lines, feeders of the main line, that we could not expect to build for many years under prevailing conditions.

"In addition to the great development work Ontario will benefit by the increased business brought to the old Grand Trunk by the new line. I find public opinion strongly in favour of the project, and will be greatly surprised if the general election does not give the stamp of public opinion to this truly national project."—Montreal Herald.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. A GROSS ABUSE OF THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE.

Tons of Conservative Literature Being Sent Through the Mails.

Mr. Davis, M. P., has a question on the order paper, the answer to which should be such an exposure of the abuse being made of the franking privileges by the Conservative whip and his colleagues as to put a stop to the privilege altogether. Tons upon tons of Conservative literature printed by the Montreal Star are being shipped to Ottawa by the carload, and despatched over the country under the stamp of Mr. Geo. Taylor, M.P., free of cost, even the railway haul from Montreal being exempt because of the matter being addressed to a member of Parliament. An idea of the extent to which the Post Office Department is being defrauded by this manoeuvre can be formed from this calculation of the Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Star:

"For six weeks, six days a week, a hundred bags a day of this hot stuff have passed through the House of Commons post office. Now, each bag contains eight hundred envelopes, large size, the kind that bears ordinarily four cents postage. So that each bag sets His Majesty's revenue back $32. One hundred bags a day is $3,200; $3,200 a day is $19,200 a week; $19,200 a week for six weeks is $115,200. Multiply $115,200 by two to cover the free trip from Montreal to Mr. Taylor at Ottawa, and you have $330,400. Add the estimates for the remaining six days Parliament has to serve—you may be sure the good work will not cease until the last gun is fired from Nepean Point—and the total amount that the postal revenue goes back is $368,800. This year the Postmaster-General showed a net surplus of $292,700 in the management of his department. The franking privilege as exercised by the Conservative party for six weeks, comes to $76,098 more than the postal surplus for a year. The Opposition is said to be weak, but, in police circles, this would be known as the 'strong arm' game. It will take all Sir William Mulock's genius as an administrator to overcome this handicap for the fiscal year 1904."

In days gone by it was the custom of Conservative members to send their soiled linen home through the mails under frank. That was very unsavoury matter but it was no worse than the stuff with which the mails are now being loaded, and the quantity is increased a thousand fold. If this stuff can legally be carried through the mails free of cost the Government should not delay in passing a bill which will remove the abuse. Indeed the entire franking privilege should be abolished and the members made to pay their postage the same as other people. It is a well known fact that every member of the civil service, besides a considerable portion of the residents of Ottawa, have their correspondence transmitted free through the mails by means of this franking privilege, the average member being willing to attach his initials to any letter on the request of an acquaintance. Why should the people of Ottawa be thus exempt from postal charges that people elsewhere have to pay?

If the exposure now being made of the abuses practised by the Tory members resulted in the entire cancellation of the franking privilege they will not have proved an unmixed evil, though people with a high sense of honour will be unable to withhold their contempt for such practices, and will have little regard for the pretensions to honesty in other public matters set up by those who initiated them.—Stratford Beacon.

JOHN HAWKE'S ORIGINAL VIEW

Mr. John Hawkes, a well-known Conservative newspaper man of the Territories, expressed himself in favour of the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme. He was assailed by the Winnipeg Tribune, and replied with vivacity:

"Why a poor Territorial old timer," he wrote, "who has put his all into the Territories, and has been frozen out, burnt out, dried out and hailed out; who has town clerked, and railroaded, punched bulls and bored for water, surveyed and been surveyed, camped and campaigned, and in fact gone through the whole curriculum of pioneerdom, and at last met a glorious reward as a country editor—why, I say, The Tribune should hold him up as a kind of morally decomposed outcast because he wants to see his country get the transportation it needs, is a matter upon which I am seeking enlightment at the hands of The Tribune editor himself."

LAKEHURST.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The service in the Methodist church last Sunday evening was largely attended. Dr. Smith, of China, gave an address on his work there. He is very optimistic of the outlook in that country and reports a growing feeling of dissatisfaction among the Chinese with their own religious and idolatrous worship. This is the time when the church at home should be most zealous and active in the cause of missions. Dr. Smith was formerly in charge of the Wesley circuit, which includes Lakehurst, and many of his old friends were glad to see him again.

Mrs. W. J. Northey, who has been ill for the last few weeks is improving.

Last Thursday evening the Lakehurst Old Boys met at the residence of Mr Robert Shaw. They numbered about ten. The object of the meeting was to congratulate that gentleman on his recent marriage. A very pleasant and uproarious half-hour was spent after which the meeting adjourned.

The directors of the Agricultural Society met last Thursday evening in the Town Hall and settled all accounts for the year just closed.

The Mayor of Cedardale was disturbed in his slumbers last Friday evening by an unearthly noise a short distance east of his place. When he was sufficiently awakened he realized that the boys were welcoming to Lakehurst a new citizen in the person of Mr. Hugh Allen. The welcome was rather noisy but, no doubt, enjoyable for all concerned.

Mr. John Jones, of Buckhorn, was in Lakehurst over Sunday last.

The captain, the cook, and five passengers reached shore in safety, but it is feared at least eighteen people have been drowned.

Compulsory Voting Struck Out of Mr. Charlton's Bill.

ANENT BOUNDARY AWARD.

Mr. Sifton's Despatch Will Be Brought Down To-Day—Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Statement—Railway Policy For the Yukon—Anticipated That To-day the Business of the Order Paper Will Be Disposed of.

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—Yesterday in the House the bill to secure purity in elections occupied the forenoon and an hour in the afternoon. The compulsory voting clause was killed and the skeleton of the bill adopted.

On the vote of a subsidy to 84 miles of railway from Dawson City to Stewart River, Mr. Fielding explained that the subsidy was asked for by the Klondike Mines Railway Company, a substantial company.

"In view of the fact that Canada has not an entrance to the Yukon, and no port to the Yukon on the Pacific Ocean, are the Government taking into their serious consideration the advisability of building a railway to the Yukon through Canadian territory?" asked Col. Sam. Hughes. He added: "I wanted the Prime Minister to pledge himself that he would build a road in from Kitimet Arm."

"We shall have to do it now, since the award," Sir Wilfrid declared with emphasis.

In reply to Mr. Borden, Sir Wilfrid said that he had received a telegram from Mr. Sifton concerning the award which he would communicate to the House in the morning. It stated the award was not unanimous.

The Speaker read a message from the Senate announcing that the Chamber insists upon seven of their amendments to the railway bill, which were thrown out by the Commons, being kept in that measure. The following committee was then appointed to confer with the Senate on the subject and endeavor to come to terms: Sir William Mulock, Mr. Fitzpatrick, Mr. Fielding, Mr. Blair, Mr. R. L. Borden and Mr. Barker.

To a question by Mr. Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said the Government hoped to clear off the order paper to-day, Wednesday, but would commence with a motion to go into supply, as Mr. Bell of Pictou, had an amendment to offer.

TOOK A STRAW VOTE.

Interesting Experiment in a Restaurant.

An advertising agent, representing a prominent New York magazine, while on a recent western trip, was dining one evening in a Pittsburg restaurant.

While waiting for his order he glanced over his newspaper and noticed the advertisement of a well known dyspepsia preparation, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; as he himself was a regular user of the tablets, he began speculating as to how many of the other traveling men in the dining room were also friends of the popular remedy for indigestion.

He says: I counted twenty-three men at the tables and in the hotel office I took the trouble to interview them and was surprised to learn that nine of the twenty-three made a practice of taking one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal.

One of them told me he had suffered so much from stomach trouble that at one time he had been obliged to quit the road, but since using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets had been entirely free from indigestion, but he continued their use, especially while travelling, on account of irregularity in meals and because like all travelling men he was often obliged to eat what he could get and not always what he wanted.

Another, who looked the picture of health, said he never ate a meal without taking a Stuart Tablet afterward because he could eat what he pleased and when he pleased without fear of a sleepless night or any other trouble.

Still another used them because he was subject to gas on stomach, causing pressure on heart and lungs, shortness of breath and distress in chest, which he no longer experienced since using the tablets regularly.

Another claimed that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was the only safe remedy he had ever found for sour stomach and acidity. He had formerly used common soda to relieve the tablets were much better and safer to use.

After smoking, drinking or other excesses which weaken the digestive organs, nothing restores the stomach to a healthy, wholesome condition so effectually as Stuart's Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the natural digestives, pepsin, diastase, which every weak stomach lacks, as well as nux, hydrastin and yellow parilla, and can be safely relied on as a radical cure for every form of poor digestion. Sold by druggists everywhere.

PE-RU-NA NECESSARY TO THE HOME.

A Letter From Congressman White, of North Caroline.

HON. GEORGE H. WHITE.

Congressman George Henry White, of Tarboro, N.C., writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman in regard to the merits of the great catarrh cure, Peruna:

House of Representatives, Washington, Feb. 4, 1899.

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen:—"I am more than satisfied with Peruna, and find it to be an excellent remedy for the grip and catarrh. I have used it in my family and they all join me in recommending it as an excellent remedy."

Very respectfully,
George H. White.

Mrs. Nannie Wallace, Tulare, Cal., President of the Western Baptist Missionary Society, writes:

"I consider Peruna an indispensable article in my medicine chest. It is twenty medicines in one, and has so far cured every sickness that has been in my home for five years. I consider it of special value to weakly women, as it builds up the general health, drives out disease and keeps you in the best of health."—Mrs. Nannie Wallace.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advise gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

THE ALASKA AWARD

A Remarkable Scene.

Delay in the issuing of the award was due to the refusal of Mr. Aylesworth and Sir Louis Jette to sign. Lord Alverstone, shooting the award under Sir Louis Jette's nose, remarked: "Sign this, Sir Louis."

"What is it?" asked Jette.

"The award," said Alverstone.

"You know I will not sign it," was the reply of the Canadian Commissioner.

Mr. Aylesworth chipped in: "I thought we made it plain we would not sign."

Lord Alverstone replied: "Oh, I thought you would."

Senator Lodge added: "And so did I."

Mr. Sifton's Views.

Hon. Clifford Sifton, asked by the Canadian Associated Press to express his views respecting the award just made, said:

"The award is substantially in favor of the United States all along the line. We, it is true, have succeeded in establishing two of our main contentions; first, Portland Canal; second, the existence of a mountain boundary line. But, while finding in favor of our contentions upon these phases of the case, the tribunal has worked out the line in such a way as to deprive us of all practical benefit; for, while we get Wales and Pearse Islands, which the Americans have been in possession of for some years, they are deprived of their value to Canada by the fact that two other islands, which lie immediately outside and command the entrance to Observatory Inlet and Port Simpson, are given to the United States. I do not profess to understand the principle upon which these islands are given away. The mountain boundary line, while adopted as contended for by Canada, is drawn so far back that the United States gets practically all that she has seriously contended for. As to our position on the subject of the heads of inlets, it apparently received no consideration from the majority of the tribunal."

"Have you anything to say in regard to the conduct of the case by the representatives of the United States?"

"I have to say that both agent and counsel of the United States acted with perfect courtesy and in good faith throughout."

"Have you anything to say regarding the merits of the case?"

"No."

Jette and Aylesworth Withdrew.

In consequence of the attitude maintained by the Canadian Commissioners, Lord Chief Justice Alverstone decided yesterday morning not to hold the proposed public meeting of the Alaskan Boundary Commission, but to hand its decision to Messrs. Foster and Sifton, respective agents of the American and Canadian Governments. The Canadian Commissioners not only declined to sign the award, but said they would publicly withdraw from the Commission. They, as well as all the Canadians connected with the case, are very bitter. Telegrams from Premier Laurier and other prominent persons in Canada show that this sentiment is shared generally throughout the Dominion.

The Yankees Pleased.

London, Oct. 21.—Senators Lodge and Turner sail for New York to-day on the White Star Line steamer Cedric.

CHAMBERLAIN REPLIES.

Deals With the Criticisms of His Opponents at Newcastle.

London, Oct. 21.—Joseph Chamberlain addressed an enthusiastic meeting of 4,000 persons at Newcastle last night. It was his first public appearance since his recent illness. A novel feature was a battery of telephone receivers connecting the speaker's desk with the local newspaper offices.

The former Colonial Secretary devoted considerable attention to ridiculing Lord Rosebery, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Earl Spencer. He said that considering the fact that he had been termed an electioneering quack whose arguments were not worth answering, he was surprised at the amount of popular interest and newspaper comment his proposals had elicited. Mr. Chamberlain said he had not raised a party, but rather a national question. He had not pretended that his system could be instituted without costing anything at the start, but he did urge that taxation be transferred from points where it benefitted nobody to points where the Empire would profit. If the country had done well in the past, it was not because of free trade.

Replying to the charge that he had based his whole system on the boom year of 1872, Mr. Chamberlain said his opponents would find, if they took the five-year periods working back from 1875, that these would show botter still for his side of the case, and he went at length into statistics with the view of proving this contention. He said he did not claim that the Empire would break up immediately if his system was not adopted, but there was already a certain tendency towards cleavage, and commercial preference was the only method of binding the colonies to the Mother Country.

The colonies contained 11,000,000 whites, who had offered to make sacrifices, if necessary, in order to build up an Empire such as the world had not yet seen. The United Kingdom should not turn a deaf ear to such an offer and thereby lose a chance which, if now neglected, never would recur.

DR. ELLIS' REPORT.

Analyst Not Certain Whether Stains Were Human Blood or Not.

Brantford, Oct. 21.—Yesterday Joseph Kennedy, was committed to be tried at the Spring Assizes, 1904, by Magistrate Woodyate. Sergt. Wallace, in the witness box, told a story concerning a conversation he and Kennedy had on the night of Oct. 5, when Kennedy had told him he had been on the dyke when the Potter children had seen him, but had only stayed a few minutes. He also stated that he had bought the chicken for his landlady, hoping to square a little difficulty that had arisen between them, but afterwards he had lost the thing, but could not tell where it was, excepting that it was down in "The Willows" he had lost it, when he had fallen on it and crushed it, thus causing the blood on his trousers.

At this point Mr. Livingston held a short interview with Kennedy. Upon resuming the examination he asked Wallace if Kennedy had not said that the blood was caused by his cutting himself while shaving, and was on the envelope and not on the shirt. Wallace maintained that Kennedy had said that was the cause of the blood on the shirt. After still further cross-examination Dr. Ashton was called, but furnished nothing new.

At the afternoon session, Dr. Ellis, the Provincial Analyst, described his tests, which were of a microscopic nature. In two cases he was sure it was blood, but could not say definitely whether it was human blood or not.

Dr. Ellis also stated that he had made chemical examinations, and thought that the stains were recent, that is, anywhere from a day to a week.

The magistrate sent the prisoner up for trial.

RUGBY.

There will be a rugby game on Saturday at the Oval. This much has been definitely decided, and should the Victorias default, as it is stated there is a possibility of, an exhibition game will be played with the S. P. S. team. There is to be an excursion to Peterborough on Saturday from Toronto, about 350 students from the School of Practical Science will visit the town, and their rugby team will accompany them. The local team will be strengthened by the presence of Burnham on the half-back line. Ford will also be on the team, playing wing, and with these two additions it is felt that the team can pretty nearly hold its own with the majority. Lambe, who some years ago was a resident of Peterborough, is in town again, and was out at practice last night, making a favourable impression. The public may rest assured that there will be a game on Saturday.

MEMORIAL AMBULANCE ARRIVED YESTERDAY.

In Memory of Trooper Dan Spence of Peterborough, Killed on Active Service.

The Dan Spence Memorial Ambulance arrived in town yesterday morning from London, Ont., and is at present at Robinson's livery, where it may be viewed. The ambulance is a handsome four wheeled vehicle painted, outside, black and red, while the inside is varnished a light colour. The wheels, which are red with a black stripe, have rubber tires for the purpose of allowing the ambulance to run as smoothly as possible, while the two berths inside are so constructed as to avoid injured passengers being at all shaken. The ambulance can be used with either two or one horses and is fitted with two handsome nickle-plated head lamps, as well as a foot bell which can be operated by the driver. The inside is comfortably upholstered and there is a speaking tube by which the patient may, should it be necessary, communicate with the driver, while in the corner is a bracket for a lantern. There are four doors to the vehicle, one at each side and two at the back. On the glass of the side doors is inscribed in frosted letters:

In memoriam
DANIEL M. SPENCE who died for his country. South
Africa, 1901.

The amulance will be maintained at the expense of the town and tenders are out for this service. The Property Committee will meet on Monday night, when the tender will be awarded. The ambulance was made by A. B. Greer, carriage builder, London, Ont., and is certainly efficiently equipped for its intended use.

ENTERTAINED THE LACROSSE PLAYERS.

Athletic Lacrosse Team Guests at a Pleasant Oyster Supper.

Mr. E. W. Gardiner the Host—An Enjoyable Social Event—Toasts Proposed and Honoured.

One of the most pleasing events in the history of the Athletic Lacrosse Team, was an oyster supper tendered to them last night by Mr. E. W. Gardiner, in his parlours on George street. Mr. Gardiner has been one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the team during the playing season, and his appreciation of the excellent record of the team was shown by the very happy manner in which he entertained them last night. Considerable pains were taken to decorate the room, the predominating colours being pale blue and white, the club colours, and a very pretty effect was produced. Those who partook of the host's hospitality were Messrs. F. A. Clarke, Best, Cavanah, Hamilton, Morgan, T. H. Glover, Meir, Galley, Dillon, Robertson, Dunsford, Legg, Shepherd, Jolliffe R. M. Glover, Kenner, Oakley, Brown, Ford and Howden.

After the sumptuous repast of oysters and other dainties, had been done ample justice to, an impromptu toast list was proceeded with, some of those present exhibiting rather remarkable oratorical ability, especially in proposing the popular toast to the ladies. Mr. R. M. Glover acted as toastmaster, and the first honoured was that proposed by Mr. H. R. H. Kenner to the "Active Members of the Athletic Lacrosse Club." In proposing this toast Mr. Kenner took occasion to speak of the management of the team during the past season, and to correct a statement made by him at a previous banquet. In the light of investigation he now found that in the conduct of the team management, the spirit and letter of the constitution of the C. L.A., had been strictly adhered to, yet he felt that the rules of the C. L. A. were very bad. He complimented the boys on their conduct, both as players and gentlemen. This toast was responded to by Mr. F. A. Clarke and Mr. R. M. Glover, who expressed their pleasure at the appreciative references made by Mr. Kenner, the president of the club.

A male quartette composed of Messrs. Legg, Brown, Jolliffe and Shepherd rendered a selection.

Mr. Howden, the hon. president of the club, followed with a few timely remarks on the record of the team during the season just passed, saying that all lovers of true sport were pleased at the exhibition of the game given by the Athletics. He would welcome any action which would result in securing new grounds for allied athletics in the town, and hoped that such grounds would soon be procured, promising to do all in his power to bring it about.

The toast to "Allied Sports," was then proposed by Mr. Kenner and responded to by Mr. Ford, for the Football Section, Mr. Jolliffe, for Ping Pong, Mr. Shepherd for Tug-of-War, and Mr. Oakley for Bowling. The quartette again favoured the company with a second selection, which, like the preceding one, was heartily applauded.

Perhaps no toast was responded to with more sincerity than that to "Our Host," proposed by Mr. Kenner. If ever "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" was sung as though it were meant, it was when this toast was greeted with it last night. The toast was responded to in the usual way by Mr. Gardiner, who expressed his pleasure at being associated with the men composing the Athletic Lacrosse team.

The ever-popular toast to "The Ladies," was ably handled by Mr. E. Best, who made a characteristically humorous speech in proposing the toast, which was honoured in the usual way, Mr. Dillon responding, and also again demonstrating his fitness to respond to a toast of this nature. The toast to the Quartette was proposed by the chairman and responded to by a selection from the members composing it.

The gathering dispersed, expressing in an unmistakable manner, their appreciation of the kindness of their host.

MRS. DEANNARD'S FUNERAL

Took Place This Morning to St. Peter's Cemetery.

The funeral of the late Mrs. George Dennard took place this morning to St. Peter's cemetery and was attended by a large number. An unfortunate incident occurred while the cortege was passing the Canadian General Electric Co.'s works, a C. P. R. engine, No. 574, was shunting cars on a siding, crossing the street along which the procession was proceeding, and the Examiner is informed that the engineer, apparently indifferent to the fact that a funeral was passing, cars were shunted along the track crossing the street, necessitating the funeral being stopped three times. The C. P. R. and G. T. R. are usually very attentive on these occasions, and that there should have been such a departure from the respect usually shown, made the affair all the more noticeable. It is felt that the corporations who are using the highways only by the good-will of the public should find it possible to suspend active work long enough to allow a funeral cortege to pass.

Considerable discussion was indulged in upon the adoption of the first clause in the report of the Committee of the Whole Council, which referred to the long talked of question of the St. Peter's T.A.S. grand stand on the Murray street grounds. At the last meeting of the council Ald. O'Connell gave notice of motion to amend bylaw No. 612 to permit the building of a grand stand on the grounds mentioned above, to which the clause in the report referred.

MR. R. M. DENNISTOUN'S PLEA.

Before the vote upon the adoption of the report was taken, Mr. R. M. Dennistoun addressed the council, representing the residents who were opposed to the construction of the stand. He pressed for delay in the adoption of the clause and asked that it be allowed to stand until the council had made an investigation of the whole matter, which, he felt sure, it had not yet done. He thought the wishes of his clients should be consulted in the matter. No objection could be raised to the construction of the proposed building if the vested rights of those having property in the neighbourhood were not being interfered with, but, this, he contended, was being done. The grand stand, he said, was to be of an inflammable character and its presence would endanger the property of those living in the vicinity. But, he, contended, the bylaw which it was proposed to amend, was not simply a fire bylaw, it was also a building bylaw, and outside of the fact that the grand stand did not conform to the regulations referring to the safeguarding of it, and surrounding buildings, from danger by fire; there were other clauses of the same bylaw which would be violated. The spirit of the bylaw was to ensure the erection of buildings that would not be unsightly, and he thought it an injustice to those who had build their homes in that vicinity in good faith, believing that the buildings erected within the fire limits would have to be constructed in accordance with the regulations of the bylaw. The council should remember that they were legislating for all time, and he submitted that this proposal, if adopted, would signalize a retrograde step. The chief objection his clients were making was to the location of the stand referred to. They thought that it might just as easily have been erected on the East South or West sides of the grounds, from either of which locations no danger of fire to their properties would be experienced. The gentlemen he represented entertained the most kindly feelings for the T. A. S., and were gratified at the work the Society was doing, but he thought they should not show favours, particularly when by the granting of them, the property of citizens would be prejudically affected. He asked that the council allow the matter to stand over until the opinion of the citizens could be consulted. He had a petition which his clients had been circulating for signature among property holders, asking the Council to allow the by-law to remain unamended, but because of the short time since it was drawn up, there were but few signatures. He wished time in which to obtain others in order that the Council might have the opinions of the citizens.

REV. DR. O'BRIEN'S REMARKS.

On motion of Ald. O'Connell, Rev. O'Brien was allowed to address the council which he did briefly. Speaking of the request of Mr. Dennistoun to defer action in the matter, he said that surely the members of the Council had been given sufficient time in which to judge of the merits or demerits of the case. He reviewed the different steps taken by the T.A.S. in seeking the permission of the Council before proceeding with the building of this grand stand. They had built it with the distinct understanding that its erection was not being objected to by the Council. In July, on receipt of a peremptory letter from Mr. Dennistoun ordering them to cease work on it, the building was left partially completed, and it still stood in that condition because of the delay in dealing with the matter by the council. Speaking of the location of the building, he said it was the only reasonable site on the grounds, which was the reason for its being built there. He thought those who were opposing the Society in this showed very little public spirit, particularly in view of the fact that the work done by the Society was of such a beneficial character.

Ald. McWilliams moved the adoption of the report, which Ald. Finnie seconded. An amendment fathered by Ald. Best, and Ald. Shortly, was to the effect that the first clause be struck out, and that the matter be referred back to the Committee of the Whole. Ald. Shortly in urging this said he thought the Council should go over the ground themselves and see if some amicable settlement of the differences could not be effected.

DISCUSSION CONTINUED

Replying to Ald. Shortly, Ald. O'Connell said practically the same motion had once before been carried through the Council; the matter had already on two different occasions been referred to committees, and it had now been so long delayed that he felt sure the T.A.S. would rather have it settled now even if it were decided against them than to submit to further delays and trouble. As to the location of the grand stand, he submitted that the Society had received the endorsation, if not the approval of the Council in building the stand where it has been built. They had no idea of any objections being raised by the citizens. He thought there was little point in the objection on the score of the building being a source of danger by fire. It was an isolated one, and every possible precaution would be taken to render it fireproof. It would have metal sheathing and a fireproof roof. The only logical objection that can be raised, is that of its unsightliness. It undoubtedly was now, but this would be remedied in every possible way, and he submitted that there was no reason in law why the most unsightly building cannot be built if it conforms with the fire by-law.

Mr. Dennistoun contended that the building was in opposition to the spirit of the by-law which provides that no building shall be erected within its limits, unless it is at least two stories high, built of solid brick, and with 14-inch walls. This is to prevent depreciation of surrounding property. Messrs. Manning and Collins would have a perfect right to object to the erection of a cottage in their vicinity, then why not be allowed to object to this stand which does not comply with the terms of the by-law?

Ald. Best asked what hardship it would be for those building the stand to comply with the by-law, and replying to this question Ald. O'Connell said that the reason was obvious. It was that of expense. What sane man, he said, would expect that the T.A.S. would build for the purpose of a grand stand a building two stories high, with 14-inch brick walls. The purpose for which the stand would be used outweighed any objection to it. The T.A.S. were willing to do all that is possible under the circumstances to make the building as sightly as possible, and will plant shade trees on McDonnel street to further prevent danger by fire.

Before the motion on the adoption of the report was voted upon, Ald. McWilliams explained his position in the matter. He fully concurred in the opinions as expressed by Ald. O'Connell. He had gone over the matter carefully, and he was fully convinced that the T.A.S. had acted in a manner to which no objection could be taken, and were warranted in proceeding with the work as they had done. He did not consider that there was any grave danger by reason of fire to the surrounding property, in fact there is only one house within 100 feet of the structure. Three objections had been raised to the erection of the building, that of danger from fire, the unsightliness, and, he thought by far the most important one, the nuisance by reason of having a large number of young men and boys in such close proximity, making a noise, as will be done. He could find no fault with anyone objecting on this score. The same would apply to a school ground, and yet he thought that the many hun-

CUBIC CONTENTS OF A TON OF COAL.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear sir,—Desiring to construct a coal bin that will hold about three and one-half tons of coal, and my cellar space being limited, I would be glad if you would ask some of your readers to inform me how many cubic feet of space a ton of anthracite coal occupies, and whether the cubical contents of a ton of coal varies with the different varieties of coal, as pea coal, nut, stove or egg. As my cellar space is limited, I do not want to build too large a bin, yet I want it large enough to hold the quantity named.

PRESS TRIP UP THE BLANCHE

First-Hand Evidence of Value of New Ontario as a Farming Country—A Saw Mill Out-Doors—Most Northerly Settlement—A Study of the People—The Value of Humor—When Cheers Were Strongest—New Liskeard Fall Fair.

(Special Correspondence.)

Thursday and Friday, Sept. 24 and 25, New Liskeard was the centre of being for the press party. The first movement of its life blood was stirred into interested action on the first day by a trip on the Clyde and the Swan steamers, on the invitation of the Crown Lands officials headed by the energetic Mr. Thomas Southworth, up the Blanche (White) River.

BUCYRUS STEAM SHOVEL AT WORK.

Through the Devil's "Syne," as one of the channels in the delta is called, a short halt was made at North Temiskaming P. O., where was gathered a large representation of the Indians from the reservation and where aboriginal things in the stores tempted more than one of the party to invest in the wildly decorative—a moose head, a diminutive and highly decorated birch bark canoe, a paddle, etc.

Good Soil Follows Rivers.

Prof. Sharp, who left a professorship in Queen's University to settle here and grow up with the country, and Mr. L. W. Hawkesworth, who was formerly a lawyer, were with the excursionists, and once fairly in the Blanche River they held interested audiences as they disclosed the points of interest as they passed in panorama. "The good soil follows the rivers," said Mr. Hawkesworth, and the phrase stuck fast in my memory by reason of the subsequent emphatic words and actions of Mr. Milton Carr, M.P.P. Wherever that legislator was during the trip on the boat one would find him slapping his hands together, then rubbing them intensively, while the exclamation would shout out of him: "That's land; if we only had soil like that in Parry Sound." To the uninitiated the soil which generated such enthusiasm was only mud banks of a sort of slaty-colored nature, that looked from the boat as if it were deep, deep, deep. The timber that lined the banks was not large but the growth was profuse. In places it had been burnt over, and in these spots it was dismal-looking indeed. For the most part, however, the country along the river was well wooded with cedar and spruce and a mixture of whitewood.

First-Hand Evidence.

After steaming a couple of hours the party had an opportunity of gaining first-hand evidence of the alluvial nature of the soil. The boats stopped at a clearing to take on wood. The clay banks showed twenty feet deep, and there did not appear to be any stones in it. As to what it would grow of modern farm crops, five minutes walk from the steamer landing was the largest clearing in the district without stumps. It appeared to me to be about thirty acres in extent, and in one of the fields was the farmer, Mr. Bucknell, I think the name was, and his help drawing in the oat crop. The berry was fine, there was much of it to the head, and the catch was as thick as I have seen it when 75 bushels to the acre was threshed in Old Ontario. The farmer had a fine team and a modern wagon, and the shieling at the further end of the field seemed to be comfortable and to have been modeled with some perception of the artistic fitness of things. While in this field a party of farmers' boys who were out hunting happened along with their guns, and the magnificent banks of clouds that lined the southwestern sky made a picture of the union of the old and the new and the everfleeting though everlasting that will not easily be forgotten. The scenic beauties of this country crop up at every turn.

A Sawmill Outdoors.

A stop was made at the Bedford Graham Lumber Co.'s sawmill, situated at the corner of four townships, —Hilliard, Harley, Brethour and Casey, 26 miles from New Liskeard. It had been intended to proceed to Tomstown, 12 miles further on, but the drizzling rain and minor accidents to the boats rendered it impossible in the time at the disposal of the party. The party was given an excellent luncheon by the colonization officials on board the Clyde, and then the return home was begun.

Uncle Tom, as Thomas Thomas, is called, settled where Tomstown now is six years ago, and lived in the woods till alone for four years before any other settler came in. He went down the Blanche River in his canoe for "grub" when necessary to North Temiskaming, and now his faith in the situation is rewarded by seeing a postoffice, a store, blacksmith shop, bakery, hotel, and some 250 settlers in the vicinage.

Most Northerly Settlement.

Long Lake, Kimogamijing and Kushog lakes lie 12 miles west, and the land south and west of Tomstown is said to be excellent. The beginning of Broadwood, a new town with lots listed on paper at $25 each, is at the eastern end of Long Lake. Already there is a store there, and a sawmill will be ready to begin business next spring. It is said these three lakes are navigable northwesterly for 30 miles, and, as the land follows the rivers, just around this spot it is as good as any in the "clay belt."

Wagon roads already run through this section of the Temiskaming country, and the woods around the Blanche River are yet full of moose, deer and partridge. In the rivers pike and pickerel abound, and the woods as seen from the steamer are of spruce, cedar, tamarack, and a sprinkling of pine.

At the King Edward Cafe, New Liskeard, the same evening, a banquet was tendered the Hon. E. J. Davis and the Canadian Press Association under the auspices of the Township of Dymond Arts and Agricultural Association. The Minister and his party joined the pressmen at this point, and one had an opportunity to study the prevailing spirit of the settlers towards the Government. A view of the people minus their picturesquely rough working attire convinced one of the excellence of the men who had come to hew out homes for themselves and families in the backwoods. The claim made by the Minister that they are the best class of settlers in the world was fully borne out. Their dress and manners indicated considerable culture, and their sturdy forms betokened ability to cope with the natural difficulties of the situation. When they replied to toasts with which their names were coupled they were quite at ease, and their language was that of sturdy sons of the virile settlers of old Ontario mellowed by the schooling they had received in the earlier settled parts of the Province. Indeed, "they will be worthy of the two."

Value of Humor.

The attitude of the settlers towards the Government was shown in the banqueters' treatment of the Commissioner of Crown Lands. If I am able to judge correctly it left little to be desired from the Government's point of view. Mr. Davis is a hard-working Minister, and his speeches give evidence of a desire for the welfare of the actual settler. Their trials and difficulties are very near to him; indeed, he is too intense, if anything, in this regard. If he would lighten the situation with a little humor he would be an ideal administrator of the Crown domain in the opinion of nine-tenths of the people up there. As it is they feel too much as if the preacher had come for the pastoral visit to their house. Humor brightens lives that are hard, and like cheery laughter leaves a longer impression on the recipient than the most conscientious discharge of duty. The lack of a humorous view of humorous things was really the only fault I heard Mr. Davis possessed up there, and as it was not made by an opponent but by a friend I feel constrained to tell the story in the hope that it may do good.

When Cheers Were Strongest.

When Mr. Davis praised Mr. Southworth, Director of Colonization, the cheering was unrestrained. Everybody without exception up there believes him to be the real friend of the settler. From what I saw of him, in dealing with grievances—for they do have some up there—I can say he was always sympathetic in his manner and bearing, and I was told by others who had had experience that he always endeavored to carry out every promise that he made for their amelioration.

A Colonization Road.

Friday forenoon the pressmen were driven over one of the Government's new colonization roads for a distance of 12 miles to Milbeata, a village with three stores, a saw-mill, a Presbyterian church and probably a score of houses. As I was on a still hunt expedition of my own, a sort of private enquiry into the crops and people's opinions out of the beaten rut of officialdom that day, I am indebted to a newspaper friend for my information concerning this trip. He reports that the road is a very creditable one; indeed, that scarcely two hours were occupied with the journey.

New Liskeard Fall Fair.

The second annual fall fair of the Township of Dymond Arts and Agricultural Society was held the same day in the public school grounds of New Liskeard, the yard of which had been temporarily fenced in with chicken netting. The first man one met at the big gate was Mr. J. J. Grills, 2nd vice-president and treasurer, who gave a hearty greeting as became so cheerful and burly a man. Rev. F. E. Pitts, B.A., is the president, and all day he was busy making smooth the way for anyone who wanted help. Indeed, with Secretary Donald McCosh, he was as ubiquitous as the most pronounced reporter of the press group. There were between 300 and 400 entries, and the Government grant expected this year is $240. What surprised the visitors most were the people. They were just like ourselves, and there were many of them. They were well-dressed, intelligent of the highest material order, men, women and children who struck you with their exceeding wide-awakeness. Nothing escaped them. They saw everything, and in a criticism of the exhibits they gave evidence of very extensive knowledge of the criterion of good products of whatever description. There were a few first-class horses shown, the cattle were only middling, the sheep were better, and of the grain on exhibit the peas and oats were worthy of a red ribbon anywhere. The red and white winter wheat was above the average of Old Ontario, but I do not think from what I saw otherwise that this is the expectation in general. Spring wheat was of good quality but not as hard as Manitoba grain of the same class. The fruit exhibit was confined to crab apples, huckleberries, gooseberries, plums and grapes, and the vegetables and potatoes especially were abnormally large. There is, if the fair be an indication, ample opportunity in the Temiskaming District of New Ontario for a hard-working man to make a good living.

A Wonderful Panorama.

Everybody went to bed early that night. They had to be up at 4 a.m. to take the Meteor on the homeward journey again. At roll call all were present, and the sail down Lake Temiskaming to Temiskaming on the Quebec side was begun. There was a glorious sunrise. The colors of the foliage that lined the banks seemed to have taken on deeper hues. New scenes seemed to be presented with every mile traveled. The leaves had begun their glorious autumn death. Now the flaming red of the soft maple was made prominent against the yellow of the white poplar and the brown of the balm of gilead. Anon a brown elm reared its lofty head from amidst its immediate companions of the dark green spruces, and was thrown into relief against a great dark red granite rock with a serried row of the yellow-leaved white poplar some distance back. A clump of the red dogwood, the yellow birch and the brown willows would stand in their transcendent beauty at the foot of a nest of tall dark evergreen pines—the monarchs of these particular forests. Feelings in the spectators varied as the scene varied, and the gamut of the sense of sight was run from end to end to come to rest in some passing clump of the light evergreen balsam. None of us will ever forget these 500 feet high banks of glorious autumn tints. 'Twas a fitting ending of a strenuous trip. Does it foreshadow the glory of the civilization that will yet dominate the great clay belt of New Ontario?

BLOOD CIRCULATION.

Breathing and Its Relation to the Secret of Good Health.

The secret of health, as every intelligent physician knows, is free and full circulation of the blood, and this circulation is dependent absolutely on thorough oxygenation. In many cases where erroneous habits of living have been so long continued that congestion has become chronic in one shape or another—obesity, gout, rheumatism, constipation or tuberculosis having camped in the system and crippled it—the patient is not apt to be in a condition to readily assimilate a sufficient quantity of oxygen direct from the atmosphere. The breathing apparatus must first be properly developed, so that the patient shall be able to gradually increase the supply of air to the system, until at last he recovers the normal power of deep breathing.

With the building up of the lungs through proper breathing there is a metabolism of all the tissues and organs, so that, for most men, breathing exercises are more important than any mere muscular exercise. Not only the lungs, but all the internal organs are brought into play by correct breathing. It develops the heart, stomach, liver and kidneys directly and indirectly and nourishes all these organs as they should be nourished by more blood and better blood in constant and regular circulation. Breathing, therefore, is a sovereign remedy for our national disease of nervous depletion. It might well replace the countless tonics, stimulants and anodynes now so commonly resorted to, where results are nothing less than tragic in thousands of cases. —Maurice Manning, M. D., in Vim.

GOOD NEWS FOR HIS OLD HOME.

Vernon Bromley Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

For Years he was Crippled by Rheumatism and Sciatica—Dodd's Kidney Pills Made him a New Man.

Morristown, N. Y., October 19th. (Special.) — Vernon Bromley, now of this place, but formerly of Trenton, Ont., relates an experience that will prove of great interest to his old friends in Canada.

"I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism and Sciatica for years," Mr. Bromley states. "The citizens of Trenton will remember what a cripple I was. I could neither work nor lie down, the pain was so great.

"Reading of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills finally led me to try them, and from the second box I began to feel relief. I continued to use them until I had taken twelve boxes, when I was completely cured.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have made a new man of me."

Rheumatism and kindred diseases are caused by uric acid in the blood. If the kidneys are sound they will take all the uric acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make sound kidneys.

Mohammedans and Pigs.

A recent traveler in Somaliland gives the following curious incident showing the Mohammedan hatred for pigs: "We shot two wart hogs, one a particularly big boar. Alan wished to keep the tusks, but of course none of the Somalis would touch the unclean animal. At last a bribe of 2 rupees induced the Midgan woman to chop the tusks out with a hatchet. Even then she would not touch them and with the help of two sticks, which she used like a pair of tongs, put them on a camel. Then there was a long dispute about the hatchet. No one would touch it. It had been defiled. Of course this was pure affectation and playing to the gallery on the ayah's part. At home with her native tribe she would have gorged all the pig she could get. But it flattered the Somalis, and we marched off, the ayah holding the hatchet at arm's length as if it were going to bite her."

Love of the Clover.

Any one who carries about a four leaved clover will be lucky and will have the power of discovering ghosts or evil spirits. With it under the pillow the lover may insure dreams of the beloved one. A fragment in the shoe of a traveler insures a safe journey. Of the five leaved clover it is declared that if it be worn on the left side of a maiden's dress or fastened behind the hall door the Christian name of the first man who enters will be the same as that of the future husband. The power of the four leaved shamrock for good is familiar to all, from Lover's once popular and pretty song, the speaker in which pictures what she would do should she find the magic plant:

I would play the enchanter's part and scatter bliss around,
And not a tear or aching heart should in the world be found.

—London Globe.

Cloves.

"Cloves," said a physician, "make an excellent and handy remedy for nausea, for the headache due to train rides and for slight attacks of seasickness. I went abroad last year, and on the boat the first day out I began to feel the approaches of seasickness. I took a clove every hour all the rest of the day, and by midnight the attack had left me, and it did not return again. My wife is much given to indigestion, particularly when she eats pastry, but experience has taught her that she may now eat pastry with impunity provided that she swallows a clove now and then for several hours after the meal."

They Hadn't Run, But—

A young couple rushed into the city hall the other day and breathlessly announced that they wished to get married.

The alderman eyed the nervous bridegroom elect and said severely, "I'm afraid this is a runaway match."

"Well, your honor, I can't exactly say we run, but we walked pretty smart," was the prompt reply.

INITIAL CHARACTERISTICS OF THE PEOPLE NOW WORLD FOREMOST.

Discovered by Julius Cæsar, Britain Remained a Roman Province for Three Centuries, and in the Aftertime Its People Recall the Temper and the Empire of Rome—Their Fatherland.

Britain was first made known to the civilized world by the famous Roman general, Julius Cæsar, in the year 55 before the birth of Christ. Cæsar had conquered Gaul, a country which included our present France and Belgium, and brought it under the rule of Rome; but in the course of his conquest he learned that to the west of Gaul lay an island named Britain, whose peoples were mainly of the same race with the Gauls and gave them help in their struggles against the Roman armies. He resolved, therefore, to invade Britain, and in two successive descents he landed on its shores, defeated the Britons, and penetrated at last beyond the Thames. No event in history is more memorable than this landing of Cæsar. In it the greatest man of the Roman race made known to the world a land whose people in the after-time were to recall, both in their temper and in the breath of their rule, the temper and Empire of Rome. Cæsar, however, was recalled from Britain by risings in Gaul; and for a hundred years more the island remained unconquered. It was not till the time of the Emperor Claudius that its conquest was again undertaken, and a war which only ended under the Emperor Domitian at last brought all the southern part of the island under the rule of Rome. Britain remained a province of the Roman Empire for more than three hundred years. During this time its tribes were reduced to order, the land was civilized, towns were built, roads made from one end of the island to the other, mines were opened, and London grew into one of the great ports of the world. But much oppression was mingled with this work of progress, and throughout these centuries the province was wasted from time to time by inroads of the unconquered Britons of the North, whose attacks grew more formidable as Rome grew weaker in her struggle against the barbarians who beset her on every border. At last the Empire was forced to withdraw its troops from Britain, and to leave the province to defend itself against its foes. To aid in doing this, the Britons called in bands of soldiers from Northern Germany, who gradually grew into a host of invaders, and became in turn a danger to the island. These were the first Englishmen who set foot in Britain. The characteristics of these remarkable men are thus described by John Richard Green in his famous "Short History of the English people."

For the Fatherland of the English race we must look far away from England itself. In the fifth century after the birth of Christ the one country which we know to have borne the name of Angelin or England lay within the district which is now called Sleswick, a district in the heart of the peninsula that parts the Baltic from the northern seas. Its pleasant pastures, its black-timbered homesteads, its prim little townships looking down on inlets of purple water, were then but a wild waste of heather and sand, girt along the coast with a sunless woodland, broken here and there by meadows that crept down to the marshes and the sea. The dwellers in this district, however, seem to have been merely an outlying fragment of what was called the Engle or English folk, the bulk of whom lay probably in what is now Lower Hanover and Oldenburg. On one side of them the Saxons of Westphalia held the land from the Weser to the Rhine; on the other the Eastphalian Saxons stretched away to the Elbe. North again of the fragment of the English folk in Sleswick lay another kindred tribe, the Jutes, whose name is still preserved in their district of Jutland. Engle, Saxon, and Jute all belonged to the same Low-German branch of the Teutonic family, and at the moment when history discovers them they were being drawn together by the ties of a common blood, common speech, common social and political institutions. There is little ground, indeed, for believing that the three tribes looked on themselves as "one people, or that we can as yet apply to them, save by anticipation, the common name of Englishmen. But each of them was destined to share in the conquest of the land in which we live; and it is from the union of all of them when its conquest was complete that the English people has sprung.

The energy of these peoples found vent in a restlessness which drove them to take part in the general attack of the German race on the Empire of Rome. For busy tillers and busy fishers as Englishmen were, they were at heart fighters, and their world was world of war. Tribe warred with tribe, and village with village; even within the township itself feuds parted household from household, and passions of hatred and vengeance were handed on from father to son. Their mood was, above all, a mood of fighting men, venturesome, self-reliant, proud, with a dash of hardness and cruelty in it, but ennobled by the virtues which spring from war, by personal courage and loyalty to plighted word, by a high and stern sense of manhood and the worth of man. A grim joy in hard fighting was already characteristic of the race. War was the Englishman's "shield-play" and "sword-game"; the gleeman's verse, took fresh fire as he sang of the rush of the host and the crash of its shield-line. Their arms and weapons, helmet and mailshirt, tall spear and pavelin, sword and seax, the short broad dagger that hung at each warrior's girdle, gathered to them much of the legend and the art which gave color and poetry to the life of Englishmen. Each sword had its name like a living thing. And next to their love of war same their love of the sea. Everywhere throughout Beowulf's song, as everywhere throughout the life that it pictures, we catch the salt whiff of the sea. The Englishman was as proud of his sea-craft as of his war-craft; sword in teeth, he plunged into the sea to meet walrus and sea-lion; he told of his whale-chase amidst the icy waters of the North. Hardly less than his love for the sea was the love he bore to the ship that traversed it. In the fond playfulness of English verse the ship was "the wave-floater," the "foam-necked," "like a bird" as it skimmed the wave-crest, "like a swan," as its curved prow breasted the "swan-road" of the sea.

Their passion for the sea marked out for them their part in the general movement of the German nations. While Goth and Lombard were slowly advancing over mountain and plain the boats of the Englishmen pushed faster over the sea. Bands of English rovers, outdriven by stress of fight, had long found a home there, and lived as they could by sack of vessel or coast. Chance has preserved for us in Sleswick peat bog one of the war keels of these early pirates. The boat is flat-bottomed, seventy feet long, and eight or nine feet wide, its sides of oak boards fastened with bark ropes and iron bolts. Fifty oars drove it over the waves with a freight of warriors whose arms, axes, swords, lances and knives were found heaped together in its hold. Like the galleys of the Middle Ages, such boats could only creep cautiously along from harbor to harbor in rough weather, but in smooth water their swiftness fitted them admirably for the piracy by which the men of these tribes were already making themselves dreaded. Its flat bottom enabled them to beach the vessel on any fitting coast, and step on shore at once transformed the boatmen into a war band. From the first the daring English race broke out in the secrecy and suddenness of the pirates' swoop, in the fierceness of their onset, in the careless glee with which they seized either sword or oar. "Foes are they," sang a Roman poet of the time, "fierce beyond their foes, and cunning as they are fierce; the sea is their school of war and the storm their friend; they are sea-wolves that prey on the pillage of the world."

Neuralgia

NOT JUST AS GOOD

Did you ever inquire at a store for certain articles and get for a reply "We have something just as good"? Did it ever occur to you that "Something just as good" is something the dealer has been able to buy much cheaper than the articles you inquire for? This is true in drugs, fabrics, groceries, hardware, and in fact every line, including silver-plated ware. If you inquire for 1847 Rogers Bros.' Knives, Forks or Spoons, don't accept any bogus Rogers' stamp because your dealer tells you it's just as good.

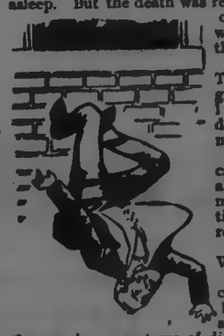
ACCIDENTAL?

The jury returned a verdict of accidental death on the man who fell from the window ledge on which he had fallen asleep. But the death was really due to carelessness which made the accident possible. There are a great many lives suddenly terminated as a result of carelessness, although the medical certificate may read "heart failure." When a man takes chances with his stomach and neglects the warning symptoms of disease, he is carelessly inviting calamity.



Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, which makes strength. It stimulates the liver, cures biliousness, and removes bilious impurities from the blood.

"I had been troubled with a pain in lower part of my stomach for three years, so severe I thought it would kill me in time," writes Mr. Aaron Van Dam, of (Kensington) 3549 116th St., Chicago, Ill. "I could hardly work; it felt like a big weight hanging on me and got so bad that I had to take medicine. I used Stomach Bitters for a time, but it did no good so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce for advice, which he gave me immediately. I followed his directions, used two bottles of his medicine and was cured. I had a torpid liver which was troubling me instead of cramps (as I thought), so Dr. Pierce told me. I have pleasure in living now; have gained in weight 15 pounds since then."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They do not beget the pill habit.

A COUGH CONUNDRUM

When is a cough more than a cough?

When it's a settled cold. When it hangs on in spite of all you can do. Cough mixtures won't cure it because they are merely for a cough and this is something more.

Scott's Emulsion cures the cough because it cures the something more. It heals and repairs the inflamed tissues where the cold has taken root and prevents its coming back.

"Bobs" as a Private.

When Lord Roberts was in India, a complaint once reached him of the quality of the beer served out from a particular regimental canteen, and he resolved to look personally into the matter. He singled out a soldier of small stature, and asked him for his uniform. This astonishing order naturally paralyzed the small "Tommy," but he obediently made a parcel of his uniform and left it in the chief's room. Later in the day the private soldier's uniform issued from the quarters with the Commander-in-Chief himself inside, his face a little disguised; and as a humble item in his army, the chief entered the canteen, taking a seat on a form. "How's the beer now?" he asked. "Beer!" remarked a disgusted comrade. "Call this beer? Why, it's mor'n arf water!" The Chief called for a pot, and he found it was more than half water. The next day the same neat, wiry figure crossed the square, this time in the full uniform of his position, and another order for a mug of ale was given to the sergeant who was making money out of "Tommy." "Yes, sir—certainly, sir!" said the sergeant, and he drew a pint of very good beer from his own special tap. "Excellent!" said the Chief, fixing his keen eye on the sergeant. "There's no fault to be found with this. But this is not the same beer you sold me yesterday, when, as a soldier, I sat on that seat and paid my money!" The Chief pushed his enquiry home, and the canteen-keeper was promptly court-martialled.

Lighting a Candle by Smoke.

When the candle has burned low, so as to leave a tolerably large wick, blow it out. A dense smoke will arise. If another candle be applied to the farthest end of the smoke a very strange thing will happen. The flame of the lighted candle will be carried to the one just blown out, looking sometimes like a flash of lightning proceeding at a slow rate. The experiment may be performed by blowing out the candle as often as it is lighted.

Tax Extraordinary.

A tax on marriage is still imposed by the proprietor of a leading Bombay hotel. In a revised tariff of prices the daily charge for a single lady or gentleman is set down as 5 rupees, but if the lady or gentleman be married the charge will be 7 rupees each. No explanation of this singular regulation is given.

Audiences.

"I desire an audience with the manager," remarked the dignified, smooth faced person as he approached the box office of the theater.

"Step in," replied the man in the box office. "I think he's looking for a few audiences himself."

ORIGIN OF THE TOMATO.

There Is No Record of a Time When It Grew Wild.

The tomato is a native of South America and more particularly of Peru and the Andean region. The Indian name for it is "tumatl" and the Spanish name "tomate." When the Spaniards arrived in the sixteenth century they considered nothing of much importance except silver. But in 1523 they took some tomatoes home with them as a matter of curiosity, little dreaming that there would some day be more silver in them than there was in all the Peruvian mines. There is a general impression that until sixty or seventy years ago the tomato plant was universally regarded as a poisonous weed and that its handsome fruit was called the "love apple," and never cultivated except as something pleasant to look upon. But this story is inconsistent with itself. The tomato was called the "love apple" for the reason that it was believed to be an aphrodisiac, or excitant of amorous feelings. But it could not even be suspected of such a property unless it had been habitually eaten. The truth is that there is no record of a time when in South America the tomato was not an article of food. There is indeed no record of a time when it grew wild. When the Spaniards reached Peru they found nothing but the cultivated tomato, which was cultivated for food. They took a fancy to it and took it to Spain, from which place it found its way in 1596 to England.

Sardines.

Genuine sardines are the young of the pilchard. Their name comes from the fact that they are most numerous off the coast of Sardinia. They swim in the spring in shoals containing millions—fish shaped shoals ten miles long and a half mile wide. The sardines are netted and taken at once to the shore. There they are washed, scraped and sprinkled with salt. The salt is soon removed, the heads and gills cut off and there is another washing. Then, on beds of green brush, the fish are dried in the sun. Next they are boiled in olive oil till cooked thoroughly.

The packers—women always—take them now and pack them in the tin boxes we all know, filling up each box with boiling oil, fitting on the lid and making the box air tight by soldering the joints together with a jet of hot steam. Sardines are more or less perfect according as they are prepared more or less immediately after their capture and according as the oil they are packed in is more or less pure.

For Peace Only.

It is well known that the Friends have always been devoted to the principles of peace. As they had a controlling influence in the public affairs of Nantucket, there was no military organization on that island for several generations. How the matter was managed is told by the author of "September Days on Nantucket."

Whenever military companies came to the island for a holiday young women thronged the windows and waved handkerchiefs, but there was no rise of military ambition in the town. Once a coterie of young men formed a training company and sent to Boston for equipments, but their elders compelled them to make the first article of their constitution read: "This company shall be disbanded immediately in case of war."

An Unsatisfied Ambition.

It is said by an old historian that when the Spanish armada sailed along the south coast of England in Queen Elizabeth's reign the Duke of Medina-Sidonia, admiral of the armada, was so affected at the sight of Mount Edgcumbe, a beautiful mansion, viewed from the sea, that "he resolved it for his own possession in the partage of the kingdom, which the Spaniards preconquered in their hopes and expectation." But, as the author quaintly observes, "he had catched a great cold, and he had no other clothes to wear than those which were to be made of the skin of a bear not yet killed."

NIAGARA'S RELICS.

Museum Is the Aim of the Old Town's Historical Society—A Valuable Canadian Collection.

There are few places in Canada as full of the traditions of the past as Niagara, and the Niagara Historical Society is doing an important work in collecting and preserving those of a material character. It has chosen the 17th of September as its anniversary, because on that day in the year 1792 the first Parliament of Upper Canada met at Niagara-on-the-Lake. The settlement was at first called West Niagara, then Butlersburg, from the leader of the Rangers, whose name has been preserved in Butlers Barracks. Col. Simcoe, who was made the first Governor, changed the name again to Newark, and that became the first capital of Upper Canada. In the short space of seven years the society has made one of the best collections of historical documents and articles in Ontario; it has placed eight stone posts to mark historic spots, and has printed ten pamphlets, all bearing on the early and vital history of Canada. The credit for the work that has been done to preserve from oblivion these relics of the past is chiefly due to the President, Miss Janet Carnochan.

There is much doubt as to where the first sitting of Parliament was held, but the weight of testimony is in favor of the old wooden building still standing and known as Navy Hall. The Parliament first met on Sept. 17, 1792, and The Upper Canada Gazette published there says that on June 4, 1793, Governor Simcoe held a levee at Navy Hall And so the probability is that Navy Hall was the meeting place. It is certain that many of the official documents of the early part of the year were dated from the hall. The building is still standing, though in a sadly dilapidated condition. The worst wrench was given by a farmer who used the hall as a stable. Through the efforts of the society the attention of the Government was called to this, and the farmer was ordered to vacate, but in doing so he tore down a portion of one wall in order to carry out his cattle stalls. If this is really the first seat of constitutional Government in Upper Canada, more than the antiquarian will approve of its rescue from destruction.

The stone markers which have been placed are: (1) The site of the first burial of Sir Isaac Brock, Fort George, 1812-1824; (2) site of military council and Indian council house; (3) site of Gleaner printing office, 1817, and of Masonic Hall, 1792; (4) site of Government House, burned in 1812; (5) spot of burial of bodies of three soldiers who fell in battle, May 27, 1813; (6) residence of Count de Puisaye, built in 1798; (7) site of Navy Hall and first Parliament House; (8) Court House of Counties of Lincoln, Welland and Haldimand, 1847.

Among the pamphlets which the society has issued are: (1) Taking of Fort George by Col. Cruikshank, edition exhausted; (2) slave rescue, Fort Niagara, centennial poem; (3) blockade of Fort George, Col. Cruikshank; (4) Memorial to U.E. Loyalists, battle of Queenston Heights; (5) historic houses; (6) Niagara library, 1800-1820, early schools, by Janet Carnochan; (7) historic buildings; (8) family history, by Wm. Kirby, F.R.S.C.

The collection of the society, numbering over 1,600 articles, is now in a small room on the second floor of the old Court House. It includes books and papers printed in Niagara or relating thereto, starting with The Upper Canada Gazette of July 8, 1794, a large number of portraits, pictures, maps and drawings which have proved of great assistance in settling disputed points of historical interest, military clothing, weapons, household utensils, Indian and other relics. One result of the energetic president's researches has been to show that St. Mark's Church was built in 1804, and not in 1792, as stated on the brass tablet set in the wall.

Notwithstanding the inconvenience of location, the collection has been inspected every year by thousands, and forms a valuable addition to the historic memories of the place. The space, however, is altogether too limited to permit of proper exhibition and arrangement, and there is always the danger of fire.

Recently the following were appointed a committee to devise steps for obtaining a suitable building for the collection from private sources, the municipal authorities and the Government: Miss Carnochan, President; C. C. James, David Boyle, John Ross Robertson, Mrs. H. Thompson, Dr. Withrow, Mayor Aikens, R. E. Denison, W. Kirby, H. Pafford, Alfred Ball, A. Servos, A. W. Wright.

Minnows in Milk.

A well-known Grand Rapids milkman was recently made the victim of a cruel joke by a fisherman friend who happened to be passing the milkman's wagon just as that worthy man was dodging around the corner of a house with a bottle of lacteal fluid. The fisherman had a pint or so of minnows in an oyster can. Quickly he dumped the little fish into the milk tank and fled. Patrons that morning were dazed to find the finny little fellows in the seasoning of their coffee provided by their faithful purveyor, and nearly mobbed him before the truth came out.

QUOTATIONS ON THE WALL STREET MARKET.

The Wall Street Market Continues to Advance.

The Fluctuations of the Leading Stocks —Market Letters.

The rally of the past few days on the Wall street market was continued this morning and prices worked fractionally higher all along the line. Notwithstanding the fact that London came somewhat below parity, the Wall street crowd showed no disposition to follow, and Atchison, Sugar, Copper, C. P. R. and other leading issues continued their upward tendency. By 1.30 Atchison had reached 67, C.P.R. 130 3-8 and Sugar, 116 1-4, whilst Copper touched 39 1-4. There were two quotations on Twin City. It opened at 84 1-2 but sold off to 84. Sales to noon were 366,700.

Towards the close the market told off slightly, but the close was practically higher than the opening.

Went Into Convulsions Again.

Hamilton, Oct. 21.—When Dr. J. F. Jolley was arraigned on the charge of child desertion at the Police Court yesterday, he went into convulsions similar to those he had last Wednesday morning, when it was supposed that he took strychnine. His lawyer, S. D. Biggar, waived examination, and he was committed for trial. Bail was fixed at $2,000, and he was taken to his home in Port, Dover. The charge against the mother of the child, Christie Van Noon, will not be pressed. She was released, and the babe was handed over to her.

dreds who would be benefitted by having a recreation grounds in the centre of the town should be considered. He considered the site the least objectionable on the whole grounds, and thought that it would be to the public interest to allow it to remain.

Ald. Best's amendment to the adoption of the report was voted on and lost on the following division:—

Yea—Best, Shortly.

Nay—Edgcumbe, Morrison, O'Connell, Finnie, McWilliams and Batten.

The adoption of the report was carried, those voting nay to the amendment, voting yea on motion to adopt.

BY-LAWS.

Ald. Best moved the first reading of a by-law to authorise the execution of a contract to construct a sewer on parts of Weller, Aylmer, Bethune and Edinburgh streets, and upon receiving the required number of readings it was passed.

Ald. McConnell then moved the first reading of the by-law to amend the by-law No. 612 to allow the construction of the grand stand on the present site. The amended portion reads as follows:—

"Clause B. of Section two of by-law 612 is hereby amended by adding thereto the words following: 'And the owners, tenants, or occupants of the northerly fifty feet of Lots Nos. four and five south of McDonnel street, and west of George street may erect thereon a stand of wood, open at the front and ends, with seats thereon, for the purpose of accommodating spectators; providing the same shall have the roof, outer works and outer doors thereof covered, and the chimney—if any—constructed in the manner and with the material set forth in sub-section A of said section two.'"

Subsequent to the second reading of the by-law Ald. Best moved that the second reading be given six months, hence. This was, by Ald. Morrison, who was in the chair, declared out of order, as the motion for the second reading had already been passed.

Mr. Donnistoun again asked to be allowed a word. He asked that a clause be inserted authorizing a repealing of the by-law at any time if it were found desirable to do so. If the by-law passed as it now stood it could not be revised under any circumstances on account of the vested rights of the T.A.S., and he thought in view of the fact that a new Drill Hall is about to be erected, he understood, on the North-West corner of the park, provision should be made to protect it from fire.

Ald. O'Connell contended that this was a much more serious objection than that taken by Mr. Donnistoun in the first place, because it would be most unfair if, after the T.A.S. had gone to considerable expense in the erection of the stand, the bylaw could, by an adverse council, be repealed, working great injury to the owners of the grand stand. He objected strenuously to any such clause being inserted.

Rev. Dr. O'Brien again spoke to the effect that he regretted exceedingly that such ignoble insinuations were being made as to the honour of his people. Should he ever undertake to build again he would guarantee to keep not only within the spirit, but also within the letter of the law.

The bylaw was given its third reading and passed, Ald. Best voting nay.

Mayor Roger took the opportunity of saying that he wished to deny the report that the building had been erected because he personally gave his permission. This was untrue, he said. The whole matter was one which was very difficult to deal with and the council had used its best judgment. The members of the council had sought to bring the parties together, and effect a settlement, amicable to each, but this had not been possible, and the objectors to the stand had made it impossible for the council to take any other action than that which they had taken.

Ald. Shortly said he wished to be understood. He was not opposed to the grand stand, but he thought it should have been built in a different position.

A resolution presented by Ald. Best, and seconded by Ald. Batten, to the effect that a drain be constructed to drain the lane at the rear of the stores in the block bounded by George, Hunter, Water and Brock streets, at the expense of the owners of the property affected, was carried.

It was moved by Ald. Morrison, seconded by Ald. Shortly, that the matter of locating the additional electric lights provided for by the electric light contract, be referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee to make a recommendation to the council thereto, so as to permit of provision being made before winter sets in.

The council then adjourned.

INQUEST INTO DEATH OF A C. P. R. BRAKEMAN

Was Held at Havelock by Coroner Dr. McWilliams.

An Accidental Death on October 10th—The Jury and Evidence Taken.

"The deceased Henry Weese came to his death by injuries received from a car passing over his body and there was insufficient protection provided as regards his safety while at work. We disagree on the point as to whether or not the deceased came to his death from no fault of his own, part contending that the evidence went to show that it was customary to depart from the rules in some instances, of which this was one, and do the work without sufficient protection, the rest holding that, as an employee, he should have looked for himself to see that the protection was adequate."

Such was the verdict returned by the jury empannelled to enquire into the death of Harry Weese, who was killed in the C. P. R. yards at Havelock on October 10th, about nine o'clock in the morning. The inquest over which Coroner Dr. H. V. McWilliams of Keene presided, was held in the town hall at Havelock, yesterday afternoon at one o'clock.

The jury was composed of the following gentlemen; Foreman, Mr. S. S. Joyce, and Messrs. G. Siles, H. Andrews, F. McMaster, A. O. Denike, J. Campaney, J. Watson, E. Fennel, W. Hart, J. Rose, R. Phillips, and H. Wing.

County Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, appeared for the Crown, Mr. G. J. Sherry, Norwood, for the relatives of the deceased, and Mr. S. Donnistoun of Toronto, in the interests of the railway company concerned.

Considerable evidence was taken, but as noted and discussed by the jury ,only one contradiction was recorded, Falkner stating that the last he saw of Hart before the accident was when he crossed from the north side of the car being repaired to the south side, while Hart swore that he was at the south side of the car all the time when watching for the yard engine. The evidence was as follows:

THE FIRST WITNESS.

The first witness was Wellington Hart who, on being sworn, said he was a car repairer in the employ of the C.P.R. Company at Havelock, and that he was working with the deceased Henry Weese on October 10th, the day of his death. He and Weese were repairing a car on No. 1 siding, which is the track north of the tank siding. To make this repair he had to get right under the car while Weese stood at its west end. The two men were putting in two bolts. One they got in all right but the second, being too long got stuck and they could not get it out again. At this juncture Mr. Falkner came along and said to Hart, "Let me try it. You come out and watch for the engine." At that time Weese had a bar with which he was holding down the draw bar. Hart watched the engine shunting on another siding. It later went down east and after shoved a string of cars into No. 1 siding on which Falkner and Weese were working. He did not see the engine approaching as the line bends there. The next thing witness saw was Weese knocked over and the wheels passing over his body. Mr. Falkner pulled him out and found him breathing. Witness said that two wheels of the first car passed over Weese's body while two wheels of the next track went over his legs.

On being cross-examined witness said that the yard engine which was pushing the cars which struck the train causing the accident was being driven by Mr. Child. He only saw the engine once after Falkner told him to watch for it. However, he knew its location by its smoke.

CAR INSPECTOR'S TESTIMONY

Henry Falkner was the second witness called. On being sworn he stated that the accident occurred about 10 o'clock on the forenoon of October 10th. He ordered Hart to get a man to help him and to repair the car. Finding the men in difficulty he told Hart to get out from under the car and watch for the engine and that he, himself, would finish the job. As the plate was being held up too high to allow the bolt to pass in witness told Weese to let go the bar with which he was holding up the draw bar. This Weese did. The next thing which happened was the train on which he and Weese were working was struck by a second train knocking the last named workman over, the leading wheel of the first car passing over his body. Falkner extricated himself and caught hold of Weese, but could not get him clear of the train before two more wheels had passed over his legs. Witness remained with him until his death, which occurred shortly after. He was insensible when pulled clear of the cars. Witness said that he told Mr. Vance who was in command of the yard engine that men were working on No. 1 track. That was all witness did for the men's protection. "When last I saw Hart," said Mr. Falkner, "he was passing from the north side of the car to the south side." He said that cars being repaired are generally placed on the cripple track which is guarded by flags. However, on some occasions if the work could be done in a few minutes the car was usually repaired on the track on which it happened to be standing.

WILLIAM VANCE'S STATEMENT

The third witness summoned was William Vance, who on being sworn said, "I am a yard foreman in the employ of the C. P. R. Co., and was told on the morning of October 10th that men were repairing a car on No. 1 track. The yard engine driver was Mr. Child and he was under my directions, and it was I who ordered him to shunt on No. 1 track. I did not see anything to prevent me making up my train, and took no other steps to ascertain whether the work had been completed. The man who was watching could not have seen the engine approaching on account of the curve. When I was ready to join my cars up I did not see any men around, neither did the train carry any flags. Had Hart been on the north side of the train I could have seen him also; if there had been flags on the train I would not have ordered my engine on to that track, for it was under my directions that Child went on to No. 1 siding. I did not expect to see any flags, as Falkner half an hour previously had told me that the job which the men were doing was only a small one.

John Hill, on being sworn, said: "I am a yard master in the employ of the C.P.R. Co. The rule for placing cars to be repaired is to place such a car on the cripple track, and to put out flags. There are some cases, as the one in question, when the repairs are done on the track on which the car happens to stand; however, flags, according to the company's rules should be placed on all occasions. I do not know positively, but I think, a man should protect himself. It was on this occasion Vance's duty to have charge of the shunting engine and train, and Child's duty to obey Vance. I do not know whose duty it was to post flags, which according to the rules of the company, should have been placed at each end of the train. The men employed in the car repairing department should know their duty in respect of seeing that they were protected."

On being re-called, John Hill stated that when employed a man need not necessarily be conversant with the rules of the company. A man who had worked for some time would by observation learn the rules regarding his protection.

OTHER WITNESSES.

Herbert Schemerhorn and Joseph Vancickle, were also called and examined, but could not give any evidence which had not previously been given.

Dr. J. Holdcroft, who had been summoned to the scene of the accident, filed the following report with Coroner McWilliams. "I was called to see Henry Weese, who was injured on the C.P.R. and went to the station. He was dead when I arrived. I examined the body in Mr. T. Curtis' undertaking establishment and found the left leg broken above the knee, the right leg bruised at the knee, the left wrist broken, the right elbow cut and broken. He was cut through the back as though he had been run over by a car wheel. The body was apparently well nourished. The injury to the back would cause his death."

As to Mobs.

You can't punish a mob unless you punish it while it is a mob. A man is not the same man while he is in a mob as he is while he is an individual, and this is one reason why it is so difficult ever to punish and individual for what he did as a part of a mob. This distinction is not fanciful; it is a real difference, and public sentiment and prosecuting officers and juries recognize it, whether they know it or not. For this reason it is generally useless to hope for the punishment of men after a mob has dispersed.

Alcohol in Medicine.

Our own opinion, which we have frequently set forth, is that alcoholic beverages are of value in certain forms of disease and that their value depends not so much upon the alcohol, but upon the vinous ethers which these beverages contain or should contain. No medical man doubts that intemperance in alcohol is an appalling factor in the spread of crime, disease and poverty, and it is undoubtedly the duty of the medical profession to endeavor to stay the curse of drink by every means in its power.—London Lancet.

ANOTHER GAMEY INFAMY HAS BEEN LAID BARE.

Tried to Induce His Partner to Fabricate Evidence.

Amazing Statement Made Under Oath by Mr. Crossin, the Former Partner of the Man From Manitoulin—Story of the Mutilation of the Books of the Company—Conservatives Endeavoured to get Crossin to Leave Toronto.

Another of the infamies of Mr. R. R. Gamey, M.P.P., has been brought to light. His former partner, Mr. Edward Crossin, of the Crossin Piano Company, has made a statutory declaration in which it is alleged by him that Gamey sought to induce him deliberately to falsify the books of the company, the object being to trump up evidence against Mr. Stratton, or remove a record that would weaken Gamey's position. Crossin refused, but the record was falsified, evidently by Gamey himself, before his famous flight to Buffalo, while the case was in progress. One of the sensational features of the hearing before Judges Boyd and Falconbridge was the inquiry into the payment of $900 which Gamey made to the Crossin Piano Company on September 11th, 1902, the mutiliation of the company's books with regard to that entry, and the falsification of the deposit slip for that amount in the Ontario Bank. Mr. Gamey in his evidence before the Commission made a number of contradictory statements as to these matters, even insinuating that Mr. J. M. McEvoy, one of the counself for the defence, had something to do with the mutilation of the books of the company. All the facts have never been brought out, and Mr. Crossin, in the course of his business found that he was embarrassed by the suspicion that he personally was connected with these transactions. He therefore determined to separate from Mr. Gamey, and yesterday afternoon this was completed. The stock, 69 shares, held by Mr. Gamey and Mr. Smythe, M.P.P., for Algoma, has been transferred to others.

Mr. Crossin's story is as follows, and reveals an attempt to fabricate evidence such as only a false charge would require:

MR. CROSSIN'S STATEMENT.

On the 11th of September, 1902, there was entered in our cash book (cash book of the Crossin Piano Manufacturing Company) a credit to R. R. Gamey, of a cash payment of $900, due the company for balance of $1,500 stock. I entered this in my own handwriting in the regular course of business in a cash book kept by me and Mr. Gamey, showing the cash receipts and payments. It was an ordinary blotter, because we were going to incorporate the company, and we did not keep regular sets of books pending the incorporation. Mr. Gamey came into the business on the 1st of April, 1901. He put in $1,500 at that time, and subsequently advanced other sums, making in all about $3,000, including the 11th of September item of $900. After the statements made on the floor of the House, charging Mr. Stratton with bribery and corruption, Mr Gamey came to me, and asked if I had remembered the payment of this $900 to our credit in the Ontario Bank. I said, "Yes, perfectly well," and he wanted to know if there was any memorandum in the books of that date. I said there was in the cash book and also in the bank book, and I turned up the cash book and showed him the entry—and it was there, 11th September, 1902, statement of $900 having been paid in by himself.

A DIFFERENCE TO HIM.

He then said, "Do you remember my paying any money into the Traders' Bank about that time?" I said, "Yes; they were both paid in on the same day." He then said, "Oh, no; that could not be, as I gave you the $900 on 10th September." I said "No, that is not correct; we both went to the bank together when the deposit of $900 was made, and both deposits in the Ontario Bank and the Traders' Bank were made within an hour and a half of each other," and I again referred to the bank book, showing him the entry. He then said, "While the bank book and your cash book show the entry of September 11th, I gave you that $900 on the afternoon of the 10th September." I again said that could not be possible, as I would not carry that money in my pocket over night. He then said, "Well, this is a matter that will make a very great difference to me, and as it is a matter that is really closed so far as the firm is concerned, and can in no wise make any difference to us so far as the business is concerned, I would like you to change that to August 20th or 21st.— I then said, "I cannot do that; it was interfering with the statements of the books, and I simply could not do so." The matter dropped at that point. This would be Wednesday or Thursday preceding the week of the opening of the court.

CHANGED THE ENTRY.

I did not see him after that until the investigation opened, and on opening the books I discovered that this entry of September 11th had been changed to August 21st, and the word "August 21st" and the figures "900" were blotted over. That would be on the Tuesday or Wednesday of the first week of the investigation. Pretty certain it was on Tuesday. When I first saw this mutilation I called the attention of one of Mr. Gamey's counsel to it, and asked him to come down to the office after the adjournment of the court. On the counsel's arrival at the factory he asked me if there was anything in our books that could in any way do us harm. (Meaning the party.) I said, "Not that I am aware of, so far as I am concerned, but that there was an entry in the cash book which had been changed." On showing him this particular entry of September 11th, $900, after looking at it for quite a considerable time, he said, "What does this mean?" I explained to him the circumstances as I have set forth above. He then said, after fully grasping the situation, "What a damned fool he is."

SOMETHING TO COVER UP.

I then said to him, "I am under subpoena to produce the books of the company in court, and that he had better see Mr. Gamey and have him explain that away, for I certainly would not attempt to do so, as it was the first thing the defence would put their fingers on, and say that that was a change that had been made in the books—that there was something to be covered up." He promised to attend to it that night.

The following morning, on my return to the factory about 7.30, I found Mr. Gamey there—an unusual hour. I never knew him to be there as early before. The matter was not referred to on that occasion. The next I knew about the transaction was on the Saturday afternoon after the bank slip episode and after he had gone to Buffalo. Feeling somewhat suspicious, as I did, I examined the book in question, and found the two front leaves (the second included this item of $900) had been torn out of the book and taken away. No person had any keys to the office except myself and Mr. Gamey. We had the only two keys in existence. No one could get into the office except ourselves.

MR. McEVOY ABSOLVED.

I remember the day Mr. McEvoy was there. It was on Friday afternoon preceding the bank difficulty. He came up about 4.15 p.m., and I opened the door and invited him to go in, but he declined to do so pending the arrival of Mr. Macdonald and Mr. McPherson for the prosecution. He sat opposite me where I was working at my bench until the arrival of Messrs. Macdonald and McPherson. I went in to show them the books. Mr. McEvoy was never present in the office except on that occasion. He was never alone in the office. The other two solicitors were with him all the time. So far as I am aware, Mr. McEvoy did not know of any entries in the books. Certainly not from me. There is no doubt that these leaves were gone before Mr. McEvoy entered the office. From the circumstances, I am perfectly satisfied that these leaves were taken out early on Thursday morning.

MR. SMYTHE'S STOCK.

I knew nothing originally of the $1,500 stock transaction. On the Tuesday afternoon, the second day of the opening of the trial, I was sent for. I was met in the hall by one of the solicitors, who introduced me to one of Mr. Gamey's counsel. We were taken into the sideroom together with Mr. Smythe, whom I had met at the factory a few days before in company with Mr. Gamey. Mr. Smythe is the member for Algoma. I first knew of Mr. Smythe being a stockholder for $1,500 on the day they took me into this room at the City Hall, the second day of the sittings of the commission. Mr. Smythe told me he thought I ought to know that he held from Mr. Gamey his own personal certificate as collateral, and that this money, he had no doubt, was to represent the $1,500 which Mr. Gamey said he had received from a member of the Government.

ASKED TO LEAVE TOWN

The first knowledge I had of the denomination of the bills of the $900 deposit in the Ontario Bank was the day of the bank episode about the slips. The deposit was made by Gamey, and not by me. I did not even know the number of bills or their amount, except I knew from the bank book that the aggregate was $900. This slip was not in my handwriting. I had nothing to do with it, but as he told me that he had paid in $900 to the credit of the company, and as I knew this to be the fact from the deposit, I entered the amount immediately after in the cash book on the same day, and, therefore, I could not be mistaken about the time, which was the 11th day of September, 1902, the same day that we made application for our charter. Both facts, I know, happened the same day, and they were entered in our books accordingly.

On the morning of the day I was examined by the defence, Mr. Masson, one of the solicitors for Mr. Gamey's side of the case, came to my office and asked me about my subpoena. I told him I had been subpoenaed by the other side as well, and and told him when this had been done, and all particulars. He told me I could go out of town, as my subpoena had expired, and I needn't attend before the commission. Notwithstanding this, I did attend, and gave evidence in all matters on which I was questioned.

The above statements represent the truth as far as I am concerned.

A SPORTSMAN SHOT.

H. A. Boxer Rose Into the Line of Fire and the Top of His Head Was Almost Completely Blown Off.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 22.—A most deplorable shooting accident occurred yesterday afternoon while a party of Winnipeggers were duck shooting at High Bluff. W. J. Bullman, one of the party, pulled his shotgun to kill a duck, and just as he fired H. A. Boxer, a companion, rose from an adjoining canoe, directly in the line of fire. The top of Boxer's dead was almost completely blown off, and death resulted instantly. The deceased was manager for Messrs. Merrick, Anderson & Co., hardware merchants of this city, and one of Winnipeg's most popular young men. The body was brought into the city last night.

Bird Hunter May Die.

Oakville, Oct. 22.—Harry Moore, jr., son of H. E. Moore, hardware merchant, of this town, was accidentally shot yesterday afternoon while out shooting birds. It appears he had the gun behind his back and was bringing it around when it exploded, the bullet entering the head behind the ear. Hopes for his recovery are slight.

COOK G. R. PELL KILLED.

Westbound's Boarding Car Wrecked and a Cook Killed.

Brantford, Oct. 22.—A railway smash resulting in one fatality, occurred just west of the Grand Trunk station here at an early hour yesterday morning. The victim was G. R. Pell, a former resident of Oakville. He was an Englishman and unmarried. He was employed as cook on a special train on which station workmen, laboring on the line in this vicinity, dine and sleep. The kitchen car was cut off from the main train, and ran down grade, crashing into the main section, which had started to back up. Pell, who was at the end of the car, was pinned in when the crash came. His head was terribly crushed. The end of the kitchen car was badly damaged. An inquest will be held.

Dropped Down Dead.

Tilbury, Oct. 22.—Henry Davis, a farmer, aged about 75, living five miles east of Tilbury, came in town, just before noon, with grist. While waiting, he walked around to Crawford's factory, and complained that it was cold. After warming himself at the fire, he started to return, when he immediately fell dead from heart failure.

Killed at Fort William.

Fort Williams, Oct. 22.—Tuesday night, about 11 o'clock, Arthur Basil Lewington, a young Englishman, was run over by three or four freight cars, crushing his left leg above the knee, his right leg below the knee and his left arm below the elbow, and his other hand had been run over too. He was quite conscious when picked up, but died early yesterday morning.

A TRANSPORTATION NOTICE.

Steamship and Railway Companies to Be in Readiness For Emergencies—Unconfirmed Rumor That Russo-Japanese Negotiations Have Been Broken Off—Japs Remain in Vladivostock.

Yokohama, Japan, Oct. 22.—The Ministerial conferences, naval preparations and, notably, the appointment of Vice-Admiral Toga, known as a "fighting Admiral," to command the standing squadron, have led to a renewal of the anticipations of trouble. Some decided development in the tribis is expected shortly. The steamship and railroad companies are reported to have been notified to be in readiness for emergencies.

An Unconfirmed Rumor.

London, Oct. 22.—A report was in circulation on the Stock Exchange yesterday that the negotiations between Russia and Japan had been broken off, but the Foreign Office officials here said they had not heard anything confirmatory of the rumor. This statement was made subsequent to a visit paid by Baron Hayashi to Foreign Minister Lansdowne yesterday afternoon. The officials of the Foreign Office added that the report was contrary to the general trend of its information.

Japs May Remain in Vladivostock.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 22.—A despatch to The Novoe Vremya from Vladivostock under yesterday's date says:

"The Japanese Government has notified the Consuls here that there is no reason why the Japanese should leave Vladivostock." This was in reply to a query of the Consul here on the subject.

Treaty May Be Modified.

The Novykrai, of Port Arthur, commenting on the commercial treaty between the United States and China, declares that article twelve, relating to the opening of ports in Manchuria to the United States trade, strikes at the very heart of Russian interests in Manchuria, and says it is convinced the treaty will only be ratified after material modifications.

Manchuria in Russian Control.

Berlin, Oct. 22.—The correspondent of a Berlin newspaper quotes The Vostotchni Vestnik, a journal published in the Far East, as authority for the statement that Paul Lessar, Russian Minister to China, has concluded a treaty with China which gives Russia practical control of Manchuria, although under a nominal Chinese Government. Russia undertakes to conduct negotiations in any way arising with a third power from the new treaty

THE ALASKA AWARD.

Once again British diplomacy or political perversity or some occult influence has sacrificed Canadian interests. It is not necessary to go into details of the Alaska boundary award, the fact stands out as boldly as the existence of Canadian rights, which have been gratuitously injured, that this country has been superciliously and disdainfully treated. A very strong case was ably presented by the Canadian and British representatives on the commission, yet with many of Canada's claims recognized a decision has been given which seems to be utterly at variance, with the facts previously acknowledged. Canada has little deserved such treatment and if her loyalty were of the bread and butter variety it would be severely strained. We have been generous in our treatment of the Mother Country, and though we have been benefitted by her protection we have not been slow to extend material assistance in maintaining the integrity of the Empire at a period of great national crisis. We have volunteered a tariff preference to British goods. If an appeal ad crumena fails to placate commercial John Bull and earn his good will, it is almost vain to hope that any other appeal would be effective. The concession of a preference is not urged as a very great matter in itself; but, as an evidence of our loyalty to the central power and to Imperial interests, it is certainly of too great a value to justify a sacrifice of our material interests. Canada has reason to object to being used as a catspaw to reclaim British chestnuts and to being deliberately sacrificed to conciliate our neighbours to the south of us. While great Imperial interests may in the view of British statesmen justify such extreme means of buying friendship at the expense of the greatest member of the Colonial section Empire, yet if they know the national greed, the defective sense of national honour of our neighbours, they would realise, as we do, how Brother Johnathan is laughing in his sleeves at the quixotic generosity of John Bull. The British idea of chivalric treatment of an ostensibly friendly power may be proper enough, but it is all thrown away on a power which is inherently incapable of appreciating generosity. Such as the finding is, Canada must accept. Canadians can assure them that the appreciation received will be practically wanting, and that more or less distasteful boastings, and ill-concealed contempt of British diplomatic methods, more or less open imputations of pusillanimity, and assertions that fear of "the greatest nation on earth," has dictated the surrender of Canadians rights, will be heard. However, the mischief is done, the award is binding, and it becomes Canada to accept with dignity a condition that might well justify a robust expression of dissent.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Alaska award is Britain's answer to Canada's contribution towards ending the South African war.

The Globe calls attention to the fact that Lord Ashburton and Lord Alverstone are alike in that their names both begin with an A. Diplomatically speaking, there is another animal, not noted for brilliant intellectual achievements, whose name also begins with an A.

ALASKA BOUNDARY DECISION.

The Globe's comments on the Alaska boundary decision on Monday last were based on the assumption that the earlier reports of the tribunal's findings were substantially correct. Later and more detailed reports show that the decision of the joint commission is not so favourable to Canada as was at first supposed. Of the four islands lying along the Alaskan shore of the Portland Canal, the outer two have been allotted to the United States, and the inner two to Canada. As the islands are of no intrinsic value except for strategic purposes, they might just about as well have been all taken from this country. Certainty, as there was no reason for dividing the group, the whole four should have gone together to either one country or the other.

The Canadian Commissioners, Sir Louis Jette and Mr. A. B. Aylesworth, have taken upon themselves the very serious responsibility of not merely refusing to sign the award but embodying in a signed and published statement their reasons for so doing. This document becomes historically part of the proceedings in the case, and it deserves from all who are interested in the matter the most careful consideration. It is studiously respectful in tone, but perfectly unmistakable in meaning. For resorting to such a protest they had a noteworthy precedent, if they wanted one, in Lord Chief Justice Cockburn's analogous protest in 1872 against some of the findings of the Geneva arbitration tribunal on the case of the Alabama and other Confederate cruisers built or fitted out in British ports.

The points dealt with by the Canadian commissioners are the Portland Canal, the mountain line, and the relation of this line to several inlets from the ocean. The first is the one which will attract most attention and arouse most feeling. The two commissioners make the startling disclosure that Lord Alverstone agreed with them in regard to the contention they put forward as "absolutely unanswerable;" that the unanimous opinion of the three British commissioners was embodied in a memorandum and read to the commission; that in spite of this unanimity Lord Alverstone subsequently signed an award which gives to the United States two of the four islands claimed by Canada; and that this surrender was never even suggested by counsel in the course of the argument. These allegations put Lord Alverstone before the world in a very peculiar position, and it will be interesting to note what rejoinder, if any, he makes to this by no means soft impeachment.

With regard to the mountain line, the Canadian case was so strong that the tribunal had to admit its contention correct, that mountains within the terms of the Russo-British treaty of 1825 do exist where the Canadian claim alleges them to be. Naturally and logically these should have been taken as the boundary line, but a row of mountains farther inland was substituted for them in the finding of the commission. The effect of this procedure is to take from Canada not merely territory to which she is fairly entitled, but at least one "fine harbour" affording access from the ocean to the interior, and this not complicated by adverse occupation. As to the general question of inlets, the Canadian commissioners intimate their belief that the finding of the tribunal is wrong, and they have put on record their reasons for this view.

To understand the protest of Sir Louis Jette and Mr. Aylesworth it is necessary to bear in mind that the commission was appointed to "adjudicate," not to "arbitrate," on the meaning of the treaty. They contend that with respect to both the islands in the Portland Canal and the mountains specified as the inland boundary the finding is a compromise, the result in each case being a distinct sacrifice of the interests of Canada. In the light of this protest the finding will arouse strong and lasting indignation all over the Dominion, based on a sense of wrong that no consideration of Imperial interest will deaden. There was no reason in sight for such concessions, and Canadians will be practically unanimous in the opinion that under the circumstances they should not have been made.—Globe.

MUSKOKA ELECTION REMINISCENCE.

One of the principal bye-elections now pending is that for Muskoka, where the Liberal candidate is Dr. Hart, and the Conservative candidate is now as he was at the general election, Mr. Mahaffy, brother of the county judge. This relationship recalls the fact that in the general election in May, of last year, the late member, Dr. Bridgeland, was cheated out of 27 votes, through the hair-splitting of the aforesaid county judge. One of the deputies, Henry C. Grey, initialled all the ballots, simply "H. G." and the court declared that the signature was too short. The other deputy, William McNaughton, signed "W. McN." and the court decided that this was too long, and that the proper initials were "W.M." Fortunately the judge was not able to affect ther esult of the election, but he certainly did the best he could. This particular "judicial outrage" has, however, escaped the attention of the Conservative press. We wonder why.

BENEFITS OF THE G. T. P.

The importance of the new Transcontinental Railway to the prosperity of the Dominion, at this stage in its progress is not easily overestimated. The growing scarcity of lands for the settler in the United States, and the great interest now being taken in the Dominion by the people of Great Britain, assure to us an annually increasing number of desirable immigrants to settle our great west, and the impetus that the building of another railway will give to our country's advancement will be great. In a very few years it will double the area and productiveness of the North-West and British Columbia.

And there is a nearer view of the benefits of the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific, even before it becomes a great factor in settling our prairies or carrying our produce. There is a prospect of a period of contraction in the United States. It will be well for our neighbours if they escape a period of stagnation as the penalty of their economic crimes. In such an event their condition would to some extent react on us. Here the importance of a great work like the building of a railway from ocean to ocean, the labour it will employ, the material of Canadian manufacture that it will use, the money that it will put in circulation, will serve for the time to prevent our people from feeling the worst of any depression that might overtake our neighbours. And the outlay will be an investment that will in the future pay us handsomely, both directly and indirectly. —Hamilton Times.

EXPERT ADVICE TO HORTICULTURISTS.

Should Pay Particular Attention to Securing Pure Seed.

It should be unnecessary to urge upon the growers of garden crops the importance of using thoroughly reliable seed, or to defendt he practice of testing the seeds before sowing them. Many gardeners have suffered heavy loss through the purchase of old or inferior seed and almost all who have used the seeds of flowers and vegetables have had occasion, at one time or another, to lament the use of seed of unknown quality. Genuine seed of high germinating capacity is, however, only one essential to a successful crop, and to depreciate the importance of good gardeners would be entirely wrong. Since a good start is always important it would seem to devote a little more attention to securing satisfactory seed would amply repay the majority of gardeners.

To the horticulturist, to a greater extent than to the agriculturist is genuine reliable seed important. With the seeds of many farm crops their actual value can be determined several months before planting, because the question of varieties does not enter to the same extent as in garden crops. With the garden crops trueness to variety is of paramount importance and a disappointment in that regard may mean, practically the loss of a season's crop, if the difference be a late maturing variety for an early one, or vice versa. It is therefore important that growers be competent and reliable.

For man years all the seeds used in this country were European grown, although as early as 1785 some attention was given to their growth in the United States. In that country the trade grew steadily until about 1880, when, owing to the interruption in trade due to the civil war, people began to look for a home supply and home production was greatly stiulated as a result. The increased demand encouraged growers to produce reliable seeds and kinds suited to all conditions of growth. A fair trial of home-grown seeds convinced people that they were as satisfactory as imported stocks, and in some cases gave better results. In 1878 there was estimated to be 7,000 acres devoted to the production of garden seeds, but at that time the California seed trade was but beginning and since it has grown to enormous proportions. hTe vegetable seeds most grown in California are onion, lettuce, carrot, leek, kale, parsley and parsnip; the flower seeds, sweet peas, nasturtiums, verbenas and asters. Cabbage and cauliflower seed is grown in the state of Washington and a good quality is grown on Long Island. Many other kinds of flower and vegetable seeds are grown in various districts, but, as a rule, not in sufficient quantity to affect the trade. There is still and will continue to be large quantities of nearly all kinds of seed imported from Europe where labour is not so great an item of expense as in America.

Much of the work in connection with the growing has to be done by hand, so that labour is an important consideration. The system of "rogueing" practised by all reliable growers is necessary in order to maintain the type, and consists of removing by hand all plants that deviate from the required standard. Cultivating, harvesting, threshing and cleaning are largely hand operations.

The labour involved is a serious objection to the homegrowing of seed which is practised by some gardeners. Very frequently, too, the quality of seed produced is inferior to that grown by professionals unless proper precautions are taken. The greatest dangers encountered are the crossing of varieties and deterioration of stock. To obviate the first difficulty small growers will find it necessary to grow only one variety of any one species; to overcome the second, constant care in selection will be required. Only those plants which are vigorous and approach the ideal conformation for that variety should be allowed to ripen their seed. Vigor and growth of productiveness in individual plants are the qualities that are transmitted from one generation of plants to the next, so that it is unwise to allow any but the most desirable plants to mature. Turnips and radishes that are not suitable use are much less suitable for seed production. Not all the seed of even the best plants should be sown, as there are invariably present small and shrivelled seeds, and only large, plump seeds should be used. By following this system of selection a gardener may not only maintain but constantly improve the variety, but if he is not willing to exercise such care he would do much better to purchase his seeds from a reliable seedsman.

While it is true that to secure genuine garden seeds is a more immportant consideration than to have seeds that show a high vitality, it is evident that a person growing seeds should know approximately what per cent. were likely to grow. In order to obtain some definite information in reward to the quality of our vegetable and flower seeds, the Seed Division of the Department of Agriculture collected upwards of five hundred samples and tested them for vitality. The samples were secured at about twenty different points in the Dominion and were considered representative of the seeds on sale. About About one hundred of the packages bought were of seeds held over from last year. The mos tapproved method was used in making the tests, two hundred seeds being used for each test and each being conducted in duplicate. Where the number of seeds in the package would not permit of this all the seeds were used.

The following table gives a summary of tests of a few of the common seeds:

Kind of Seed	No. of Tests	Min.	Max.	Ave.
Onion	27	1.3	96.5	55.7
Lettuce	10	41	95.3	82.9
Celery	11	1.5	56.5	18.2
Carrot	24	26	93	66
Cauliflower	9	7.5	87	61.5
Radish	17	12.5	96	71.6
Tomato	18	27	97.5	77
Cabbage	14	40.6	95.3	72
Parsnip	15	11.3	63	40
Sweet Peas	5	63	91.3	85.4
Pansy	6	9.5	75	54.2

The most noteworthy point in the results is the great variation in the results of different samples of the one kind of seed. For while the average is in most cases fairly reasonable, a considerable number of samples germinate so poorly that a poor stand would be inevitable. The samples of extremely low vitality doubtless were principally old seed held over from year to year. Some kinds of seed depreciate in value very rapidly and in a few years are valueless, so that the practice of some seedsmen of leaving seed packages in the hands of retailers year after year cannot be commmended.

It is important that a buyer of seeds should know at least approximately what per cent. is vital, but, owing to the limited amount of seed it is impossible for him to make a test. The case is different with a wholesale dealer, who has seed in bulk and should know within all east five or ten per cent the vitality of the seeds he handles. To stamp the vitality on each package would entail some little trouble to seedsmen, but not necessarily any risk, as no objection could be raised to a reasonable margin. Such a practice would be of ineatimable benefit to the users of the seed.

BAWBEES VS. SENTIMENT.

The following advertisement recently published by a Scottish draper suggests that the war fever is not raging in the Old Country just now:

Notice: There will be offered to-day for Dusters 3,000 dozen Mafeking Flags, hemmed and ready. These sold in Mafeking times at 6d. each; now for Dusters. One Shilling a Dozen.

There is nothing surprising about this. The flag maker simply overrated the capacity of his market and with true commercial instinct resolved to recoup himself as far as possible for his loss.

Startling Revelations.

It frequently happens that people suffer for years from kidney derangements without knowing the cause of their backaches, aching limbs and other bodily sufferings. Suddenly the truth is revealed to them that they are the victims of serious kidney disease and in imminent danger. There is no remedy that gives such prompt and lasting relief for every form of kidney disease as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They are positively effective even in the most chronic cases.

Mr. D. P. Daugherty, well known throughout Mercer and Sumner counties, W. Va., most likely owes his life to the kindness of a neighbour. A MASTERLY EXPOSITION.

Hon. Mr. Fielding Defends Government's Financial Policy and Announces Great Increase in the Revenue.

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—The House managed to get through a very large amount of business yesterday, and prorogation is now practically assured on Saturday at the latest. When the House adjourned all the estimates had been voted, and nothing remains upon the order paper but a few Government bills and concurrence in supply. The Premier yesterday morning laid upon the table the cable from Hon. Mr. Sifton, and explained by the aid of the map the effect of the Alaskan boundary award. The Opposition had a regular field day upon the question of the distribution through the mails of their campaign literature. The Premier stated that the Postmaster-General had ordered a thousand new mail bags to relieve the situation, and later it was learned that two special trains will leave this morning to carry away the accumulation of literature. Last evening Mr. A. C. Bell presented the annual amendment condemning the reckless and extravagant expenditure by the Government. A masterly exposition of the financial policy of the Government was given by Mr. Fielding, who showed that the expenditure under the Liberal regime was proportionately much less than under the Conservative Government, that the debt per head had been materially reduced, and that the revenue continues to expand. The announcement that for the three and a half months of the current fiscal year the revenue has increased by $2,620,000, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, was received with vociferous cheers from the Government benches.

The Senate made rapid progress yesterday, and cleared the order paper of all business save a few items, which will be taken up to-day. The redistribution bill, after all the tempest raised about it in the Commons, was read a third time and passed without a murmur.

TO BE HANGED DEC. 18.

Sir John Boyd Sentences the Syrian, Burhaam, to Death.

Cornwall, Oct. 22.—Kalil Burhaam will hang at Cornwall on Friday, Dec. 18, for the murder of Selim Couri at Chesterville, Ont., on Nov. 29, 1902. This was the decision the jury, under Chancellor Sir John Boyd, arrived at here last evening. The jury was only about 10 minutes determining Burhaam's guilt.

Three of the witnesses were Syrians, Hamidi Court, the mother of the murdered man; Deheny Hadiat, his niece, and his nephew, an 8-year-old boy. As the latter did not know the nature of an oath, his statement was taken instead, and he told how Burhaam took a razor from his pocket, walked up behind Couri and cut his throat, then ran away.

The niece was also an eye-witness of the deed. The mother was also present, and saw the men together, although she did not see the fatal blow. She swore that her son, after falling to the floor, rose partly up and gasped that Burhaam had killed him. She also testified that there was fresh blood on Burhaam's face and hands when he was caught, a short distance from Couri's store, by Constable George Munro.

The latter gave evidence as to the arrest. He was near by when the old woman gave the alarm. Burhaam looked like a crazy man.

Frank McCloskey testified to finding the razor outside the store, and Dr. Brown and Dr. Blacklock gave medical evidence as to the cause of death. The defence did not call any witnesses.

Not Guilty.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child become hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough begins, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance, and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all druggists.

MR. C. M. HAYS' PLANS

Construction of Grand Trunk Pacific Will Be Rushed.

SURVEYING PARTIES OUT.

Some Have Completed the Work of Their Division and Others Will Keep on All Winter—Endeavor to Secure Same Maximum Grade as Between Toronto and Montreal—The Eastern Division.

Montreal, Oct. 22.—C. M. Hays, general manager and second vice-president of the Grand Trunk Railway, has issued the following statement regarding the company's plans for completing the Grand Trunk Pacific:

"The Grand Trunk Pacific Incorporation Act having been passed by the Senate and the amendments offered therein concurred in by the House, the bill is now only awaiting the royal assent to place the matter in a position whereby the company can be organised and take definite form to inaugurate the necessary action preparatory to undertaking the obligation entered into by the company with the Government.

"The reconnaissance survey is proceeding vigorously, and, in fact, has been ever since early last spring. We have between 15 and 20 parties in the field, some of whom have about completed the work on their division; others will keep on all through the winter. Great care has been taken with a view of obtaining a line with a minimum grade, not exceeding 4-10 per cent., or 20 feet to the mile, about the same as the maximum grade between Toronto and Montreal, and with no greater than two or three degree curves.

"On some portions of the route where the country is comparatively unknown, for instance in the Lake Nepigon district, owing to the lack of transportation facilities, supplies are difficult to obtain, and progress is not as great as otherwise would be the case.

"Plans for construction at the point at which a beginning will be made are dependent on the completion of surveys. We have now the territory pretty well covered. The first parties we sent out, which were started before the Government policy as to the eastern division was developed, were located between Winnipeg and North Bay, the theory being that that was the section of country that was most in need of additional facilities and while it is undoubtedly true that, for some years to come, a large proportion of the grain crop of the Northwest will move out by water during the season of navigation, there is to-day a very considerable quantity moving by rail north of Lake Superior, and this quantity will be increased in a constantly growing volume as rail facilities for the economical and expeditious movement of the traffic are provided. The new line, with its 4-10 per cent. grade, will have great advantage in this respect.

"Our surveying parties are also well distributed across the territory from Winnipeg west, and construction on both portions of the line will be pushed as soon as the results of our surveys are known, as also the construction of the branches from a port on Lake Superior (which port is yet to be determined), to a junction with the eastern division, and a line from North Bay north, also to intersect with the eastern division.

"As to plans and intention in connection with the work on the eastern division, I shall have to refer you to the Government, that portion of the undertaking being, as you are aware, under their control. While it is dependent on conditions generally, the results of surveys, the situation as regards labor, movement of supplies, material, etc., it is not likely that the road will be completed short of five years."

THE TEMPORAL POWER.

Pope Pius X. Anxious to Close Breach Between Church and Italy.

New York, Oct. 22.—A Rome cable to the Tribune says. Angelo Sarto, a brother of the Pope, and Signor Angelo Parolin, brother-in-law, have had several long conversations with the Pontiff, and say that they understand his feelings both as an Italian and as the head of the church.

According to their assertions Pius X. is anxious to leave his name in history by stopping the long conflict between the church and state by means of a modus vivendi which, without renouncing theoretically the claims of the Papacy for temporal power would render possible a certain understanding between Italy and the Vatican which would allow the Pope to be no longer the prisoner of the Vatican.

Before taking any step the Pope wished to know what compensations Italy would be willing to grant to the church.

THE MUSKOKA ELECTION.

Premier Ross Shows That Progress Is Still the Liberal Watchword.

Bracebridge, Oct. 22.—Premier Ross and Dr. J. W. Hart, the Liberal candidate in the bye-election, addressed a meeting here last night in the Town Hall, which augured well for the success of the Liberal party at the polls on Tuesday next. The hall was crowded by an orderly and enthusiastic audience, who listened to the Premier for an hour and a half while he delivered an address in which he set forth clearly and convincingly the claims of the Government for a continuance of the confidence which it has enjoyed for thirty years. His address throughout demonstrated that continual progress was still the watchword of the Ontario Liberals.

Dr. Hart made a favorable impression, and will beyond a doubt shortly be as well and popularly known in this part of the riding as in the north. He gave good proof of a thorough appreciation of the riding's needs, and of a determination to work for them if given the opportunity. Mr. G. O. Thomas of Bracebridge, occupied the chair, and spoke briefly in opening the meeting of the good opinion held throughout the riding of Dr. J. W. Hart. He also congratulated the people upon having an opportunity to hear Premier Ross.

River Notes.

The steamer Rainbow arrived in port yesterday with a scow load of wood and lumber for Mr. R. Hicks and the Peter Hamilton Co. Capt. Copperthwaite reports the water in the river as being unusually low. The steamer Water Lily is in port to-day as well.

Two Curious Sticks.

Mr. William Fleming, who has been absent from home for some years, has returned to Peterborough, and is seemingly in the best of health. He brought from Mexico two handsome and curiously carved and burned walking sticks for Mr. Pete Simons, sr., and Mr. Pete Simons, jr., the well known George street tailors.

Fastidious Footwear Window.

Feminine fancy is being attracted to the excellent window display of dainty footwear made by Mr. R. McWhinnie, boot and shoe merchant. The window dresser has produced a pleasing effect, with a valuable display of many stylish shapes and patterns of ladies' slippers for social occasions, each pair delicately resting on a fancy bordered Japanese napkin.

TORONTO WEDDING.

Mr. T. D. McGregor, of Peterborough, Married on Wednesday.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Reid, only daughter of Mr. Hugh Reid, to Mr. Thomas Duncan MacGregor, general manager of the Equipment Company, of Peterborough, was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon, at the home of the bride's parents, 82 Summerhill avenue. Only their immediate relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. D. C. Hossack, pastor of the Deer Park Presbyterian church. The home was beautifully decorated with flowers and palms.

The bride's dress was of navy blue velvet, handsomely ornamented with cut steel buttons and white Panne velvet, and a castor velvet picture hat, with two large white plumes.

Among the rich and varied wedding gifts that of the groom to the bride was a handsome cluster diamond ring. The father gave his daughter a substantial cheque, and the mother a long mink stole and muff.

Mr. and Mrs. MacGregor left on the afternoon train for a trip to eastern cities. They will reside in Peterborough.

The bride is popular in musical circles and a well known Toronto vocalist. Of a recent appearance at a meeting of the Simcoe Old Boys — also girls, much younger—at the King Edward Hotel, a musical critic wrote of her singing on that occasion: "Miss Reid's high notes are equal to many of our American prima-donnas. Toronto should be proud of such a voice." Musical Toronto will miss her.—Toronto Telegram.

THE OWAIN MARTIN PIANO.

Practical Tribute to Excellence of a Piano of Local Manufacture.

The Martin & Stanley Piano Company, have to-day shipped two fine Owain Martin Pianos to the Convent of the Congregation de Notre Dame, Sherbrooke, P. Q. These pianos are finished in mahogany, style O, and are out of the regular stock.

As this is one of the most important educational institutions in the Province of Quebec, and as such business is usually secured only by sharp competition, and at the cost of large discounts for the sake of its advertising value, the importance of the order to the local firm will be readily understood.

Mr. Martin, when seen, expressed himself as a little more than pleased with this newest testimonial to the thoroughness of his work, now being put forth under his own name, in asmuch as it was entirely unsolicited by the firm, the order being sent in solely on the merits of a similar instrument shipped to a customer in Sherbrooke from the Toronto Fair.

In the letter enclosing the order is given a list of names of pianos now in this academy, both Canadian and American, which shows that none but the very best are used which will be readily believed when it is explained that these instruments are in continuous use for eight or nine hours each day.

Saw a Sea Serpent.

Mr. W. J. Morgan the well known George street barber, has returned from a brief outing up Ketchecum Lake and brings back with him an abundant supply of fish and game of various kinds including four rabbits, six brace of partridge, some beautiful trout and wild duck. Mr. Morgan asserts that he saw a sea-serpent in the lake, but this statement can barely be credited by those of his friends who have the widest of imaginations.

Spend an Enjoyable Evening.

What promises to be a highly successful affair is the Old Time Social which will be given in the St. John's Sunday School room this evening under the auspices of the Girls' Guild of that church. It is learned that an excellent, varied and appropriate programme has been arranged and it is thought that socially and financially the evening will come up to the expectations of all. There will be a number of both Guilds in costume to represent the olden times, and refreshments will be served during the evening.

Do you know Alive Charlie LeGros will allow you 50 cents per hundred in trade for all your Snowshoe Tobacco Tags? Get them; they are worth money.

REDEMPTION OF MINSTREL SHOWS.

Culhane, Chase and Weston's Company Present Good Performances.

A more than ordinary good minstrel show, as such organizations go these days, was the Culhane, Chase & Weston aggregation which gave a clean and perfectly satisfactory show last night in the Brook street rink. Those who went to the rink last night expecting to see an ordinary second rate minstrel troop were agreeably surprised, for the company undoubtedly provided the best show of its kind seen here in a long time. A pleasing departure from the regular cut-and-dried programme usually presented was introduced in the second half of the performance. Some special features being presented which stamp the entertainers as no ordinary ones. Keene, the "Comedy Manipulative Marvel," was able to execute some very clever juggling, while Billy Chase proved to be an exceptionally funny burned cork comedian. In a programme so full of merit it is difficult to particularize, but for bewildering cleverness the work of Hunter and Mooney in hoop rolling and club juggling is deserving of special mention, as is also the turn of Sherman and Dugan in the finale. The company has apparently made good the expectations held regarding the excellence of its performance.

LEMON SOUR BOTTLE CORK BLINDED A LITTLE BOY.

Removal of Left Eye by Eye Specialist This Afternoon.

Little Osborne Montgomery, aged 11 years, who lives at Hall's bridge, near Burkhorn, had the misfortune to lose the sight of his left eye through a painful accident on Monday last. It is learned that he was opening a lemon sour bottle when the cork, unexpectedly and with terrific force, flew out and hit him in the eye cutting it badly. The boy was as soon as possible brought to the Nicholls Hospital, where he was attended by Dr. McCullough, eye specialist, who, however, deems it necessary to remove the eye, which operation will be conducted by him this afternoon. The boy, who is a brother of Miss Beatrice Montgomery, a young lady well known in town, bore the pain heroically. His parents live at Hall's Bridge, but are at present in town.

AN OPERA HOUSE NEEDED.

Peterborough Behind the Times in This Respect.

A good audience, grovelling in sawdust, to witness what would have been a much better show, but for lack of stage assistance, emphasizes the want of a good opera house in Peterborough. Are the play-loving and music-loving public to go on all winter without decent amusement from lack of half-decent accommodation? Lindsay is to enjoy in a few days a visit from the Grau Opera Company, and other high class entertainments, but Peterborough is doomed to do without these, when we haven't even facilities for putting on a performance by the most modest company of barn stormers. Rat Portage in the depths of the woods, in northern Ontario, has a beautiful opera house, and there is hardly a town or village of any size in Ontario, but has a better opera house—if it has any at all—than Peterborough.

OBITUARY.

Death of Miss Minnie O'Brien, Daughter of Mr. John O'Brien.

The numerous friends of the family will learn with deep regret of the death, which took place last night, of Miss Minnie O'Brien, eldest daughter of Mr. John O'Brien, 360 Downey street, at the age of 23 years. Some two years ago Miss O'Brien suffered an attack of la grippe from which she never recovered, the ailment developing into an affection of the lungs. Eleven weeks ago her symptoms and condition became serious, and continued so till death relieved her sufferings. The deceased young lady, though domestic in her tastes and habits, was a general favourite in the large community of friends her amiable disposition won for her. Her early death will be widely mourned, even outside the home circle, where her death has created a sad vacancy, which will, as far as such consolation avails, be compensated by the deep sympathy of a numerous circle of friends.

The funeral takes place from the family residence, 360 Downey street, on Saturday next, at 9 o'clock, to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

CRITICISM OF CHURCH CHOIRS.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

The discussion being conducted in your columns relative to the singing of choirs and soloists has been read with great interest by me, and, on behalf of those who have been made the subject of remarks by "Music Lover" and "Another Lover of Music," which, to say the least, were uncalled for, I desire to say a word or two. I do not profess to be a musician of any considerable ability, in fact I do not lay claim to the title at all, but, by an association with choirs, both paid, and otherwise, extending over a period of some years, I have found that those that have rendered the churches most efficient service have been the ones, that have received the most encouragement from the church, and unlike the writers referred to above, I believe that the best way to ensure the choirs doing their best is to give them all the encouragement possible. If a soloist makes a "mess" of it, no one knows it better than that same person, and severe and humiliating criticism, a sample of which "Another Lover of Music" indulges in, will in no degree have a beneficial effect upon either the ability or the cheerful service of the singer. I wonder how the writers who are evidently taking such delight in belittling the choirs, would like to spend one, or perhaps two evenings every week rehearsing, and be tied down to attend if at all possible, two services every Sunday, in order that the worship might be rendered attractive, (very often the singing being the only attractive feature of it) and then, after this sacrifice had been made, willingly, and without remuneration, other than that which comes from a sense of having done one's best, to have such caustic remarks passed and such ungrateful criticisms made as have been suggested in this discussion.

If the churches were willing to pay the price and secure the best musical talent, none would welcome such an innovation more heartily than those who are now giving their services free, and would gladly sit in the pews and give place to their successors, because in the great majority of cases, the sole desire by which choir singers are animated is to help as best they may, the services of the sanctuary.

ONE OF THE CRITICIZED.

Ye Olde Time Social.

The Girls' Guild of St. John's church, will hold an old time social in the Guild Room on Thursday evening, October 22nd, which promises to be a highly enjoyable event. The members of both Guilds will be costumed in dress to represent the pioneer days, and refreshments in keeping with the spirit of the social will be served. A good programme will be presented to which the following will contribute: All Saints quartette, Miss Corry, Miss Ruth Dawson, Mr. Laurence, Miss Gumpricht, the Misses English, Miss Alberta White and Miss Mary Rush. A chorus will also be rendered by the members of the Guild. The admission is 15c. 2d

GOATS AS SCAVENGERS.

Pastured With Sheep They Destroy Undesirable Growths.

The Oshawa Reformer says: Farmers in some sections are looking into the Angora goat question with considerable interest. The goat does not interfere with the pasturage of cattle and sheep, as he is a browser and not a grazer. A few goats mingled with the sheep flock and cattle herd will keep the fence lines clean of brush and brambles and make scrub patches disappear; they get their living from the growths which the other animals refuse.

NOT A JUDICIAL DECISION.

Montreal Herald.

The Canadian members of the Alaska tribunal have declined to sign the award made by the other members of the commission on the grounds that it is not a judicial award. They practically accuse all the other "impartial jurists of repute" of having acted upon other than judicial considerations in framing the award. The reports sent out on Saturday led to the belief that the Canadian case had at least been upheld in the Portland Canal territory, a fact that made it look as though the verdict had been judicial. Now, it appears that, while conceding before his Canadian colleagues, the right of Canada to the possession of four small islands, Lord Alverstone consents to give two of them, and that the two outermost to the United States. We were told to rejoice because the possession of Wales and Pearse Islands gave Canada the strategic control of the entrance to Observatory Inlet, on the south side of which is Port Simpson, but it turns out that the military control, if there is anthing in that argument, goes the other way, that is, to the power that holds the two small islands. The Canadian commissioners also claim that as jurists, they cannot concur in the decision about the general boundary. That is to say, the Canadian representatives have declined to sign the award because they conceive it to be a political rather than a judicial agreement, and they find the interests of Canada sacrified in consequence.

The situation thus produced, is grave, no doubt. This arbitration began with a treaty which provided for appointment of "impartial jurists of repute." The spirit of the treaty was broken when men were appointed who could not be considered "impartial jurists of repute." Then came stories founded upon what only time is likely to disclose, that the British appointee was to side with the Americans. Something of the kind seems to have been credited by Mr. Aylesworth, one of the Canadian commissioners, if one may judge from an interview he gave to the press. At all events things have turned out just as report said they would. Care seems to have been taken weeks ago, to let it be known that Canada would be deeply aggrieved at any departure from a judicial decision by what was supposed to be a judicial tribunal, and nothing more. It is not a judicial decision, Mr. Aylesworth and Sir Louis Jette say, and there is nobody in Canada who stands high enough as a jurist to successfully challenge their authority. It is not a satisfactory ending.

THE LATEST NEWS OF LOCAL SPORT.

RUGBY.

Owing to the fact that the City League have arranged for a match to be played on Saturday, the management of the Rugby Club will not provide an exhibition game. It will be remembered that the manager of the Victorias of Toronto decided not to bring his team up. His action, which of course left Peterborough in a peculiar position, was repudiated by the team, who will, however, come down on the following Saturday.

• • • •

The Victorias decided yesterday that they did not want to go to Peterborough on Saturday, but would prefer to play their scheduled intermediate O.R.F.U. match with the Wellesleys in Toronto, and go to Peterborough on the following Saturday, Oct. 31. The Victorias repudiated the action of their manager in agreeing to send the team down on Saturday, the intention being to take advantage of an excursion rate to the Electric City. Wellesleys meet Victorias on the latter's grounds on Saturday. The Victorias claim that their men had made arrangements to get off to go to Peterborough on Oct. 31, and it would be impossible to get away this Saturday.—Toronto Star.

• • • •

The Rough Riders will practice in the rink this evening at 7.30 o'clock. All members are requested to turn out, as it will be the last practice before next Saturday's game.

GOLF.

The Examiner omitted to record the fact that at the matches played off on Monday afternoon by the Ladies' Golf Club, the consolation game was won by Miss Clementi.

SPRINTING.

At the driving park at three o'clock this afternoon Armstrong and Martin will have a 100 yards sprint. Both men are fast and it is expected the race will be a good one.

• • • •

Arthur Duffy, the Georgetown sprinter, is apparently not satisfied with having run 100 yards in 9 3-5 seconds, one-fifth faster than any other person. On several occasions recently he has unsuccessfully tried to clip a fraction from this mark. But now Duffy proposes to cover distance in better time, and to this end announces that he will lower the record at St. Louis next spring with the aid of a wind shield. His idea is to have a shield similar to those used by the harness horses who recently made new records paced by automobiles.

HOCKEY.

The Lindsay Post says that Mr. S. Ketchum will be on the hockey team of that town this season. If Mr. Ketchum proves of as much assistance to the Lindsay hockey seven as he was to the Athletic lacrosse team, they are to be congratulated on securing him.

• • • •

Belleville, as you all know, is talking very loud about their hockey team for this year. Well, from all reports they will not be much faster than last season. Peterborough will be stronger this year and so will Port Hope. The big trouble last year with Peterborough and Port Hope was that they had no system. Individually they were hard to beat, but of course that style of play never wins. Belleville had no shining stars with the exception of Marks, but when a Belleville man secured the puck they were all there to assist him and consequently scored goals. If Port Hope will settle down to some system there is no doubt that they will make a much better showing than last year.—Port Hope Guide.

TURF.

Roy Roy and Red Pat, the Stouffville horses, recently sold to Lindsay and Peterborough parties, won the .24 and .38 classes in straight heats from big fields at Napanee and incidentally emphasized the fact that that the driver cuts considerable figure in the racing game. Red Pat is one of the most erratic pacers that ever drew a bike, but with Geo. Powell up, he reeled off his heats in .29 1-4, .29 1-4, .29 1-2, ten seconds better than his record, without a skip, and Rob Roy stepped in .24 1-4, lowering his record 2 1-4 seconds.

LOU DILLON THE WINNER.

Memphis, Tenn., October 21. — What was expected to be one of the greatest harness horse contests in local history proved to be a very tame affair yesterday, when Lou Dillon gave Major Delmar a decisive beating in two straight heats in ordinary time. The two-minute trotters met in the second renewal of the Memphis gold cup. Ideal weather and track conditions prvailed, and 15,000 persons were in attendance, when the two champions driven by their owners. Messrs. Billings and Smathers, appeared on the track. Starter Newton gave the word "Go" at the first attempt, and Lou Dillon immediately forged to the front and opened up a gap of three lengths, which advantage she held to the end and winning in an easy jog. In the second heat Major Delmar broke badly at the first eighth pole, allowing his opponent to assume a lead of twenty lengths. Turning into the stretch Mr. Billings, realizing that he had the race at his mercy, pulled the mare up and won by eight lengths. Each heat was trotted in 2.04 3-4.—Montreal Herald.

A RURAL COMEDY IN REAL LIFE.

How Rural Reason Adjust Tangled Love Affairs.

A strange little incident occurred at the supper at Bethesda last Thursday evening, all over a young gentleman and lady friend from Baltimore who happened to be present. The lady referred to obtained to meet a number of friends during the evening, among them being a Port Hope gentleman. After conversing for a short time they went for a walk and the two-year-old from Baltimore didn't like it a little bit, and consequently made love to another fair one. When it was time to leave for home, "the man from Baltimore," informed his first love with a laugh, that he had another lady to share his vehicle and she would have to take "shanks' mare." But the Port Hope gentleman was on hand with the goods, and gave the young lady the big part of his buggy. But it was not all over then. The Baltimore man intended to follow very closely but when he went for his carriage, he discovered that some mean fellow had unhitched his horse and allowed it to wander homeward. At the time of writing, says the Port Hope Guide, we are unable to state whether he or his second love have reached the eastern burg or not. "He who laughs last laughs best."

ARE HARD TIMES COMING?

(Brantford Expositor.)

The United States papers are filled these days with predictions of approaching hard times, and even were there no occasion for trade depression the want of confidence thus created would be certain to bring it about.

As it is, the big trusts have been curtailing operations, and restricting their output, money is said to be tighter, and building operations are being suspended.

So far as Canada is concerned, there are at present no signs of coming adversity. Business is still active in every department, the crops have been good, immigration continues to flow in, and there is a prospect of many millions of money being expended upon railroad construction in the near future. Our farmers have a stronger hold on the British market than they ever had before, while our manufacturers are less dependent on the home market, and have built up a large foreign trade. The one thing we need fear would seem to be the slaughtering of American goods in this market, but even there we are comforted by the fact that our manufacturers were never as well able as now to stand competition of an unfair kind.

Scanning the horizon, Canadians will find little cause for anxiety or alarm, so far as the home situation is concerned, but a strong, confident note should be struck and maintained. It may, however, be necessary to place a wholesome restraint upon investments of a purely speculative character, and as to these the danger signals have been out for some time past.

THE LITTLE BOY'S PLEA.

—Published by request from Youth's Youth's Temperance Banner.

I'm only a little boy,
As everyone may see;
But still I'm old enough to know
That drink's not good for me.

I've joined the Band of Hope
And hope that you will too;
And if you'll come and help us
We'll find you work to do.

Most doctors in the land
Now with us all agree;
They're helping us both heart and hand
To set our country free.

Think what the Bible says
Against this cursed drink;
It says that wine's a mocker is
Oh! pause, Oh stay and think!

Think of the many deaths
Caused by the drink alone.
And think that everyone must stand
Before the Almighty Throne.

Perhaps you don't get drunk;
Perhaps you never will;
But while you "take a little"
You're going down the hill.

See yonder drunken man
Go reeling down the street;
He once just took a little,
But now can't keep his feet.

I'm only a little boy,
But I can do my part;
And what I do, I'm very sure
I'll do with all my heart.

I know a good thing when I see it. The Snowshoe Tobacco Tags are worth money, and as I want to get a valuable present for them, I will allow you in trade 50 cents per hundred for all you have, can get, or buy. Alive Charles LeGros.

PRESS INVASION OF NEW ONTARIO.

Faithful and Accurate Account of How the Canadian Press Association Reached New Liskeard—Picturesque Scenes by the Way.

(Special Correspondence.)

The annual excursion of the Canadian Press Association for the year 1903 began at 1.45 p.m. on Monday, 21st September, and closed at Toronto at 7 a.m on Sunday, Sept. 27. There were many stalwarts in the party, which, headed by H. J. Pettypiece, M.P.P., president, included some forty-five persons. Two-thirds of the newspaper blood on board the Grand Trunk Pullman, Sacramento, when the train pulled out of Union Station, varied from ripe stalwart to mellow middle experience to the energetic young. In the latter, the stalwarts renewed their youth, and caught again and again the bouquet of enthusiasm shed by the ardent zest of the youngsters. Of course, there were in the party the grey-headed and the bald who had never let go their hold of the champagne of life, and these with their effervescing spontaneity and ripe experiences prevented the hours at any stage of the game from becoming humdrum or tedious. There were others, old newspaper men, though comparatively young, who bore their physical years well, who balanced the party with their solid worth as judged by the standards of the successful man of the world, and there were not wanting men whose temperament was Admirable Crichton-like in its range. One or two there were who dabbled on the edge of the non-material, but the wonders of the trip and the great material resources of the part of the Province visited this year brought them down to earth again ere it was ended.

Composition of the Party.

In a word, the body of pressmen present on this occasion represented all sorts and conditions of men, an ideal aggregation of Joshuas and Calebs to spy out the promise held out to home-seekers in a portion of New Ontario. They brought to their work experience and talents which made a necessarily hurried investigation partake of the exhaustive.

The printed program of the journey begun at 1.45 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 21, showed the town of New Liskeard, situated on Wabis Bay, on the colonization road separating the townships of Dymond and Harris, in the electoral District of Nipissing, as the most northerly objective point of the trip. From Toronto to North Bay, via Barrie, Orillia, Gravenhurst, all well-known to the majority of summer travelers of Old Ontario the train proceeded on its way without ontoward event of note. Grim stubble fields, a belated field of stacked grain here and there, sawmills and timber of varying kinds attracted only such attention as was casual and not particular. They had been seen before, and were the common property of this country.

MAP OF THE PRESS TRIP, 1903.

Onward, the time was devoted to renewing old acquaintances of former press gatherings and getting acquainted with those who were taking their first educational tour with the pressmen. This was pleasant, but not at all conducive to sightseeing from the windows of the car. Reminiscences, too, formed a most enjoyable portion of this part of the journey, and in stories of by-gone press exploits many found the key to a better understanding of the present. Supper at Gravenhurst, where the train stopped for 20 minutes, was a welcome relief, for the party had settled down by this time to a seriousness that scarcely befitted so merry-hearted a party so early in the journey. Everybody was hungry, and the victuals were good. 'Nuf sed.

A ripple of interest was apparent at Muskoka wharf, and ended only when the iron horse fled away straight north in the mellowing shades of evening.

A Painter's Dream.

Story and song, song and story, with a rollicking chorus, chased the minutes as they flew, when suddenly, a shrill clarion cry, with a note of exultant delight, roused everybody into intense interest in the western sky. A sunset sky, just before Lake Nipissing was reached. There were men in the party who confessed to having no artist-soul in their composition, but the sight sobered them into a glad quietness as they gazed upon the indescribable painting of the master artist. The blending of the colors, the rich contrasts, the brilliant lighting, cannot be transferred to paper in writing, nor would even a Whistler dare put the colors on canvas.

car seats, and more than one former advocate of the sharp, staring line style admitted that there was a natural impressionism that was infinitely beautiful and which gave results superior in picture elements to the photographic images that are useful only as records. Both have their place, and like all other good things they inter-penetrate the spheres of each other until one scarcely knows where one begins and the other ends. The pressmen learned, each in his own way, useful lessons from this gorgeous sunset on Lake Nipissing, not the least of which is that it is not necessary to go abroad to study the fundamentals of artistic coloring.

End of the First Day.

'Twas a good thing to dream of that glimpse of nature's beauty, and North Bay was reached shortly after 9 o'clock. Part of the party slept in the Pullman in which they had traveled, and the others in the excellent hotels of North Bay. All breakfasted at the hotels in the morning, and at 8.30 a.m., Tuesday, Sept. 22, they left for a trip over the Ontario Government's new railway, the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway.

It was noticeable that the press party's interest had considerably deepened as its members essayed this journey. They were on distinctly new ground and felt it. Not only was the material side of modern life to be demonstrated, but a new idea was back of it all. A pioneer state-built railway. The thought led to energetic action, for in all newspaper men thought proceeds action consciously. Indeed, the activity manifested was of a pleasurably excitable nature, and eager faces were seen everywhere. If they all write their emotions preceding this inspection Ontario will have a symposium of railway literature unique in its annals. It would be valuable, too, as well-trained brains brought to bear upon the consideration of the material working out the idea behind it would insensibly generate new thought. The hand and the brain would be united in solving a modern problem of surpassing interest. The results, who can tell? But to the trip.

Over the Government Railway.

As one article of this series will be devoted entirely to this road, only the sight-seeing incidents of the trip will be here set down. The train was furnished by the Chief Engineer Mr W. B. Russell. It was drawn by Contractor Macdonell's Engine No 4, and consisted of mail and baggage car No. 1 of the T. & N. O. Railway, the Pullman Car Sacramento (the first to run over the line) and a flat car provided with seats so placed that unobstructed observation was possible with comfort. The train was in charge of Conductor J. Keaney, assisted by Brakeman John McKay.

The Chief Engineer Mr. W. B. Russell, Contractor's Manager J. Doheny, Sheriff Varin, Mayor Mackenzie Rev. Father Scollard, and other well-posted citizens of North Bay and District went along, and were piled with all kinds of questions by the inquiring scribes. They were, however, fully seized of the chief subject of interest, and for the first time in the trip the note-books of the party were in evidence, as it was felt that accuracy here is of the greatest value, for even trained memories sometimes prove treacherous in dealing with facts and figures.

A Serpentine Way.

The weather was glorious, and fittingly set off the autumn hues of the brilliant scenery along the road. Through deep cuttings in the granite, past construction camps, through smoke from some forest burning, the train went on its serpentine way, for the road is anything but straight. It ran at the rate of thirty miles an hour to Ballast Pit No. 1, or Four Mile Creek. Here a stop was made and the photographers of the party got to work for the first time on the trip. The men's camp, made up of tents, boards and tar-paper roofs, set in a warm little, sun-lit valley, was the first to yield its unique beauty to the lens and the sensitive plate, and then the concrete abutment of the bridge that is to be, when the present trestle work gives way to a permanent structure, the steps of which were covered with pressmen, was taken. Generally these temporary trestle bridges are filled in solidly, but in this case there is to be a span of steel girders instead.

Modern Methods.

The next stop—Ballast Pit, No. 2—some miles further on, was one of intense interest to the newspaper men. Here was seen at work the Bucyrus steam shovel, and later on the Ledgerwood unloader, by which a train of thirteen flat cars were filled with gravel and unloaded in three and a quarter minutes. This is a great saving in labor, as it would have taken 200 men the same time to do the work of unloading alone. No estimate was given of the time it would have taken them to do the work performed by the shovel in the three minutes it took to fill the thirteen flat cars. Grading and ballasting were witnessed by the party at various points, and finally the run ended at dinner time at Miller's Depot, or boarding camp.

Construction Men's Dinner.

The most enjoyable meal of the whole trip was here served in the dining room car of the construction camp. It was rough but clean, and the men' cooks knew their business from "masking" the tea to making the "plum duff." The menu was just what the men get, and consisted of pork and beans, pork boiled, cabbage, peas, pickles, potatoes that made one's mouth water in anticipation, pies, plum pudding, and the finest piece of cheese that the pressmen saw on the whole jaunt. Tea that was tea, and coffee galore washed down the substantial fare, which was excellently cooked throughout.

Trip Was 28 Miles.

Four miles beyond this point the track is laid, but as tracklaying was suspended for the day, the trip north ended at Moose Lake siding—28 miles north of North Bay. For the first fifteen miles the first lift of ballast had been laid, and the train ran at good speed and very smoothly. The remaining thirteen miles were over the unballasted rails and averaged 8 miles an hour. It was procarious work in some instances, but no accident occurred. A new experience, too, it was to most,—riding on rails that were up one side, down the other, a curious little pocket in front, up and down, seesawing the way along. But it was enjoyable and instructive, and seemed to impress facts upon the memories of all.

A Lonely Grave.

Just south of Moose Lake, to which the party walked from the siding a quarter of a mile down, was discovered the first and most lonely grave. It was that of a native of sunny Italy who had come to this free country to make his way. Surmounted by a rude wooden cross, it bore the inscription:

"Tassa Lipas, Yakke Miesi, Ku, 1903.
Ylistarosta, Su., 1881."

Reverently those who visited the grave at close quarters uncovered and perused the brief notice of life and death, and more than one wondered at the story of human hopes and fears that lay buried there. But newspaper men are at a wedding one minute and a funeral the next, at a political gathering of angry men and in a joyous picnic of happy youngsters the next, and in two minutes a couple of shots were heard and one of the party marched proudly past with a rare brace of partridge. Anon, others had scampered into the wild woods, and one more detailedly erudite than the others in the native flora of Canada was holding forth in learned terms of some native plant that grew in rankness in the virgin soil that so lightly covers the everlasting rocks which form the underpinning of this portion of the earth. Others, thinking of loved ones, stripped the birch bark in glorious varriegated stripes and made postal cards to be dispatched home on the return to North Bay.

"And still the wonder grew,
That one small head could carry all he knew."

Back to North Bay.

The return journey was begun at 2.30. All along the line glimpses of beauty presented themselves. Beyond the narrow line of clearing that extended on either side of the rails of the Government road was forest unbroken, except in patches where camp clearings had been made. Attention, so far as outward sight was concerned, was confined largely to the western side, for the sun's long mellow shafts of light made the scene of fairy land. The coloring was superb. The dark red granite was crowned with blood red maples, yellow poplars, crimson sumachs, pale green birches, and dark green spruces and balsams, with here and there a towering pine. But these were only side-lights, as it were, to the thoughts of the party, for reflection had now taken the place of actual observation.

No Farming Land Here.

There was no farming land to be seen anywhere. A layer of black leaf mould, and then the rock. What could the Government be thinking of to build a road through such a country? There were no signs of a local traffic to feed the line, once all the timber was off. Information from the well-posted officials supplied the answer, and reflection did the rest. The road is designed as an outlet to the settlers in the great clay belt 90 miles beyond. Formerly those back in the woods were served by a colonization road from McLean's Crossing to Lake Temiskaming 75 miles to where Haileybury now stands. Through the trackless forest, and, compared with the railway project, rough at that and long of travel. Of the railway: for 68 miles north of North Bay the grading has been done, 35 miles of steel has been laid, and six miles are ready for the steel south from new Liskeard. The actual work was begun in December last; it is expected that a train will reach New Liskeard from North Bay sometime before the close of 1904. That is the story of the pressmen's trip over the new Government line in a nutshell.

HINDOO CUSTOMS.

The Sword Plays a Prominent Part in Oaths and Marriages.

The sword plays many different roles in Hindoo manners and customs. There are certain warlike tribes among whom oaths taken over the sword are binding, while taken otherwise they are not. A similar sentiment prevails among some predatory classes of Europe, where oaths taken over their weapons of offense—a dagger, a pontard, a rapier—are considered binding. The idea with these classes seems to be that perjury committed after taking oaths over their weapons recoil; that they die by the weapon against which they perjure themselves.

In Berar, in India, women who are about to lead an irregular life marry a sword. This marriage in name, as an emblem of conjugal life, serves as a ray of consolation to them in the midst of their evil doings. In certain parts of India when a Hindoo is about to marry a third wife, which marrying is considered an ill omen, he marries a tree, for obviating the ill omen, before he marries the third lady.

In Kathiawar there is still the custom for rajput princes who are much married to marry other wives by means of a sword. They send over their sword to the bride's people. The bride is married to it with all the required pomp and splendor, the only difference being that the prince's sword becomes a substitute for him, the bridegroom. The legality of this marriage to a sword is indisputable. The bride married to it enters the rajput senana as a legally married wife.

The stomach's work is to provide the different parts of the body with the food and heat they need. If this is not done the body becomes starved and cold and weak.

Consequently if you are feeling useless you know that your stomach needs help.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets give the stomach the right kind of help. They digest the food and the stomach rights itself naturally. Then the body gets the food it needs, and energy and vigor return. H. Hutchison, Chatham, Ont., is one of the thousands who have proved that Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure Stomach Trouble of any stage. He says:

"I had suffered for a long period from Dyspepsia until a short time ago a friend brought me a box of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and from the very first I got relief.

"I keep them by me, and any time I feel my food is likely to disagree with me I just take one or two of them and feel no more effects of Indigestion."

Where the Hourglass Is Used.

Among things not generally known is the fact that the hourglass is universally used on board ships in the English navy when the log is heaved at night.

Every hour the boatswain or one of the boatswain's mates blows on his whistle a peculiar shrill note called the reel. The person in the watch to whom this duty is assigned then heaves the log, a small piece of wood with a sinker fitted in it, and at that moment the glass is turned. Though termed an hourglass generally, it is only a fourteen second glass really.

As the last grain runs out the log line is stopped with a jerk, which also loosens the lead sinker. The log floats up to the surface of the sea, the line is hauled in and an entry made in the book, which, from its containing this among other items of the daily and nightly events of the voyage, is called the log book.

Birth Statistics.

Recently compiled statistics show that the proportion of twins born as compared with other infants is one in eighty births. Of triplets there is only one instance in 6,400 and quadruplets are as one to 512,000, while the chances of a quintet are even more remote, the ratio being one in 40,960,000 births. A case is known of a woman who presented her husband with seven successive triplets.

Pandora Range

A VENTILATING OVEN THAT VENTILATES.

There is only one practical way of ventilating the oven in a range and that way has been adopted in the "Pandora"—is an actual working feature and not a mere talking point.

Fresh air is drawn from the outside through small vents into the oven and is quickly heated and disseminated, while the odors and cooking fumes escape through small vents into the smoke flues and up the chimney.

Result is that expensive, juicy roasts retain their rich, natural flavors and are entirely free from cooking odors and taints, to which the palate is so sensitive. Puddings, bread, etc., when baked, are always light fresh and free from taint.

In the production of the "Pandora" range you have all that scientific study, practical experience, skilled workmanship, and an immense and finely equipped plant combined, can produce.

THEIR GAME OF HEARTS

By Elsie Carmichael

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

"I am awfully sorry," he said meekly, but his eyes belied his words. "I really wouldn't have come if I had known I had to inflict myself on you in this way." He offered his arm, looking at her downcast, piquant little face with a world of pity in his eyes. "Don't take it so hard, dear," he whispered.

She raised her head and flashed him a defiant look. "You forget," she said icily. "Don't take advantage of our having to sit next one another through a long dinner to treat me so. I don't see what Mrs. Clarke was thinking of."

Don's eyes twinkled. "Well, really," he said, "I don't see that Mrs. Clarke can be blamed. How could she know that you had refused me last evening? If you don't want to talk to me you can talk to your other neighbor."

Nan looked at the fat, stupid old gentleman on her other side and made a little moue. "He is certainly the lesser of two evils," she said and turned her round white shoulder to Don.

The latter, with seeming eagerness, talked to a gay young widow on his other side, and Nan listened with wandering attention to the dissertation of the elderly gourmand on the delights of pate de foie gras.

The conversation between the widow and Don waxed most frivolous. Nan felt the angry tears coming to her eyes. It was not fair to treat her so. Never since she had known him had he deliberately turned his back on her. Every one would notice it. She hated that widow.

"Ah, that will be glorious!" cried the latter. "Will you come for me at 3, and may I really drive those grays of yours all the way out to the club? I long to feel the reins in my hands again. I haven't driven good horses for so long. Most people are afraid to let me try, but you know I can drive, don't you, Don? Do you remember long ago, in those good old days, how we used to go spinning out to the Country club and"— Then her voice dropped, and Nan heard no more.

Oh, if only Archie or Dick or Malcalm were next her, wouldn't she show Don how little she cared? But this stupid old Mr. Jones could hardly be induced to take his attention from his plate for a moment. She talked excitedly, the color mounted into her cheeks, and Don, who watched her surreptitiously, thought he had never seen her so charming. It was a bittersweet thing just to sit next her this way, even if she would not speak to him.

He listened only half mechanically to what Mrs. Wright was saying. His mind would wander back to that last evening when he had finished that delicious waltz with her and they had strolled into the conservatory. He could still hear the last strains of the music die away, sobbingly sweet. She was radiant in her filmy rose colored gown that he told her looked like a bit of sunset cloud. She had seemed happy and content until he had made the mistake of telling her he loved her, and then the whole radiant world was suddenly turned to cold gray tones, as when the evening colors in the sky fade into the twilight.

The hostess rose, and he stood back to let Nan pass. She had never a look for him, but chatted gayly with Madge Trelawney as they left the room. Then he threw himself back in his chair and smoked in silence, not listening to the talk about him.

When he strolled into the drawing room half an hour later Mrs. Clarke, who was near the door, held out a detaining hand. "I want you to take Nan into the library to play pingpong," she said.

"But perhaps she won't want to," objected Don. Mrs. Clarke looked at him shrewdly.

"Don't you think I know that you and Nan have quarreled?" she asked. "Am I blind? Be a good boy and make it up."

"I am willing enough to, Mrs. Clarke," he said so earnestly that his hostess felt as though he had taken her into his confidence and led him up to the low couch near the fire, where Nan was still talking to Madge Trelawney. The color had gone from her face now, and she looked tired and listless.

"Take Mr. Prentice into the library and make him play pingpong, Nan," begged Mrs. Clarke. "Things are going very dully tonight, and I want some one to start them up a bit."

Nan was surprised to find herself a moment later alone in the dimly lit library with Prentice. She had not intended to come. Now that she was there, however, she longed to sit down on the low seat before the flickering fire and have him tell her again how he loved her. If she could hear those words now she thought her answer would be different. He had taken her by surprise last night. He had taken her love too much for granted and hurt her pride. But all that was over. She dared not yield to the spell of the fire light. She picked up a racket and tried the delicate little celluloid ball on the table.

"Come on," she said. "We might as well play a set to please Mrs. Clarke."

They played a game absent mindedly. "Love one," he said when they had finished.

"But it isn't," pouted Nan. "It's no fun to play with you. You never keep score right. You won that game."

"Oh, did I?" he inquired. "I am surprised. You always win."

"What?" asked Nan scornfully. "What game do I ever win, Don? I am stupid at most games, and you know it."

"Oh, hearts," he said.

"But this isn't hearts!" she cried, willfully misunderstanding him. "It's pingpong, and it isn't love one."

"But it always is for me," he said. She went on playing and ignored the subject.

"I think this will probably be the last game we will have together for a long time," he said mournfully after they had played in silence for a few minutes.

Nan missed the ball. "Why?" she asked. The color left her face and then surged back again.

"I am going to start for South Africa next week," he said. "Some business interests call me there, and if all goes well I may decide to stay—forever."

Nan picked up the ball. "Oh!" she said after a moment. "South Africa must be—a—er—very interesting place, but rather—er—hot, is it not?"

"Yes," he said pensively. "It's a very unhealthy climate where I am going. Marsh fever, cholera—all those things kill people off rather fast."

He sent the ball back so wildly that it landed on top of the bookcase. "The game is mine," he said, throwing down his racket.

"But it isn't," she said. "I won it fairly and squarely."

Her lips were trembling and there were bright tears in her eyes as she went over to the fireplace and looked down into the leaping flames. There was something so pathetic and lonely about the little figure in the fire light that he went to her quickly.

"Please say the game is mine," he begged and held out his hands.

She swayed for a moment as though she would fall and then turned and put both her little hands in his.

"Well, yes," she said, smiling through her tears. "You have won, Don. Only please don't go to South Africa."

Modern Antiquities.

The quest for things antique has led to systematic forgery and imitation on the part of dealers. Paris is the great center of this deceitful industry, says the Nation. There has been discovered in the suburbs a thriving factory for the fabrication of Egyptian mummies, cases and all. These are shipped to Egypt and in due time return as properly antiquated discoveries.

A funny story is now current about a collector of mediaeval things. A certain clever workman in stone made to the order of a dealer in mediaeval antiquities a Venetian chimneypiece of the fifteenth century and received for his work some two or three thousand francs. The dealer shipped the chimneypiece to Italy and had it set up in a palace near Venice, bringing back to Paris photographs of the palace and of the chimneypiece in situ. By means of these photographs he aroused the interest of a rich collector, who sent his secretary to Venice to make sure that the photographs did not lie, and on his favorable report bought the thing for 50,000 francs. On the arrival of the article at his house in Paris he sent for some workmen to open the cases. One of them appeared to him to go about the work rather carelessly, and he remonstrated with the man, who answered: "Have no fear, sir. I know just how it needs to be opened, for I packed it when it left Paris."

Quick Lunch.

He was obviously tired, preoccupied and in a hurry. He lifted himself to one of the stools at the quick lunch counter and in answer to a query said:

"Bring me some plain beans, a piece of apple pie and a glass of milk."

In a little while the waitress reappeared.

"Pork and," she remarked impersonally, sliding the dishes before him.

"I asked for plain beans. I can't eat pork," he remonstrated.

"Oh!"

The dish was removed, and after stopping to chat a few minutes with a young man with a scarlet tie she returned. "Here's your beans," she remarked, and after a thoughtful moment, while still eying the scarlet tie, added:

"Let's see; you wanted pie—huckleberry pie?"

"No, apple."

"Oh!"

There was another longer wait, a still longer sojourn in the entrancing neighborhood of the scarlet tie. Then the pie was brought.

"That all?" she asked, feeling absently for a check.

"No; I ordered"—

"Oh, yes; coffee. Excuse me for forgetting."—New York Telegram.

Sea Monsters of Old.

The kraken was one of the sea monsters of old, and if all the stories told about its wondrous size and doings are true it overshadowed the serpent as much as the latter does the common garter snake. Dandelaus declares that this marine giant caused tidal waves by swallowing a goodly part of the waters of the ocean and then belching them out again. He also makes mention of the fact that its gigantic horny beak was often mistaken for mountain peaks suddenly shoved into sight by the internal convulsions of the earth. Bishop Pontoppidan, a truthful member of the Copenhagen royal academy, is much more conservative in his estimates of its size, giving it as his opinion that they were seldom found more than "the half of an Italian mile in length and not larger in diameter than the cathedral at The Hague."

He also says that its body was frequently mistaken by sailors for an island, "so that people landed upon it and were engulfed in a maelstrom of water when the creature sank to its hidden ocean den." Other authorities testify that its beak from the eyes to the point "was longer than the mainmast of a man-of-war."

A Troublesome Ant.

In the state of Colombia there is a large ant (Atta cephalotes) which causes a great deal of injury to plantations. It attacks and carries off indiscriminately all kinds of foliage, and no sort of vegetation seems to come amiss to it. The quantity of foliage carried off by these ants is immense. A naturalist recently investigated the uses to which the ants put this mass of vegetable matter, and he ascertained that they employ it to make hotbeds, upon which their eggs are deposited to be hatched by the heat produced by the fermentation of the leaves. The ants do not eat these portions for food, and the larvæ are fed upon a carefully selected diet. Once the brood is hatched, the ants clear away the hotbed, carrying out of their nest all the decomposed vegetable matter. This is thrown out in heaps apart, and in the large ant hills these heaps will contain bushels and upward.

Buying a Daughter.

A lady in costly mourning attire was walking in a street in Vienna the other day when she saw a beggar woman with three children, one of them a girl of two, sitting at the foot of a monument. She sent a street porter to ask if she would give up the girl. The woman nodded, whereupon the lady in black walked up to her, gave her some bank notes and took the child to a store. Half an hour later she emerged with the same child elegantly dressed, hailed a cab and drove away.

Ancient Head Coverings.

The hat is simply a variation of and no doubt an improvement upon the ancient coverings for the head, no matter what their shape or material. Comment has been made because some noted paintings of Scriptural and oriental life do not depict the headdresses of the males. This is most noticeable in paintings of ancient Syrian life, for no doubt the Syrians wore then, as now, a turban, thick, light and colorless, to protect them from the burning sun.

FOOLED ALL FRANCE.

Impostor Made Paris Believe He Was Ambassador From Persia.

Toward the end of the year 1714 a certain Mehemet Rizabecq, who called himself ambassador of the king of Persia, and the bearer of his commands, disembarked at Marseilles.

He was received at two leagues from Paris by the Baron de Breteuil, usher of ambassadors, and the Marshal de Matignon. On the 24th of January, 1715, he made his solemn entry into the capital with great pomp.

He declined the royal carriages generally used on such occasions and entered on horseback, preceded by the finest horses of the king's stables, superbly caparisoned and accompanied by trumpets and bands of music.

The ambassador, richly arrayed in the Persian costume, was attended by a numerous train of domestics and preceded by a herald bearing the Persian standard. The presents which he offered to the king were very inconsiderable.

After passing a short time in France, during which he concluded, in the name of his pretended master, a treaty of alliance with Louis XIV., he sailed from Sweden and Denmark and was never heard of later.

Rizabecq, according to the "Memoirs of the Reign of Louis XIV.," was a Portuguese who had never seen the prince he represented nor even visited a single province of Persia. The government paid the expenses of his excellency, which amounted to 1,000 livres a day.

A Matter Gone Wrong.

King Francis I. of France, who reigned in the middle of the sixteenth century, dressed himself elaborately for the battle of Pavia, which he expected to win and thereby to become the master of Italy. An old chronicle says: "The king of France in his armor went about from squadron to squadron, and he wore over his mail a surcoat of brocade and brown velvet checker wise, with many F's embroidered thereon in velvet on the brocade and in brocade on the velvet and with cords of gold and brown silk. On his helmet he wore a great yellow and brown plume, the feathers drooping down to the horse's flanks, and from the midst of them rose a brown pennon with a red salamander, having above it a great gilt F and around it the words, 'This time and no more.' This motto he bore because he thought on that day certainly to make himself lord of Italy." However, he lost the battle and was taken prisoner.

Curiosities of Digestion.

An Augusta gentleman states that he once cured a gastric trouble by eating at supper a plentiful supply of cucumbers and cold blackberry dumpling, and yet in his case nothing would have seemed more pernicious.

Proctor, the astronomer, suffered from excruciating headaches. He was satisfied that they came from some error of diet, and so he dropped from his bill of fare one thing after another until he concluded that nothing else was left for experimentation. He had forgotten one article, however. It was butter. He abandoned that and ate everything else and never suffered from headaches again to his dying day. Man is wonderfully made, and so is the stomach. Remedies for dyspepsia are numerous. You may pay your money and take your choice.

An Odd Picture.

One of the strangest sights I ever saw in a wild country was a little minister garbed in solemn black, white "dog" collar, buttonless vest and stiff black straw hat. The dominie was standing in a leaky boat in the midst of a primeval woods, fishing the boiling waters of a mountain torrent. At his back a cataract roared and pounded the rocks, churning the water to white suds. Above him the eternal snow glistened on the mountains, and but a few yards away a gaunt cinnamon bear was quietly nosing among the driftwood.—Dan Beard in World's Work.

Sugar For Double Duty.

A manufacturer in the west of England, anxious that his hands should keep Christmas in a proper spirit, told them that if they went to church on that day they should receive their wages just the same as if they had been at work. Shortly after the address a deputation of solemn faced employees waited upon their chief. "We're willin' to attend church," said the spokesman, "and if ye can see yer way to payin' us overtime we're willin' to attend the Methodist chapel in the evenin'."

The Beginning of Trouble.

A five-year-old son of a family the other day stood watching his baby brother, who was making a great noise over having his face washed. The five-year-old lost his patience and, stamping his tiny foot, said: "You think you have lots of trouble, but you don't know anything about it. Wait till you are big enough to get a licking. Then you'll see. Won't he, mamma?"

THE FIRST STEP

Of the child is an event in the mother's life. How proud she feels when the attempt to walk is begun so early as to evidence childish courage and sturdy strength. Such pride should be enjoyed by every mother. But it often happens that the child is timid, weak and deficient in vitality, and clings to the mother's arms with no desire to walk or play.

Mothers should learn that to have strong children they must themselves be strong, for the child's strength is the gift of the mother.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription by expectant mothers gives them health and strength to give their children. It nourishes the nerves, strengthens the body and gives great muscular strength and elasticity, so that the baby's advent is practically painless.

"I have been using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and can say it is just what you advertise it to be, and can cheerfully recommend it," writes Mrs. Victor J. Hadin, of Leonardville, Riley Co., Kansas. "I began taking it just two months before baby came and was greatly benefited by its use. The doctor who attended me said I did about as well as any one he had seen (as I was sick only about three hours), and also that your 'Favorite Prescription' was 'the one patent medicine' which he did have faith in.

"We now have a darling baby boy, strong and healthy, who weighed nine pounds when born (July 8th). During this month he has gained three and one-half pounds."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

QUOTATIONS ON THE WALL STREET MARKET.

The Market Remained About at Opening Prices.

The Fluctuations of the Leading Stocks —Market Letters.

Notwithstanding the fact that the London market came about 1-2 below parity, the Wall street market opened rather firm this morning and made fractional advances during the first hour. However the market soon fell into a state of dullness and the fluctuations were very narrow. There was little doing all morning and during the first hour of the afternoon the market sold off somewhat. Sales to noon were 240,300.

Messrs. McMillan & Maguire this afternoon received the following dispatch:—

New York, Oct. 22.—Market became very quiet at mid-day. No stocks pressing anywhere, but traders were not much inclined to bid up when they found so little disposition among public to follow. Good inquiry for bonds, but commission houses for most part reported customers not speculating. General disposition wait for C. P. decision. It is said the Moores and their friends are active in market again and have been devoting some attention to Rock Island issues. Recent deliveries of Atchison would indicate some further purchases there. Jacquelines selling of St. Paul looked good deal more like Standard Oil operations than J. M. Shaw and Company's buying. Some Chicago selling orders in Steel Commmon and Preferred.

Hunting Season.

The Grand Trunk Railway has issued a very handsome illustrated pamphlet, entitled "Haunts of Fish and Game," giving information regarding season for shooting deer, moose, reindeer, caribou, etc., in the "Highlands of Ontario," and at other points along the line of the Grand Trunk. Copies of the same will be furnished on application at Grand Trunk ticket offices or to J. D. McDonald, District Passenger Agent, Toronto. d68

PITTSBURG BANK CLOSED.

Held Upon Its Stock Responsible For the Crash.

Pittsburg, Oct. 22.—The doors of the Federal National Bank were not opened for business yesterday morning. The following notice was posted in explanation:

"Closed by the authority of the Comptroller of the Currency. John B. Cunningham, Receiver."

Some such action as this has been within the possibilities for the past two days, forecasted by the determined raid made upon the institution's stock on the Pittsburg Stock Exchange.

Perhaps Fatally Burned.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Oct. 22.—As the result of an accident yesterday afternoon, Elwin, the little 3-year-old son of William McMillan, residing near the dock, was so badly burned that his recovery is very doubtful. The little fellow was playing around a bonfire, when his clothing took fire.

Fell From a Tree.

Belleville, Oct. 22.—Charles Priory of Sidney Crossing, fell from an apple tree, through the breaking of a branch, and now lies in a precarious condition. But slight hopes are entertained for his recovery. His spine was injured.

NOW FREE TO SPEAK.

Chamberlain Intimates That His Campaign Has Big Backing.

London, Oct. 22.—(C.A.P.)—There was an enormous crowd at Tynemouth yesterday to greet Mr. Chamberlain. On rising to speak they sang "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Mr. Chamberlain declared that he had the King's permission to explain to the public why he left the Cabinet. He had devoted himself to the question of preferential tariffs with the colonies in order to make us self-sufficient, to make the British race throughout the world self-supporting, and independent of foreign supplies or assistance.

The ex-Colonial Secretary dwelt lengthily on the relations between Great Britain and her colonies, saying that what he asked for was a mandate from the people to negotiate with the colonies. Under no circumstances did he wish to interfere with the commercial freedom of the colonies any more than he had let them interfere with Great Britain's freedom.

Coalition in Norway.

Christiania, Norway, Oct. 22.—The Cabinet presided over by Otto Blehr has resigned, in consequence of a Parliamentary committee's decision in favor of the Opposition, in a disputed election in Nadensaas district, whereby the Opposition gained four seats. A coalition Cabinet made up of Conservatives and Moderate Liberals will be formed.

Attempt at Incendiarism Frustrated.

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—A deliberate attempt was frustrated by timely discovery at Ridoauville, a suburb of Ottawa, Tuesday night. Coal oil and shavings were scattered through five cottages belonging to Mrs. Bonsfield, wife of an Anglican clergyman. The fire was discovered in time to save four of the cottages.

When you want a physic that is mild and gentle, easy to take and certain to act, always use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. For sale by all druggists.

Death of Mr. Alex. Manning.

Toronto, Oct. 21.—News of the death of Alexander Manning came as a shock to many citizens yesterday. About a week ago Mr. Manning was seized with a slight stroke of paralysis, which was responsible for quickening his demise. His immediate kin that survive to mourn his loss are his son, Percy Alexander, and daughter, Mrs. Hume Blake. He was in his 85th year. The late Mr. Manning for two terms occupied the Mayor's chair, and he was a large owner of real estate in the city. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, in May 11, 1819.

The Rule Wobbled.

Whifers—See here, Bliffers! You told me the way to win a girl was to devote myself to her mother.

Bliffers—Yes, sirree, that will do it every—

Whifers—Huh! I wanted to win Miss Beauti, and I took your advice and devoted myself to Mrs. Beauti, and now the old lady, who is a widow, wants to marry me herself.

He Had Been Helped Once.

Two Turks were at a French banquet. Toward the end of the feast a Frenchman selected a toothpick from the tray near him and politely passed the tray on to his neighbor, who, however, peremptorily declined the offer, exclaiming:

"No, thank you; I have already eaten two of the accursed things."

Poor Auntie!

Enfant Terrible—And did they go into the ark two by two?

Mamma—Yes, dearest.

Enfant Terrible—Well, who went with auntie?

THE ALASKA AWARD

Hon. Mr. Sifton Sends Official Precis to the Premier.

SIR WILFRID READ LETTER.

Members Studied the Character of the Boundaries of the Award From Two Maps Spread Before Them by the Prime Minister—Great Jubilation Over the Award at Washington—President's Opinion.

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—In the House yesterday morning Sir Wilfrid Laurier read the following letter, received Tuesday from Mr. Sifton, regarding the Alaskan boundary decision, a similar one having been received subsequently by His Excellency from the Colonial Office:

"London, Oct. 20.—To Laurier, Ottawa.—Award signed to-day by Chief Justice and Commissioners Root, Lodge and Turner, being under treaty binding majority. Line commences at Cape Muzon, goes directly to southern entrance of channel between Wales and Sitkian Islands, proceeding northward, between said islands, to Portland Channel, thence along the middle of Portland Channel to its head; from there line formed by going from peak to peak of mountains, distance from tidal water varying from ten to thirty miles, speaking generally. When opposite Thomas Bay, line stops undefined from there to point about fifteen miles north of head of Taku Inlet; thence follows summits peaks of mountains about northwestward to White Pass; follows summits of White and Chilcoot Passes, thence by peaks of mountains to Mount Fairweather, passes close to police post situated near Klehini River. In this course the line will be from eight to twenty miles north of the provisional boundary line, from Fairweather a short distance northward, and then on a fairly direct course to the rear of Yakutat Bay, thence from peak to peak by somewhat circuitous route to Mount Elias. Marked map follows to-morrow.

(Signed) "Sifton."

Members Studied the Maps.

"This telegram," said Sir Wilfrid, "would not give much information as to the character of the boundaries of the award, but I have here two maps which will give a good outline of them."

Sir Wilfrid then spread two extensive plans upon the table, and the members of both sides of the House gathered around them to study the particulars of the award.

AMERICAN TITLE EXTENDED.

Over Boundary Fixed by the Hay-Pauncefote Modus Vivendi.

Washington, Oct. 22.—The impression prevailed at the United States Department yesterday that all the details of the Alaskan Boundary Commission's decision will not be known until the mails bring copies of the maps and other documents actually laid before the commission. There is a slight gap in the outline description of the boundary and northern portion which will probably be filled in when the full manuscript is received.

Inspection of the charts here add to the satisfaction of the officials, particularly as the commission actually extended the American title over a large territory north of Klehini River, to the boundary line claimed by Secretary Evarts, a quarter of a century ago, instead of limiting it to the boundary fixed by the Hay-Pauncefote modus vivendi. The American State Department intends to put the work of surveying the boundary in the hands of the Coast Survey.

President on Decision.

President Roosevelt gave a special reception at the White House last night to the members of the Alfred Mosely English Educational Commission.

The President referred to the Alaskan boundary decision, expressing the conviction that the fact that two nations could meet together and decide disputed points on the basis of justice and equity marked a most decided advantage in civilization.

Praise For Jette.

London, Oct. 22.—The Pall Mall Gazette concludes a short sketch of the career of Sir Louis Jette with these remarks: "The Dominion case could not be in more competent hands, and if he failed to score a win it is pretty certain that nobody else could have been more successful."

No Effect on Trade.

Montreal, Oct. 22.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, who was asked if the Alaska boundary award would have any effect on the Canadian Pacific coast trade, said that it would not, so long as the trade kept up between a Canadian and an American port, such as Vancouver and Skagway. In trading between these ports the coasting laws would not permit of them calling at an intermediate port.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

MUSEUM AT STEPNEY

MUNICIPAL SCHOOL OF SCIENCE IN LONDON'S FAR EAST.

Only Institution of the Kind in the World's Metropolis—Maintained by the Borough Council—Specimens Stuffed and Mounted on the Premises—Object Lessons Are Given to Old and Young.

Science has established a flourishing outpost in London's Far East in the shape of a municipal museum where school classes pay visits, and object lessons are given to young and old alike. The Stepney museum is said to be the only institution of its kind in the metropolis, and it is maintained by the borough council. There is a good collection of natural history exhibits, particularly birds, many of the specimens having been stuffed and mounted on the premises. There are for example, herons, owls, sea birds, puffins from Ireland and darters from Australia. Each group has its skeleton to shew the structure. Entomologists find a large collection of moths, butterflies and beetles, and there is a nest of yellow ants in perpetual motion under glass. The study of geology and mineralogy is encouraged by numerous examples of stone and metals from the bowels of the earth, such as would have delighted the eye of Hugh Miller, to say nothing of shells and corals from the "vasty deep." An accurate knowledge of the different trees to be seen in London may be obtained from stands where the leaves and bark of the oak, elm, ash, sycamore, &c., are displayed and described, and a practical lesson in botany is furnished by a small collection of wild flowers and plants, which forms one of the latest additions to the museum. In connection with the institution the borough council has set up beehives in St.

INTERIOR OF THE MUSEUM.

Besides spears, arrows, and other savage weapons the museum contains some curious objects of antiquarian interest, chiefly associated with the ancient liberty of Norton Folgate. A dole or alms box of the year 1600 bears this quaint motto in old English My son, defraud not the poor of his alms, and turn not away thine eyes from him that hath need. Let not thy hand be stretched out to relieve, and shut when thou shouldst give." There is a Welsh cradle in oak of the reign of James I., and an oak linen chest, date 1556, also from Wales, that recalls the legend of Ginevra.

From a book kept at a museum it appears that classes from all the schools in the district visit the institution every week in batches of from 35 to 40 at a time. Lectures are given on Wednesdays, chiefly in natural history subjects, and are well attended. The museum, which is situated in Whitechapel High-street, is open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Saturdays, 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Sundays and bank holidays, and 12 midday till 10 p.m. during the week.

Japanese Brotherhoods.

Strange associations are numerous in Japan. Among the most curious are the "Fall Together Society," the "Pauper Brotherhood," the "Society of Protesters," and the "Seaweed Society," the members of the last community wearing nothing but the most tattered garments. More curious still is the "Society of Self-Annihilation," formed, apparently, by discontented nobles infected by Nihilistic doctrines. The members of this society are bound to possess no private capital, they must look to nothing but their own right arm to support and protect them, and they must be in session every day during the year, their object being to say what they please, eat and drink what they like, sleep when so disposed and concern themselves about nothing which does not affect themselves personally.

Privileged.

"Dear me," said the good looking female visitor to the superintendent of the lunatic asylum, "what a vicious look that woman has we just passed in the corridor! Is she dangerous?"

"Yes, at times," replied the superintendent evasively.

"But why do you allow her such freedom?"

"Can't help it."

"But isn't she an inmate and under your control?"

"No. She is not under my control. She's my wife."

Household Work in Norway.

Girls in Norway must know how to sew, knit and bake before their guardians will permit them to have beaux. Some of them are so eager to acquire these useful accomplishments that they are learned before they can read and write. In this country, in some families, household duties are shunned by girls; they are taught to pound the piano, to sing and chatter French. In many instances they marry fellows too poor to even hire pianos, and too ignorant to speak good English.

PUBLICATION OF THE TREATY NEGOTIATIONS.

The Correspondence Shows Where Canada Objected.

Dominion Objected to American Appointments to the Alaska Commission, and Made it Plain That U. S. Commissioners Were not Impartial Jurists.

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—The latest official contribution to the literature of the Alaska boundary award was made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday, when he tabled in the House the correspondence between London, Washington and Ottawa leading up to the reference of the boundary dispute to the late tribunal. The preliminary correspondence opens with a message dated London, Oct. 31, 1902, from Mr. Chamberlain, asking Canada's consent to a tribunal, the members of which should merely record their reasoned opinions, to which the Canadian Government agreed on condition that the reference to the tribunal should include all aspects of the question. When, however, the draft treaty submitted by the American Government was examined by the British Ambassador at Washington, it was found that article was so worded as to exclude the Canadian contention that the boundary line should follow the crest of the mountains parallel to the coast, but, so as to include bays, ports and inlets. To this he objected, and United States Secretary Hay, on Dec. 19, consented to a modification by which the Canadian contention could be considered. Canada was asked to consent to the new draft, and in a despatch dated June 12, 1903, Lord Minto, cabled the British Ambassador at Washington, Sir Michael Herbert, that the Canadian Government was satisfied with the question to be submitted, but hoped that before asserting to the treaty, another effort should be made to have the questions to be adjudicated upon submitted, either to a board of arbitration composed in part of independent jurists not subjects of either state (as proposed in November, 1901), or to The Hague tribunal.

United States Wouldn't Listen.

The proposal of Sir Michael Herbert to the Americans was a tribunal composed of three judges of the United States Supreme Court, with the Lord Chief Justice of England, the Chief Justice of Canada and judicial High Court of Great Britain as members. But neither to this nor to the Canadian suggestion would the United States Secretary of State listen. He declared that "the form of arbitration proposed (six impartial jurists of repute, three to be appointed by the United States and three by Great Britain), was the only one acceptable to the President, and thus a treaty involving submission of the question to foreign arbitration would stand no chance of ratification by the United States Senate."

This decision of the United States Secretary was communicated to the Canadian Government in a despatch to Lord Minto from Mr. Chamberlain, dated Jan. 19, in which he states: "I trust that your responsible advisers will now agree to Sir Michael Herbert's being instructed to sign the draft treaty," adding that he wished for a reply to the proposal of Jan 12, that the Lord Chief Justice of England and the Chief Justice of Canada be appointed British members of the tribunal. Lord Minto cabled next day the reply that the Canadian Government thought it promature to adopt any final arrangement as to the composition of the tribunal.

On Feb. 18 Mr. Chamberlain wired to Ottawa that the President of the United States had decided to appoint Mr. Root, Secretary of State for War, and Senators Lodge and Turner, as American members of the boundary commission, and that he would be glad to have the views of the Canadian Government as to the British commission.

Canada Wanted Jurists.

Following this is the message from Lord Minto to the Colonial Office dated Feb. 21: "Supplementing my last despatch, my Ministers call attention to the fact that they agreed to a committee of six members on the stipulation that members of the said court would be impartial jurists, and in the hope that judges of the highest courts in the United States would be appointed as American commissioners, my Ministers also agreeing that British commissioners should be judges of the highest standing.

"My Ministers most strongly represent that the consideration having been material in causing their assent to the treaty, should be made good, otherwise the ground upon which they based their assent would be changed, and it is feared the whole situation would require to be reconsidered.

"My Ministers would be ready to implement their part of the understanding as to the composition of the British side of the commission, but do not think it advisable to submit their views until the question raised about American commission is satisfactorily disposed of."

The reply to this was that of a despatch from Lord Onslow, dated London, Feb. 27, to the Governor-General at Ottawa, reading:

"With reference to your telegrams, dated the 19th and 21st of February, the selection of the American members of the tribunal has been the source of as much surprise to His Majesty's Government as to your Ministers. Situation is full of difficulty, and His Majesty's Government earnestly desire to have concurrence of your Ministers in dealing with it.

"It seems certain to His Majesty's Government that it would be useless to press the United States Government to withdraw names put forward, and arguments relative to the fitness of the American representatives, however convincing, can have no practical results.

Between Two Stools.

"His Majesty's Government have, therefore, to choose between breaking off negotiations altogether or accepting nominations and appointing in their colleagues representatives who will meet the altered circumstances of the case. They would regard the first alternative as a grave misfortune to the interests of Canada, and would prefer that enquiry should proceed in confident hope that Canadian or British interests would not be prejudiced thereby, as even in the event of failure much important information upon controversial points would be collected and placed before the public, and reasonable settlement at some future time thereby facilitated.

"His Majesty's Government earnestly hope that their consideration may be carefully weighed by your Ministers, and that they will favor His Majesty's Government, if they agree with the opinion stated above, with an expression of their views as to the most advantageous composition of the British said of the tribunal."

Cast Shadows Before.

The answer to this from Lord Minto was sent to the Colonial Office on the same day on which word was received from Washington of the appointment of Messrs. Root, Lodge and Turner as the United States commissioners, the reply being as follows, under date of March 6:

"Referring to your despatch of 27th February, my Ministers regard the situation with much anxiety. They desire to emphasize the fact that their assent to a treaty which provided for the creation of a tribunal is composed as not to insure finality, was obtained on the stipulation in the treaty that the members of the court would be impartial jurists of repute. Their doubts as to the effectiveness of the contemplated arrangement as a means of settlement were in some degree modified by the assurance that the members of the tribunal would approach the subject with unbiased minds, and that judicial interpretation of the treaty of 1825 would be obtained. The appointment to the tribunal by the United States Government of gentlemen who are not judges and whose known views leave no room for expectation of a judicial consideration of the question, changes the whole situation. If the whole question were now open to be dealt with entirely from the point of view of Canadian interests, my Ministers would hesitate to advise any further participation in the proceedings.

Reserved Right to Explain.

"My Ministers have observed from the public press and have also been officially informed that while the matter is still under consideration, the treaty has been confirmed by His Majesty's Government, and an exchange of ratifications has already taken place at Washington. It is presumed that this fact precludes further discussion, and my Ministers will therefore proceed to do whatever is necessary on this point to make good the engagements of His Majesty's Government, but they must reserve the right to submit to the Canadian Parliament the whole correspondence or such statement of the case as will fully explain the whole matter, and especially the manner in which the assent of Canada was obtained.

No Justification For Change.

"My Ministers do not agree with the suggestion that the altered circumstances justify a departure, on the British side, from the disposition previously manifested respecting the composition of the tribunal. If members of the tribunal are to be appointed by His Majesty's Government, my Ministers are of opinion that only judges of the higher courts, who, in the best sense of the word, would be impartial jurists of repute should be chosen."

The ratifications of the treaty of arbitration were exchanged on March 8.

The remainder of the correspondence relates to the appointment of the British members of the tribunal and the counsel. Sir Louis Jette and the late Judge Armour were named at first as commissioners, but subsequently A. B. Aylesworth was named as Sir Louis Jette's colleague with Lord Alverstone. Edward Blake was the first counsel named by Canada, but he subsequently declined to take up the case, and his place was filled by the appointment of English counsel.

SENATE AND COMMONS CONFER.

Three Meetings and One Senate Amendment Concurred In.

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—Three conferences of representatives of both Houses of Parliament was held in room eight of the Senate last night. The Commoners and Senators are styled for the occasion "managers." The "managers" for the Commons were Sir William Mulock, Hon. W. S. Fielding, Hon. Chas. Fitzpatrick, Messrs. Blair, Emmerson, R. L. Borden, E. F. Clarke and F. D. Monk.

Those for the Senate were Hon. R. W. Scott, Sir. Mackenzie Bowell, Senators McMullen, Belque, David and Beliouchervilie.

The occasion of the conference was a disagreement between the two House over amendments to the railway consolidation act, affecting chiefly municipal and Provincial rights.

It was found impossible to arrive at any definite result, as at the first two meetings discussion is prohibited, and the proceedings confined to the exchange of written papers. The "managers" then procured permission to have an open meeting, where discussion could be had.

An Amendment Accepted.

The last conference terminated at 12.45 and Sir Mackenzie Bowell announced that an agreement had been reached in regard to the crossings of or junction with Dominion lines by other railways. The Commons had agreed to accept an amendment reading: "All the provisions of this act relating to railway crossings and junctions, through traffic, offences, penalties and statistics, shall apply to all persons, companies and railways otherwise within the legislative authority of Parliament or not."

As to the matter of the right of appeal, Sir MacKenzie said that a difference of opinion still existed and the discussion would be resumed today.

Prorogation on Saturday.

At adjournment of the Commons at 1 o'clock this morning the Minister of Finance informed the House that prorogation would take place on Saturday. That will be the 155th working day, extending over a period of seven and a half months. The business is all but finished, and few members were left after last night's trains had departed. The Quebec bridge resolutions were carried yesterday unanimously, no serious criticism being offered. A number of other measures were put through, and some time was spent in concurring in the reports of the Committee of Supply. All business would have been concluded last night, except for the deadlock with the Senate, which necessitated three conferences last evening, during which the House suspended business and the members indulged in playing with the mace, and in other ways revenging themselves for the mediaeval methods of the meetings with the Upper House.

CARRIED CONVICTION TO ALL.

Hon. Geo. W. Ross Charmed His Hearers at Gravenhurst.

Gravenhurst, Oct. 23.—A welcome which must have added greatly to the confidence of the Liberal party, as to the outcome of the bye-election as to the outcome of the bye-election in Muskoka was given to Premier Ross and Dr. J. W. Hart, the candidate, last night. The large town hall, which was tastefully decorated with banners bearing phrases such as "Ross and Progress," "Hart for Muskoka," was filled with an audience which distinguished itself both for its careful attention and its enthusiasm.

Mr. Hart is not so well acquainted in the south end of the riding as in the north, but it is safe to say that his appearance here last night left in the minds of his hearers a confidence in his ability to represent them successfully and vigorously in the Legislature.

Premier Ross was in a very happy mood, and not only charmed his hearers, but presented to them so strong and incontrovertible an argument in favor of the Liberal record as to carry conviction to all minds. He devoted much of his time to answering a number of arguments which have been prominently used by the Conservative campaigners against them of late, and in his concluding remarks outlined the policy of the Government in regard to temperance legislation.

Health of the Province.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—The last monthly report given by the Provincial Board of Health was issued on Wednesday. It gives the total number of deaths from all causes during the past month as 2,028, as compared with 1,951 for the corresponding month of last year. The deaths from contagious diseases during September were: Scarlet fever, 11; diphtheria, 25; whooping cough, 9; typhoid fever, 52; tuberculosis, 173.

AN UNEDIFYING SPECTACLE.

The affidavit of Mr. Crossin, which appears elsewhere, only serves to deepen the colours which were dark enough already. Those who have sent Mr. Gamey forth as a missionary of Conservatism have assumed a heavy responsibility. The Globe is not charged with the task of preserving the character of the Conservative party, but it must be said in all sincerity that it would be astonished if the great majority of that party could be found to approve of what is being done in its name in the constituency of Muskoka. For many days past Mr. Gamey has been addressing meetings there, at which the chief attraction has been unmeasured vilification of the Judges who heard his charges and delivered judgment on them. All the circumstances seem to point to the conclusion that this is being done with the approval of the leaders of the Conservative party.

It becomes necessary once more, therefore, to point out the character of the man who utters his slanders against the Chancellor of Ontario, a gentleman with an unsullied record on the Bench of Ontario for the past twenty-two years, and the Chief Justice of the King's Bench, who for sixteen years has occupied a judicial seat in that court. Those who are backing Mr. Gamey in his campaign of slander cannot pretend that they are ignorant of his character. However prejudice may misjudge the question of Mr. Stratton's connection with the member for Manitoulin, there is no hypothesis which will permit the most inveterate partisan to believe that Mr. Gamey is anything else but the tortuous and mendacious adventurer which the evidence proves him to be. We presume that the most favourable picture that we could get of him is that which he gives himself, and that shows the high-souled gentleman who was seeking to entrap the Provincial Secretary, using the $1,500, which, he says, was the proof of guilt, in the regular course of his business. Unfortunately for him, however, he cannot escape even with this degree of turpitude.

He found that certain entries in Mr. Crossin's books and in the bank book were not easy to reconcile with his statements. The latter he could not alter, so he determined to make the books agree with his testimony. He first attempted to browbeat Mr. Crossin into believing that it was possible that both he and the bank clerk had entered the wrong date in the cash book and bank book respectively. When Mr. Crossin refused to credit the utterly incredible, the political desperado, who has been conducting the Opposition campaign in Muskoka, took another way of reaching his ends. When Mr. Crossin next saw the entries in the cash book, the date had been altered from September 11th to August 21st, and altered so clumsily as to be quite apparent, while the entry "$900" was blotted over. Mr. Crossin showed this to one of the lawyers representing Mr. Gamey in the case, and that gentleman's remark may be found in the affidavit. It is quite evident that the picturesque personage at present stumping Muskoka was not wholly pleased with the clumsy alterations in Mr. Crossin's cash book so he appears to have determined at length that the most complete job would be to tear the page out. The tampering with the deposit slips was still necessary in his opinion to completely cover up his trail. Just at this point the seriousness of these felonious doings appears to have dawned on him. At all events, his nerve deserted him, and there was the sensational flight to Buffalo. When he was induced to return and face the Commission again he had the opportunity to explain his tampering with the deposit slips in the witness box, but he refused to do so on the ground that a criminal charge was to be laid against him.

This is the personage whom the Opposition has chosen to travel through Muskoka, slandering two of the most distinguished and highly-respected members of the judiciary of the province. It is inconceivable that a gentleman of Mr. Whitney's character would be a party to conduct which is not only shockingly indecent, but is not even expedient. The members of the Legislature on both sides are all in public life together. Surely they are concerned that the medium in which they move should not be befouled by the presence of a fellow of this stamp. Let the Opposition think what it chooses of Mr. Stratton's innocence or guilt, but it knows what this man Gamey is, and it should not defile the record of a great historic party, and the public life of the province, by countenancing the blatant exhibition of as pitiful a sample of moral perversity as ever the slimy depths of the political ocean heaved to the surface. —Globe.

PROFESSION VS. PRACTICE.

In the last provincial elections, Mr. Miscampbell, Conservative, was elected for Sault Ste. Marie by a majority of 198. It was found, however, that this majority was secured by devious methods, and that corrupt practices prevailed to an extent which disentitled him to any benefit from that clause in the act respecting corrupt practices which provides that such must have prevailed to an extent sufficient to affect the result of the election. Mr. Justice Osler, who has never been suspected of any leaning toward the Liberal party, in delivering judgment for the court of appeal in this matter, said:

In the result, the election ought, in my opinion, to be set aside. The case is not one in which the saving clause, section 172 of the Election Act, can properly be acted on. I have in former cases stated the principles which should govern its application, and do not think it necessary to enlarge upon the subject. The acts of bribery proved, and the illegal practices committed with the employment of Morreault, ought, I think, to override any majority, nor can it be overlooked that drinking was undoubtedly indulged in to a most reprehensible extent, though the evidence may fall short of proving the commission of corrupt practices in that respect. The Liquor License Act, indeed, would seem to be almost a dead letter in the town of Sault Ste. Marie.

Morreault, Roy, Delargey, and Dargie will be reported.

Mr. Whitney, it is hardly necessary to add, has never condemned the attorney-general because the parties above referred to have not yet been prosecuted and punished, nor has he had one word of censure for the evil influences which were brought into use for the purpose of achieving a temporary victory for one of his lieutenants. He loses interest in the cause of political morality when some party advantage is not to be obtained.—Brantford Expositor.

MUNICIPAL RIGHTS.

Canadian municipalities are greatly interested in the conference which is being held at Ottawa between representatives of the Commons and Senate with a view to arriving at an agreement upon two clauses in the Government Railway Bill that are in dispute. When the Bill, which is popularly known as Mr. Blair's Bill, to avoid confusion with the other Railway Bill, was before the Senate, it was amended so as to provide that local railways should not be declared works "for the general advantage of the Dominion" except in so far as crossings of Dominion roads are concerned and in respect to through traffic. In other words, the Senate declared against the federalising of the roads. The other amendment was to the effect that railways possessing the right to erect poles and convey electric current in cities, towns or incorporated villages, should not have the right to sell light, heat or power without the prior consent of the municipalities. This restriction is of great importance. The Commons declined to accept the amendments and a deadlock between the two Houses has arisen.

LONDON IN A CLASS BY ITSELF

(Chicago Canadian American.)

This is a country of big things, cities included, but a city paper admits that London, the British capital, is in a class by itself. Many a proud and perhaps boastful citizen of this great land, heaves a sigh of despondency as he is obliged to concede the palm in at least one thing to the old land. The sigh is the more heartfelt as he realizes that despite the youth of cities here and London's age, the old city is growing at a pace which puts her youthful emulators but not rivals hopelessly out of any competition. The addition to London's population from 1891 to 1901 was 958,345.

THE BRITISH NOT SO SLOW.

(Manitoba Free Press.)

Some people on this continent who are given to regarding the English as "slow" will probably hear with surprise that while Mr. Balfour was delivering his speech at Sheffield his words were being listened to by a large audience in London 220 miles distant. On the platform of the hall in London six large transmitters were arranged, and to these Mr. Balfour's speech was transmitted over the trunk telephone line between Sheffield and London. The listeners in London "held to each ear a small shell-like instrument," and in this way were enabled to hear everything that was said by Mr. Balfour and the other speakers at Sheffield.

TOOK A STRAW VOTE.

Interesting Experiment in a Restaurant.

An advertising agent, representing a prominent New York magazine, while on a recent western trip, was dining one evening in a Pittsburg restaurant.

While waiting for his order he glanced over his newspaper and noticed the advertisement of a well known dyspepsia preparation, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets; as he himself was a regular user of the tablets, he began speculating as to how many of the other traveling men in the dining room were also friends of the popular remedy for indigestion.

He says: I counted twenty-three men at the tables and in the hotel office I took the trouble to interview them and was surprised to learn that nine of the twenty-three made a practice of taking one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal.

One of them told me he had suffered so much from stomach trouble that at one time he had been obliged to quit the road, but since using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets had been entirely free from indigestion, but he continued their use, especially while travelling, on account of irregularity in meals and because like all travelling men he was often obliged to eat what he could get and not always what he wanted.

Another, who looked the picture of health, said he never ate a meal without taking a Stuart Tablet afterward because he could eat what he pleased and when he pleased without fear of a sleepless night or any other trouble.

Still another used them because he was subject to gas on stomach, causing pressure on heart and lungs, shortness of breath and distress in chest, which he no longer experienced since using the tablets regularly.

Another claimed that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was the only safe remedy he had ever found for sour stomach and acidity. He had formerly used common soda to relieve the tablets were much better and safer to use.

After smoking, drinking or other excesses which weaken the digestive organs, nothing restores the stomach to a healthy, wholesome condition so effectually as Stuart's Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the natural digestives, pepsin, diastase, which every weak stomach lacks, as well as nux, hydrastin and yellow parilla, and can be safely relied on as a radical cure for every form of poor digestion. Sold by druggists everywhere.

THE TOWER OF SILENCE.

Bombay's Gruesome Cemetery and Its Well Fed Vultures.

The Tower of Silence on top of Malabar hill is the prettiest spot in Bombay. There is a circle of concrete walls twenty-five feet high. Inside this wall, six feet from the top, is an inclined floor of concrete, divided into three circles and surrounding a pit. The outer circle is widest and is for the men; the second circle is a little narrower and is for the women; the inner circle, surrounding the pit, is narrowest of the three and is for the children. The center pit is deep and filled in the bottom with sand and charcoal. There are five of these. When a Parsee dies he is laid in one of these. No one ever sees the inside but those who bear the bodies in, and they do not look around, but walk right out. Overhead and perched on the tops of the walls are many vultures. When a body is borne in these vultures swoop down, and in two hours they have eaten it clean. Then the bones are swept into the pit, and the rain washes the circles clean, and the bones in the pit crumble to dust, and the water drains off through the sand and charcoal into the earth. The vultures sometimes become so large and heavy they can hardly fly. They allow no other birds near the place. That is how the Parsees dispose of their dead.

Lying on the Right Side.

When a patient complains of a bad taste in his mouth every morning on waking up, says a physician, the first question I ask him is as to the position he assumes when going to sleep. An immense number of people sleep on the left side, and this is the most common cause of the unpleasant taste which is generally attributed to dyspepsia. If a meal had been taken within two or three hours of going to bed, to sleep on the left side is to give the stomach a task which it is difficult in the extreme to perform. The student of anatomy knows that all food enters and leaves the stomach on the right side, and hence sleeping on the left side soon after eating involves a sort of pumping operation which is anything but conducive to sound repose. The action of the heart is also interfered with considerably, and the lungs are unduly compressed. It is probable that lying on the back is the most natural position, but few men can rest easily so, and hence it is best to cultivate the habit of sleeping on the right side. It is very largely a matter of habit, and the sooner it is acquired the better.

Temperance in Australia.

Temperance and prohibition bulk largely in the latest New Zealand papers. Mahuta, the third and the last of the Maori Kings, who recently renounced his sovereignity and accepted a seat in the upper house, has publicly taken the pledge by way of encouraging native chiefs to do likewise. In the districts around Dunedin, the Caledonian centre and the commercial capital of the colony, some scores of public houses have ceased to exist as such through the operation of the local general election. As this was the big-option poll that accompanied the recent most compulsory closure of public houses in New Zealand history some of the leading dailies sent down some special correspondents to report and describe anticipated "scenes." But editorial foresight was at fault in this instance. There were no scenes worthy of the attention of a picturesque reporter, probably because there was no liquor available as a motive power. The hotels had timed their supplies to last just up to compulsory closing day. Many private houses in these districts are now private hotels, well supplied with liquid refreshments.

QUAINT STATUTES IN FORCE.

Men Who Maintain That There Are More Gods Than One or Receive Divine Inspiration Liable for Three Years.

Were a citizen of Ontario to be told that for asserting or maintaining that there are more Gods than one or for denying the Divine inspiration of the Old or New Testaments, he would be liable to three years' imprisonment, he would be unable to express his amazement or incredulity; yet if he should consult his lawyer, he would learn that such is probably the case.

Such was stated to be the law by no less a personage than the Hon. Robert Alexander Harrison, Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, in 1878.

The grounds for this opinion were that, by a statute passed by our Parliament in the year 1792, it was provided that in all matters of controversy relative to property and civil rights, resort shall be had to the laws of England or the rule for the decision of the same. At that time, an Act passed in the year 1698, the tenth year of the reign of William III., "for the more effectual suppression of blasphemy and profaneness," was still in force. By our statute of 1792, this therefore became embodied in our laws, as affecting "civil rights."

This Act of William III., which is recorded at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, in the quaint lettering of a hundred years ago, has since been repealed in England, but not in Canada: "Whereas, many persons have of late years openly avowed and published many blasphemous and impious Opinions," enacted the shocked legislators, "contrary to the Doctrines and Principles of the Christian Religion, . . . if any person having been educated in the Christian Religion within this realm, shall, by writing, printing, teaching or advised speaking . . . shall assert or maintain there are more Gods than one, or shall deny the Christian Religion to be true, or the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be of Divine Authority. . . . such person shall be adjudged incapable . . . to have or enjoy . . . any office civil or military;" and for a second conviction such person "shall be disabled to sue, prosecute or plead . . . in any court of law, . . . and shall also suffer imprisonment for the space of three years."

Leniency of the Times.

The leniency and mercy of the times is shown by the provision that on renunciation of such "erroneous opinions" within four months after his conviction, he shall be discharged.

The penalties provided by this statute are sufficiently severe to delight the most puritanical spirits.

Another statute which is considered by many lawyers to be still in force here is the Act of Uniformity. This Act recites the "Act for the Uniformity of Common Prayer of Edward the Sixth's Time," which was repealed by "our late Sovereign Lady Queen Mary, to the great decay of the due honor of God," and enacts that the Book of Prayer authorised by Edward the Sixth shall be restored. The vicar or person using any form of prayer or song other than set forth in that book was, for the first offence, to lose his remuneration and promotion for a year, and suffer six months' imprisonment; for the second offence, imprisonment for one year and loss of all "spiritual promotions;" and for the third offence, imprisonment. Thus were discouraged the schismatic tendencies of Anglican clergymen.

The Prayer Book.

The due respect of the masses for the prayer book was retained by a provision that if any person should "speak anything in the Derogation, Depraving or despising of the said book," he shall be liable for the first offence to a fine of 100 marks, for the second a fine of 400 marks, and for the third, imprisonment for life.

The problem of how to get the masses into the church, which is causing endless worry to present-day pastors, was solved in a simple manner by the legislators of Elizabeth's time. By this Act, the people were ordered to attend church "under pain of punishment by the censures of the church." For the benefit of those wicked persons who did not stand in proper awe of the "censures of the church," a fine of 12 pence for each offence was added. As this statute may be still in force in Ontario, citizens prone to slumber while the church bells are chiming on a Sabbath morn, should reform before their sins and the Lord's Day Observance man finds them out.

Teacher in the Backwoods.

At a small school in the backwoods a well-meaning but misguided instructor gave her pupils the task of subtracting 629 from 880,768,889 until nothing remained, as a home lesson. On the way from school the children rejoiced at so easy a requisition, but once at work their rejoicing was speedily turned to sorrow. After working for hours without any perceptible dimunition of the figures the youngsters gave up in despair. Parents then tried, but with no better success. And small wonder. In order to complete the task the number given would have to be subtracted 1,400,300 times, leaving a small remainder. Some indignant parent calculated that, working at the rate of three subetractions a minute for twelve hours a day, the task given the children for an evening's exercise would require a little more than a year and nine months to accomplish. — Toronto Sunday World.
